MARGINAL STOCK TRADING OF BISHOP CANNON IS SUBJECT OF OUSTER CHARGE BY LAYMAN

FEARING CRASH, LEAPS FROM CAR NEAR GRANTVILLE

SKULL FRACTURED, PHYSICIANS STATE

Julius L. DeGive, 58, prominent in Atlanta business and club life and member of a widely known Georgia family, was fatally injured at 10:30 o'clock Saturday night just outside of Grantville, when he leaped from the light sedan in which he was riding and which was about to crash with another car, striking the back of his head on the concrete pavement of the highway and suffering a fractured skull. Carried to the office of Dr. A. G. Williams, of Grantville, in an auto occupied by Glenn Graham and Roy Drake, of that place, passersby, Mr. DeGive died twenty minutes later without regaining consciousness.

J. L. F. Rosenblatt, another well-known Atlantan, living on Iiman circle, who was driving the car in which Mr. DeGive was riding, received only bruises and a shaking-up in the collision.

Details were meager late Saturday night as to just how the accident occurred. According to Mr. Rosenblatt, the other car, which was driven by J. E. Carlton, negro, who had two negro women with him as passengers, had just rounded a curve and mounted a slight rise in the road when the two cars approached. Mr. Rosenblatt's automobile proceeding in the direction of Atlanta and the negro's to the south.

Leaped Into Road.

Mr. DeGive, seeing that a collision was imminent, opened the door of the two-door sedan in which he was riding, according to Mr. Rosenblatt, and leaped to the road, losing his balance and falling heavily onto the concrete. The crash occurred a moment later, the left front wheel of the negro's auto striking the left rear wheel of the Rosenblatt machine, turning the latter around but not overturning it. Mr. Rosenblatt, only slightly injured, got out of his car following the crash and found Mr. DeGive in a dying condition and bleeding profusely beneath the machine.

Although definite blame for the accident could not be fixed at Grantville Saturday night, it was stated that a warrant had been issued for the arrest of Carlton and that he would be arrested pending an investigation of the fatality. He had not been detained at a late hour Saturday night.

Mr. DeGive and Mr. Rosenblatt were returning to Atlanta from a business trip to Mississippi and were on the last lap of their journey when the fatal accident occurred.

Rosenblatt Suffers Shock.

Mr. DeGive's body was removed to the undertaking establishment of J. U. McKoon & Son, in Newnan, only a few miles from the scene of the accident, about midnight. Mr. Rosenblatt, suffering nervous shock in addition to his minor physical injuries, followed the body into Newnan about 12:30 o'clock this morning and planned to come into Atlanta later.

Mr. DeGive is survived by his brother, Henry DeGive; a sister, Mrs. E. M. Horine, of Miami, Fla.; his widow, who before her marriage was Miss Gertrude Westmoreland, the daughter of Dr. Robert Westmoreland, and three children, Mary L. DeGive, J. L. DeGive, Jr., and Robert W. DeGive.

Funeral arrangements have been placed in the hands of H. M. Patterson & Son, and will be announced later.

Julius DeGive was one of the most popular and best-known men in Atlanta, his family having been leaders in the theatrical world of the south for many decades.

Mr. DeGive was the son of Laurent DeGive, who came to this country from Belgium and by energy, honesty and hard work built up a fortune. Un-

1930 Club To Name Officers; Moore Urges Drastic Changes

Use of Greatest Care in Selecting Council Members Advised by Mayoralty Candidate.

Advocating drastic changes in the municipal government and urging Atlantans to exercise the greatest care in selection of council members who can be trusted, Wiley L. Moore, for the past half dozen years a member of council and at present chairman of the finance committee, Saturday released his platform for mayor subject to the democratic primary of June 18.

Another development of the day was the announcement of Alderman J. Charlie Murphy, chairman of the police committee of council, that he would not be a mayoralty aspirant, thus putting himself out of the picture.

In addition to Mr. Moore, former Mayor James L. Key, William H. Johnson, city warden, and Alderman Ben T. Huiet, of the third ward, are mayoralty aspirants.

Alderman Robert F. Pennington and Councilman H. Turner Loehr, of the first ward, announced their candidacies to succeed themselves, and Dr. McIntosh M. Burns, president of the Atlanta board of education, declared he would seek renomination as school commissioner from the seventh ward. The latter three are unopposed to date.

With Saturday's developments it appeared probable that there will be a field of about 60 when the entry lists close at noon Saturday for the 23 posts for which nominations will be made. Thirty already have declared they will qualify.

Outstanding planks in the Moore platform call for a marked reduction in the membership of council, cutting the board of education from its present membership of 14 to 7; placing of every department of the municipal government on a monthly budget basis and forcing every one of them to live within that budget; a continuous audit of all accounts; adoption of every facility known to modern business in order to obtain an economical and efficient administration of the borough's business, and revision of the plan for purchasing city supplies and equipment to eliminate any possibility of fraud or commission splitting.

Mr. Moore's platform also carries a statement that the investigations of the Fulton county grand juries have shown conclusively that under the present antiquated system "ignorance and dishonesty can be covered up to an extent which is beyond conception"—and that "honest and conscientious members of the city government, no matter what their suspicions

Registration Lists Will Close May 19

With only 12,117 qualified voters on the registration lists when the office closed Saturday, it was declared that at least 25,000 of the 50,000 taxpayers of Atlanta should cast ballots in the borough primary June 16 to insure a representative expression at the polls.

Registration will be continued at the first floor of the city hall until 5 o'clock in the afternoon of Monday, May 19, and all those who seek to qualify must do so before that time.

Unless the voter has registered since October 15 of last year, his name is not carried on the lists. The borough does not have permanent registration lists and it is necessary to register each year.

TRIAL OF TAYLOR TO OPEN MONDAY

State Will Seek Conviction on New Bribery Indictment Against Clerk.

The third inning of the trial of Walter C. Taylor, city clerk, on graft charges, will open Monday morning in Judge Virlyn B. Moore's division of Fulton superior court when Solicitor General John A. Boykin seeks to do a Babe Ruth with an entirely new bribery indictment against the veteran city official.

The first round of the Taylor case ended when Judge John D. Humphries disqualified himself from presiding over the trial, and the second resulted in Judge G. H. Howard's sustaining in part a demurrer filed by the defense. In order to correct any deficiencies in the 16-count bribery true bill argued before Judge Howard, the state reindicted Taylor, and it is on this new bill that the clerk probably will be tried.

The Taylor case is the fourth of the grand trials resulting from the investigation by the Fulton grand jury. Ex-Councilman Harry York and his business associate, Jack White, were convicted and given sentences of three years each. W. P. Price, city purchasing agent, was acquitted after a hard-fought trial.

Refreshed by a vacation in Florida, Solicitor-General John A. Boykin is expected back in Atlanta today to take charge of the prosecution. He will be assisted by Assistant Solicitor-General Ed A. Stephens and Special Prosecutor William Schley Howard, who have been attending to the preliminary details of getting the case to trial. During the past few days a number of city officials have been interviewed at the solicitor's offices in connection with the case.

"Everything is in readiness," Mr. Stephens announced Saturday afternoon. "We are ready to go to bat."

Representatives of the state expressed confidence that the solicitor general's office will be prepared to combat any move initiated by the defense, and that the case go into a jury trial without further delay.

It is expected that the defense will introduce a demurrer to the indictment, as well as a plea in abatement attacking legality of the true bill.

Six panels of talesmen have been called for Monday. It is believed that the jury can be selected from three of the panels. All veniremen except those serving in the Taylor case will be available for service in the other divisions of court. As has been the case in other graft trials, the jury will be purged of all veniremen who contributed to any fund to aid the investigation, or who are related to contributors.

The state has summoned more than 60 witnesses, and the defense approximately 40.

Although Taylor has been indicted on other charges—defrauding the city and extortion—it is expected that the bribery bill of 25 counts will be called for trial Monday.

Plans of the defense are being kept a dark secret. Reuben R. Arnold, chief of defense counsel, Saturday night was asked for a statement on the eve of the trial, but declined to make any comment at all.

During the next week or so, the graft investigation by the grand jury will mark time. The newly sworn in body will meet at 10 o'clock Tuesday for transaction of the usual routine business, but probably will not get into the city hall probe, it was said.

Only one new transaction in addition to those in the 16-count indictment found defective by Judge Howard is involved in the 25-count indictment. This is the charge that Qualifications of Candidates Will Be Discussed at Mass Meeting Monday Night.

Election of officers of the 1930 Club and discussion of an entirely independent ticket to be sponsored by the organization in the forthcoming primary will be taken up at a meeting Monday night on the roof garden of the Ansley hotel, it was announced Saturday by Press Huddleston, temporary chairman. An executive committee, consisting of one member from each ward, also will be chosen.

Leaders in the organization urge all those who expect to attend to consider qualifications of voters in their wards in order to be able to suggest the best possible candidates when the meeting comes to order. If the citizens of any one ward are united upon any candidate for office his name may be placed on the list at once. It is expected, however, that it will be several days at least before a complete ticket is made up and announced to the public.

The meeting Monday night of the citizens who are seeking to install an "honest, clean administration for Atlanta," follows hot on the heels of an enthusiastic mass meeting Friday night at the Atlanta theater, when speakers denounced municipal corruption and urged the citizenry to "wipe out the grafters."

All persons who signed pledge cards at Friday night's mass meeting and all others who desire to enroll in the cause will be welcomed at Monday night's organization session, Mr. Huddleston said. Meanwhile, he suggested, "it will be well for those interested in the organization in the various wards to begin casting about with a view of offering suggestions on possible candidates at Monday night's meeting."

Speed Is Urged.

The time is short for selecting the ticket, as entry lists for the primary close Saturday and the club will have to make all possible speed in order to successfully complete its ticket, Mr. Huddleston pointed out. He drew attention to the fact that city registration will close Monday, May 19, and urged all citizens to register in time for the primary.

Walter C. Taylor, city clerk, Saturday announced that thus far only 12,117 persons have registered for the city primary.

The 1930 Club was created formally Friday night when resolutions were adopted at the rally in the Atlanta theater. Cards of membership were signed by a large percentage of those present, signifying their intention to subscribe to the purposes of the organization and to give their support to the cause. The resolutions were offered by C. D. Montgomery. The watchwords of the club are to be "Honesty in Office" and "Efficiency in Service."

Grafters Denounced.

Denunciation of municipal grafters was voiced by Dr. Sam W. Small and other speakers. Dr. D. Witherspoon Dodge, pastor of the Central Congregational church, urged church people to manifest their religion by "striking a note for righteousness and justice." Dr. Horace Grant, president of the Sixth Ward Improvement Club, urged the people to register and vote.

Dr. Small urged citizens to resolve "that we will elect honest, faithful citizens, and place on their shoulders the robes of civic purity." He declared that it would be too long a wait for the people until the verdicts of juries have been reached in more than 20 cases, and urged that "we must go to the ballot boxes and render our verdict now."

Temporary officers of the club, in addition to Mr. Huddleston, include W. W. Matthews, vice chairman, and John Burdine, secretary.

Wets Will Unify Anti-Prohi Groups

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—Formation of a joint elective and legislative council of ten anti-prohibition organizations and the adoption of a plan for concerted work toward the overthrow of prohibition were announced today after a meeting of representatives of the ten groups.

At the same time plans were made for the work of the organizations during the coming congressional campaigns.

The general plan will be announced at a dinner to be held in New York in September, spokesmen for the groups said.

The various organizations represented on it are the Anti-Prohibition Temperance league, the National Constitutional Liberty league, the National Temperance League of America, the Michigan Moderation Union, the American Freedom Association, the Veterans' Modification Union, the Federal Dispensary Tax Reduction league, the Congressional Districts Modification league and the Women's Moderation Union.

Rhodes Memorial Home Opened as Shrine In Which State's Relics Will Be Deposited

With simplicity and dignity, Rhodes Memorial Hall, the future home of the state department of archives and history and the shrine in which will be deposited the relics of the state's illustrious past, was formally opened to the public Saturday afternoon.

Between 4 and 6 o'clock this afternoon, the formal opening will be continued in a reception at the hall, on Peachtree street just south of its intersection with Spring street.

Governor and Mrs. L. G. Hardman headed a group of dignitaries receiving callers at the home Saturday afternoon. Others in the receiving line included Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Rhodes and Dr. and Mrs. L. O. Bricker, donors of the hall; Judge Hal Stanley, of the state industrial commission, with Mrs. Stanley; J. O. Anderson, of the state treasury department; Mrs. George M. Napier, wife of the attorney-general; Miss Ella May Thornton, state librarian; Colonel Robert deT. Lawrence, state pension commissioner, and Miss Ruth Blair, director of the state department of archives and history.

This afternoon the receiving line will include the heads of Atlanta and state historical societies, and the state leaders of patriotic organizations.

Saturday afternoon Miss Blair was assisted in the reception by Mrs. Steve Garrett, her sister, who, with Miss Beverly Wheateroft and Miss Marie Scott, served punch; Mrs. Pearl Moseley Gay, Miss Mary Ella Yancey, Miss Mildred Ham, Miss Elizabeth Barnett and Miss Elizabeth Shewmake.

The Rhodes home was beautifully decorated for the occasion. Flowers and shrubbery were artistically arranged in the rooms of the first and second floors, both of which were thrown open to guests.

Threatening rain held back during the afternoon, and the light was of sufficient clarity to display to its full advantage the memorial window, set into a bay above a circular stair. The window, which illustrates the inauguration of Jefferson Davis, firing on Fort Sumter, the first battle of Manassas, and Lee's farewell to his men, is the central feature of the home and is said to be one of the finest in the south.

In the various rooms of the home relics of the history of the state were on exhibition. They included mementoes of the first founding of the state by Oglethorpe, to relics of recent events. One room was devoted to a collecton of the Old Guard, famous military organization.

A collection of miniatures of notable Georgians proved one of the most attractive features of the opening. Although the state department of archives and history has started a miniature collection of its own, others were loaned for the occasion.

The Rhodes Memorial Home was donated to the state by J. D. Rhodes and his sister, Mrs. L. O. Bricker, to be used as the headquarters of the state department of archives and history. It was accepted by the legislature of 1929.

The plan of the department is to make of the hall a shrine in which will be kept, on permanent exhibition, the relics of the history of the state that come into its possession.

SETTLEMENT NEAR ON FEDERAL SITE

Owners and Government Expected To Reach Agreement Wednesday.

An adjustment of the price asked by owners for the "Thrower" site, selected for the new postoffice, to the figure offered by the government is expected to be made by Wednesday of this week, it was learned Saturday.

No announcement was made, but it was authoritatively learned that as a result of a series of conferences between owners of the property in the last two days, the price asked has been substantially cut, and that the owners and the government are now within $25,000 of an agreement.

The figure offered by the inter-departmental committee on public buildings, it was learned, is $880,000. In the past two days the total asked by the various owners has been cut from nearly $925,000 to less than $905,000.

It is confidently expected by those interested in the sale that the $880,000 offer of the government will be met Monday or Tuesday.

Selection of the "Thrower" site for the postoffice, which fronts 300 feet on Spring street, 426 on Hunter and 250 on Forsyth, was announced by the inter-departmental committee last week. At the same time it was said that the purchase of the site had not been concluded, and the understanding given that it was contingent upon the owners meeting the offer made by the government.

J. H. Taylor, local real estate man, who had been one of those representing the owners in Washington, returned to Atlanta Thursday night, and a series of conferences among the owners began, directed at cutting the price.

Property owners concerned are P. D. Yates, H. H. Dean, Jr., C. H. Johnson, the Breitenbucher estate, J. L. McCord, Annie M. Bateman, F. J. Pike, Emory University, M. L. Thrower and Mrs. T. J. Avery.

22 Hurt in Crash.

NEW YORK, May 10.—(AP)—Twenty-two persons were injured tonight in a rear-end collision of two trolley cars in the Flatbush section of Brooklyn. The front car had struck an automobile and was stationary when the second car hit it. The injured were treated at the scene and sent home.

Atlanta Joins Nation Today In Paying Tribute to Mother

:: CARNATIONS TO BE WORN SYMBOLIC OF THE DAY ::

Whether it be raining or a day of bright May sunshine, Atlantans today join with the rest of the nation in wearing the flower symbolic of a day set aside from all others in honor of mothers wherever they may be—the carnation, red or white. It is Mother's Day.

Everywhere in the city will be seen or heard manifestations of affection honoring motherhood, the flower of civilization itself. In pulpit and in other special services and ceremonies throughout the city the significance of the day will be emphasized; and Atlanta mothers whose sons and daughters are in distant places will know that their own John or Mary is wearing the crimson memento.

Florists Saturday were amply stocked with carnations and roses. Telegraph offices were busy sending and receiving colorful greetings from near and far. Everywhere mothers will be remembered—and themselves will remember.

Thoughts of Missing Ones.

Many of them will not know, and others will know too well where a missing son is today. And will wonder if that son, too, remembers, although somber gray stone walls and cruel iron bars separate him from other sons who walk free with carnations in their lapels.

Out at the federal penitentiary they will remember, these sons who have followed trails that led from the path of law. Thousands will wear their emblem of remembrance—a white or a red rose. These roses will be supplied to the prisoners of the United States prison here through the efforts of Charles N. Walker, local businessman and an active religious worker, who for nine years has made it an annual Mother's Day custom of distributing several thousand roses to inmates of the institution.

At 8:30 o'clock this morning Mr. Walker, accompanied by eight young women—four carrying red roses and four burdened with white ones—will be admitted to the prison auditorium where more than 2,500 inmates will congregate and receive the rose that brings back memories of mother and what might have been if they had only followed her advice.

Stauffer to Speak.

Accompanying Mr. Walker and the flower girls will be Dr. C. R. Stauffer, pastor of the First Christian church, who will deliver a brief sermon on the significance of the day. Chaplain Fred Ladlow, of the prison, will assist Dr. Stauffer, as well as Warden E. C. Aderholt, while Mrs. Walker and the First Christian choir will furnish a choral background.

Ordinarily, it is said, only a small minority of those imprisoned attended Sunday chapel services, but on Mother's Day the auditorium, which seats 2,500, is filled to overflowing with men eager and anxious to remember their mothers. The roses are representative of gifts from nurseries all over Georgia.

Following the prison exercises the Walker delegation will visit patients at Grady, the Home for the Incurables, Battle Hill sanatorium and return to the prison farm No. 2 late in the afternoon, where additional flowers will be given out.

Dr. John White May Be Named Baptist Leader

Nomination of Dr. John E. White, president of the Georgia Baptist convention, for the presidency of the Southern Baptist convention at its session in New Orleans this week, was assured Saturday in a statement issued by Dr. Len G. Broughton, pastor of the Baptist Tabernacle.

Dr. Broughton announced friends of Dr. White from all sections of the southern states voluntarily had pledged support to the Georgia pastor, although Dr. White himself has made no active bid for the honor.

Dr. White, who is now pastor of the First Baptist Church of Savannah, was pastor of the Second Baptist church here for many years and was the principal speaker at the Second Baptist diamond jubilee celebration last fall. He was elected president of the Georgia Baptist convention at its last session.

Dr. Broughton stated that the two ministers who have been mentioned most prominently for the southern Baptist presidency are Dr. White and Dr. M. E. Dodd, of Shreveport, La., a former president of the Louisiana Baptist convention.

The Atlanta pastor will lease Atlanta for New Orleans Monday to attend committee meetings preliminary to formal opening of the convention on Wednesday.

MEMPHIAN TO ASK BISHOP'S REMOVAL FOR SPECULATION

UNFROCKED MEN DEMAND HEARING

DALLAS, Texas, May 10.—(AP)—Fresh reports of charges to be preferred against bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, were heard today at the quadrennial general conference of the church here with Bishops James Cannon, Jr., of Washington, D. C.; H. M. Dobbs, of Birmingham, Ala., and W. B. Beauchamp, of Atlanta, Ga., the new targets of attack.

It was definitely learned that charges would be filed against Bishop Cannon next week alleging marginal trading in stocks and the reports said charges against the other bishops named probably would be brought by unfrocked ministers in their jurisdiction who sought redress.

One of these ministers said he was awaiting a hearing before the episcopacy committee, and intended to get it "if I have to break down the door." The episcopacy committee by tradition meets in executive session.

Captain G. T. Fitzhugh, of Memphis, Tenn., was named as the delegate who will prefer the stock market charges against Bishop Cannon. He said they had not yet been handed the episcopacy committee and declined to give particulars of the charges.

Meanwhile, to enforce the committee's secrecy rule, all charges against bishops were referred to a special subcommittee.

Other charges known to have been filed were those preferred by the Rev. Rembert Smith, of Washington, Ga., against Bishops Cannon, Mouzon, DuBose, and Moore, charging "unwarranted" political activities in the 1928 election. Smith charged specifically that these four superintendents fought Alfred E. Smith, the democratic presidential candidate because he is a Roman Catholic.

The Rev. Smith's charges especially were directed against Bishop Cannon. Two indications led to the belief that Bishop Cannon would be vindicated by the conference. First was the virtual vote of confidence given him by the committee on temperance, in executive session yesterday when the committee voted in the absence of Chairman Josephus Daniels, to indorse his report which dealt with his activities in the presidential campaign. Second was the rousing round of applause which greeted him today when he presented the report of his episco-

NORTH CAROLINIANS VOTE MILDLY DAMP

51 Per Cent Favor Modification or Outright Repeal.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., May 10.—(UN)—Eighteen mountain counties of western North Carolina showed that they were wet this week, but wet by only a small margin. In a poll conducted by The Asheville Times, 49 per cent of the people said they desired enforcement of the prohibition laws. The wets eked out a small lead with 13 per cent for modification and 38 per cent for repeal.

Final returns were revealed tonight, after 10,898 straw ballots were counted. Little difference was shown in dry voting between The Times' poll and that of The Literary Digest, but a strong shift in sentiment from modification to repeal was made evident by the wets.

Much of the damp ballot-casting occurred in the more populous sections. In Buncombe county, where Asheville is located, 43 per cent voted for repeal and 15 per cent for modification. In 13 rural communities, however, more than 50 per cent of the citizens voted a water wagon ticket.

Ballots were further divided, to obtain the relative voting of men and women. The male vote was enforcement, 2,619; modification, 997; repeal, 2,083. The women dry vote was 2,760; modification, 103, and repeal, 1,036. Clergymen and educators were dry, while business executives, lawyers and physicians were wet.

Bank 'Bandit' Killers Draw a Mistrial

FORT WORTH, Texas, May 10.—(AP)—The jury in the trial of John Alsup, charged with the slaying of two negroes after the attempted robbery by the pair of the First State bank of Polytechnic, a suburb, was discharged late today when it reported it was unable to agree on a penalty. The jurors had deliberated 24 hours.

The state's theory was that the negroes, Isaac Tate and George Terrell, were induced by Alsup to stage the robbery so that a $5,000 reward offered by the Texas Bankers' Association could be collected.

Alsup denied this and testified he acted in good faith in shooting the robbers last April 10.

NEW TONIC RESTORED GRAY HAIR TO YOUTHFUL BEAUTY

Hair Was Falling Out and Full of Dandruff, Also Very Gray On Top Worried Her.

I'M REAL BOOSTER FOR LEA'S TONIC

"One of my friends more than a year and a half ago noticed the trouble I was having with my hair and started me using Lea's Hair Tonic and I gladly send my photo and praise of Lea's for it is not a dye, yet restores the hair to its natural youthful beauty," declares the lady whose picture is on the right. Mrs. Elizabeth Naineissy, 221 Grant Street, Perth Amboy, N. J.

"When I started using Lea's my hair was constantly combing out in handfuls and full of dandruff. My hair on top of my head was all gray and did not match the rest at all. Today, thanks to Lea's my hair is its natural color and was freed of all dandruff and not only stopped falling out but I constantly find new and vigorous hair growing, thicker and thicker," continued this delighted user in Perth Amboy.

Any woman with bobbed or long hair can as easily use Lea's Hair Tonic at home. Just a few drops massaged into the scalp with finger tips each night for a few weeks gets the blood tingling, scalp full of new vitality as it were and then gradually, perhaps as slowly day by day as it turned gray, you begin noticing it coming back shade by shade to one of the three thousand shades most becoming to your style and beauty. Once the hair is again its proper shade, as of old, it stays that way and only an occasional application each week or ten days seems necessary to keep nature up on her toes, growing thick, strong, lustrous hair no matter how old one may be. Truly marvelous maybe but no bother and you can defy experts to detect this home treatment. If druggist hasn't Lea's Hair Tonic yet and won't order from his jobber for you, just send dollar bill, check or money order, to Lea Tonic Co., Brentwood, Md., and they pay postage. If dissatisfied after sixty days, money refunded without quibble or question.—(adv.)

School Children of Georgia Busy in Home Garden Plots

Marian Davie, of Winterville High school, Clarke county, lost no time in getting to work on her home garden. She is one of the more than 4,000 Georgia school pupils who are participating in the Health Garden contest.

Health Garden Contest Entries Close With 134 Schools Seeking $1,000 in Prizes.

Four thousand, three hundred and thirty-nine Georgia children, representing 134 schools in 30 counties are actively at work on home garden plots as participants in the Health Garden contest of the Georgia State College of Agriculture and the state department of education, according to final reports received from the contest officials at Athens.

The Atlanta Constitution and the Southern Cultivator are actively cooperating with the state officials in the conduct of the contest and the prizes to be awarded the various schools this fall will be donated by Atlanta merchants. These prizes will be announced in next Sunday's Constitution.

Nearly ten thousand bulletins have been sent out from Athens on the contest and reports from all over the state show keen interest on the part not only of the school pupils but of the parents of the youngsters who are participating in the movement to improve the health of the rural children of Georgia by increasing the production and consumption of vegetables.

Reports from Butts, Decatur and Charlton counties bring the information that every school in those counties have enrolled in the contest, while Clarke county has enrolled all except one. The Hopeful Consolidated school in Mitchell county reports that every eligible pupil is now engaged in growing a garden.

Purpose of the Contest.

A recent survey conducted by the Georgia State College of Agriculture showed that farm families in Georgia use but little more than half enough vegetables to provide an adequate diet. After conference between the officials of the college, Dr. M. L. Duggan, state superintendent of education, and The Atlanta Constitution it was decided to launch the Georgia Health Gardening contest for the chief purpose of improving the health of the state's school children, but also to teach these future owners of the farms of the state, the value of diversification of crops. To the latter end, the county demonstration agents and home demonstration agents throughout the state are actively co-operating. County school superintendents are co-operating in the interest of the pupils in the contest.

The schools are divided into four classes, in each of which will be given cash and merchandise prizes totaling $250. Group 1 is composed of one and two-teacher schools; group two of three, four and five-teacher schools; group three of six or more teacher schools and group four of schools with vocational teachers.

How Prizes Will Be Awarded.

The prizes will be awarded on points as follows:

Group I.

100 Points for per cent of pupils 10 years old and up who have a garden of 400 square feet containing at least 5 vegetables in the spring.

100 Points for per cent of pupils 10 years old and up who have a garden 400 square feet or more, containing at least 4 vegetables in the fall.

100 Points for per cent of pupils with a garden who hand in a health garden record and an exhibit.

50 Points for a school exhibit at the county fair. If there is no county fair, the exhibit can be made at the school house.

Group II, Group III and Group IV.

The rules in these groups are the same as for Group I, except that pupils in the fifth, after Christmas, sixth grades, all year, and the seventh grade before Christmas shall be substituted for "pupils 10 years old and up."

A garden started in the spring while pupil is in one grade will be finished that fall likely in another grade under another teacher.

State Health Garden Contest Rules.

The rules are the same as for the county contest.

There shall be four distinct sets of prizes, one set for each group.

The school within the state of Georgia that makes the greatest number of points in its group will receive first prize; the school making the next largest number of points will place second, and so on down.

In case of a tie, the school that had the largest number of pupils to complete will receive the prize, and the other school will place next below it.

Results of the contest will be given by the school principal or teachers to the county school superintendent and he shall forward a copy to extension vegetable gardening specialist, at the Georgia State College of Agriculture. These results must be mailed by December 15 and the prize awards will be made in January at the annual farmers' conference held at the Georgia State College of Agriculture.

SCHOOL BOARD MEETS ON BUDGET TUESDAY

Several important matters are slated for consideration of the Atlanta board of education at the May meeting of that body Tuesday, it was announced Saturday by Dr. McIntosh M. Burns, president.

Adoption of a budget for operation of the schools for the remainder of the year will be the prime matter under consideration, and a supplementary budget itemizing expenditures carried in the main finance sheet will be furnished by the administration staff.

It is probable that several members will insist on slashing every item possible from the budget in order to prevent closing the schools November 10, the date which under a tentative budget already adopted by the board would shut down the schools for the remainder of the year.

It is certain that a fight will be made to prevent closing of the schools for any period of time.

Bids for coal to be used throughout the system for heating purposes will be received and probably voted on at the board session.

A delegation from the William A. Bass Junior High school has asked Dr. Burns to present a petition asking that the new auditorium of the school be named in honor of J. H. Smith, former principal.

Another delegation from the Inman school will ask the board to increase the number of grades at the school and not to abandon it for school purposes.

More Uncertain Weather Seen For Week-End

Continued unsettled weather, with showers, was forecast Saturday by C. F. von Herrmann, head of the local branch of the United States weather bureau, for today. The temperature, it was said, would range from 65 to 78 degrees.

Saturday's low temperature was 67 degrees, and high was 77.

SAVANNAH CONCERN WILL BE LIQUIDATED

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 10.—(AP)—The liquidation of the Gillican-Chipley Sales Company, of Savannah, distributors of naval stores, was announced Saturday by J. A. Myers, vice president and general manager of the company.

The firm was organized to handle chiefly naval stores from the New Orleans and gulf coast territories. Mr. Myers said liquidation was necessary because of the decrease of production in those territories.

Action of the Downing Company of Brunswick in giving another company contract for its receipts also was a factor in forcing the liquidation, Mr. Myers said.

The liquidation will require probably 30 days. The company ceased offering rosin and turpentine this week and is closing its contracts for deliveries of those commodities.

AIR VIEWS AT CANDLER FIELD

Gene Hinton

Atlanta's campaign to increase patronage of air mail in this vicinity and to bring to light the benefits which have accrued to this city through the aerial mail routes which radiate from it to all parts of the country, will occupy local aviation interests for the next six days, the period from May 12 to May 17 having been designated as "Air Mail Week." In addition to the three air mail operators—represented by John K. Ottley, Jr., of Eastern Air Transport, Inc.; Olin S. Hunt, assistant general traffic manager of Interstate Airlines, Inc., who came here from Sky Harbor to assist in the plans for the observance, and Lee Sanders, divisional manager for Southern Air Transport Inc.—both chambers of commerce have worked hard to make the week a success and civic clubs, theaters, city schools and many commercial organizations have agreed to give their fullest co-operation.

To many Atlantans, one of the most interesting features of the elaborate program which has been arranged will be the flying over the business district of arriving and departing air mail planes. Although the route of none of the lines leads over the downtown sections, the pilots will change their courses on every day during the week and give the public a chance to see a mail ship in action, this policy to be followed at night as well as during the day. As a special concession to the operators in their efforts to make Atlanta more "air mail-conscious," Leo C. Wilson, supervising inspector here for the department of commerce, has given permission to these pilots to cut 500 feet from the 1,500-foot altitude which department regulations demand in over-city flying. Atlantans thus will be given the opportunity of getting more of a "close-up" of the sturdy machines which rush their letters to their destinations.

Ten thousand programs of five Atlanta theaters, dedicated to Air Mail Week and with the "Use Air Mail" slogan printed at the top and bottom of each, will be dropped at 12:30 o'clock on each of the first five days of the week. Programs will be tossed out from a Southern Air Transport plane, and the following schedule will be followed: Monday, Loew's Capitol; Tuesday, Keith's Georgia; Wednesday, Paramount; Thursday, Erlanger, and Friday, Fox. Twenty-five free tickets to each of these theaters also will flutter down on the appropriate day. In adition to this co-operation, eight local theaters will run air mail information and announcements on their screens. Working in conjunction with the chambers of commerce, about 5,000 illustrated leaflets, telling of Atlanta's enviable position in the aviation field and the splendid airmal facilities which are provided the city, will be sent to all parts of the country by local business houses. School children in several grades have been asked by Willis A. Sutton, superintendent, to do their bit to the extent of sending airmail letters to corresponding grades in other cities.

Civic clubs have arranged their programs for the week to include a speaker who will tell them about airmail and its advantages. O. S. Hunt, of Interstate, will be the Civitan speaker Tuesday noon; Joe Duckworth, base manager for Curtiss-Wright Flying Service, will talk before the Kiwanians at their luncheon; Ralph S. Westing, business manager, of Eastern Air Transport, Inc., who will come to Atlanta for the week's observance, is on the Exchange Club program, and E. K. Large, Atlanta postmaster, is scheduled for a talk at the Rotary meeting. Mr. Large also will make two radio addresses during the week, one at 7:15 o'clock Monday night over station WGST and the other at 10:30 o'clock the following night over WSB. Davison-Paxon's elaborate aviation window display, which will be set up today, will include, among other things, a teletype machine, which will tap out for passersby weather reports and other information of interest to airmail pilots.

Air Mail Week, which seems destined for a tremendous success in building up patronage and public interest, is in celebration of the twelfth anniversary of the inauguration of scheduled air mail operations in this country. The epochal initial flight, which extended all the way from Washington, D. C., to New York, was made on May 15, 1918. Since that time the service, especially during the past two years, has displayed a mushroom-like growth. Today there are 25 United States air mail contractholders whose planes fly more than 40,000 miles each day over a veritable network of air lanes extending into every section of the country. Last year air mail planes in the United States flew a total of nearly 16,000,000 miles, a figure which is expected to be increased this year by at least 25 per cent.

Along with the national celebration of the air mail anniversary, Interstate Airlines, Inc., announces from Sky Harbor, Murfreesboro, Tenn., that it will honor each of its mail fliers in a series of Pilots' Weeks, this week starting with Monday, to be designated along their lines as Pilot Larry Harris Week. Approximately 1,000 special cachet letters, each containing a postcard bearing the picture of Pilot Harris and a story about his flying career, will be issued to cover collectors and anyone else desiring one of the special letters, officials said. These may be obtained, it was announced, by sending self-addressed air mail envelopes, stamped, to the traffic office at Sky Harbor.

The following seven-day period, it was announced, will be Pilot Gene Fricks Week. Fricks is chief pilot of the Interstates Lines and director of the Interstates Airlines Flying school at Sky Harbor. Harris is chief flight instructor at the Sky Harbor school and mail pilot on the day shuttle run between Atlanta and Nashville. The week of May 25 will be observed in a similar manner as Pilot Ledbetter Week, while the weeks to follow will honor, in order, Pilots Lawrence Jamieson, Usher Rousch, Joe Hammer, M. D. "Doc" Ator, Johnny Pricer and "Pop" Wise.

Beeler Blevins, of the Blevins Aircraft Corporation, after a hard tussle with the weather, arrived at Candler field shortly before 6 o'clock Saturday afternoon, having taken off at St. Louis in Asa G. Candler's Lockheed Wasp Vega about four hours earlier. With rain threatening throughout this section and with practically no ceiling, Blevins was forced to do some plain and fancy hedge-hopping, but reported that his flight, except for the evil meteorological conditions, was without incident. He is scheduled to leave Atlanta tonight with James T. Williams, Jr., for Troy, Ohio, where the latter's just-purchased Waco "Model F" will be delivered and flown back to Atlanta. Williams' new ship, which is powered with a Warner "Scarab" of 110 horsepower, will take the place of his Waco "165" which was destroyed in the Blevins hangar fire early in March.

Major Luke Christopher, member of the race committee of the National Aeronautic Association, and Ray Cooper, Michigan representative of that body, are scheduled to visit Atlanta this week on a flight which they will make over the route of the All-American Flying Derby, to start from Detroit on July 21. Major Christopher and Mr. Cooper will follow the entire course, from Detroit to Montreal, Baltimore, Atlanta, Shreveport, Houston, Laredo, Monterey, Mexico City, Laredo, Dallas, El Paso, Phoenix, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, Cheyenne, Omaha, Chicago and back to Detroit. The pathfinders will report on flying conditions as they find them, with especial reference to the location of emergency landing fields along the route of more than 7,500 miles.

"An important feature of the work of the pathfinders will be the location of supply stations at various cities at which the race will touch," said F. R. Maxwell, president of American Cirrus Engines, Inc., a unit of Allied Motor Industries, Inc. This company has posted $25,000 as prize money for the race and is sponsoring the event as a contest open to pilots of either sex and any nationality, flying planes of any manufacture, provided only that they be powered with engines manufactured by the Cirrus company.

Atlanta aviation enthusiasts who attend the Monday luncheon of the Aero Club of Atlanta, chapter of the National Aeronautic Association, which will take place at 12:30 o'clock in the Ansley Cave, will be treated to a two-reel motion picture which traces the development of Candler Field from its earliest beginnings to its present commanding position. William B. Hartsfield, one-time chairman of the aviation committee of the city council, will be shown breaking ground for the new airport; Beeler Blevins circles the field and makes the first official landing in a J-1 Standard of ancient vintage; Lindbergh makes Atlanta aviation history by landing in his famed "Spirit," and, finally, the airport lights go on and Candler Field becomes the aerial hub of the south. A distinguished visitor will be Ralph H. Ackerman, American commercial attache at Santiago, Chile. Reservations for the luncheon may be made by 'phoning Secretary W. A. Dunlap at Walnut 2357.

California and New York lead the nation in the number of licensed pilots, planes and mechanics, a study just completed by the aeronautics branch of the department of commerce reveals. California stands first on the list of licensed pilots and mechanics with 2,244 and 1,582, respectively, while New York heads the list of licensed airplanes with 984. New York ranks second on the list of licensed pilots and mechanics with 1,153 and 810, respectively, while California occupies second place on the licensed plane list with 886. Third place for pilots, planes and mechanics goes to Illinois, with 671 pilots, 473 planes and 505 mechanics. The department reports that there now are nearly 12,000 licensed pilots, 8,500 licensed mechanics and more than 6,600 licensed airplanes in the United States. Of the total number of licensed pilots, nearly 200 are women, it was pointed out, and there are four licensed women mechanics.

SPALDING PRIMARY TO BE HELD SEPT. 10

GRIFFIN, Ga., May 10.—The Spalding county democratic primary will be held September 10 along with the primaries in other counties, it was decided by the Spalding county executive committee in session here today. All parties wishing to enter the elections must file their entrance by June 3.

H. J. Garland was elected a member of the committee to succeed Minor Wheaton, who has moved away, and R. L. Duke was elected secretary to succeed Ray White, resigned. P. M. Cleveland is chairman.

C. A. Byars, former Spalding county legislator, has announced for the state senate, and W. H. Beck, Jr., has announced for the legislature. Judge W. E. H. Searcy, Jr., of the Griffin circuit, and Solicitor E. M. Owen are expected to announce soon to succeed themselves.

EZRA PHILLIPS SEEKS POST IN LEGISLATURE

City Attorney of East Point Will Oppose Dr. George Brown, Incumbent.

Ezra E. Phillips, city attorney of East Point, Saturday announced his candidacy for the legislature against Dr. George Brown, incumbent, subject to the democratic primary of September 10.

Text of Mr. Phillips' announcement follows:

"I shall be a candidate to succeed Dr. George Brown as representative from Fulton county in the Georgia legislature in the forthcoming election, subject to the democratic white primary of September 10 next.

"I was born and reared in Treutlen county, Georgia, and came to Atlanta in 1922, after graduating in law from the Atlanta Law School here. Since 1922 I have been engaged in the practice of law in Atlanta. My residence is in East Point in this county. The governing board of the city government of East Point appointed me as city attorney for the city of East Point in January, 1929, and again in January, 1930, in which employment I am now engaged.

"There are a great number of things I desire to do as a representative or to get done.

Some little, some big, but it is needless to try to name here the great number of things I stand for. Of course, if I am elected I expect to try to secure the passage of legislation making the judges of the municipal court of Atlanta and the clerk and marshal of that court elected by the people instead of appointed or nominated by the judges of Fulton superior court. I will try to help simplify the government of both our state and our county, and if possible reform some of our out-of-date law, practice and procedure. At a later date I shall give the people a complete outline of my platform."

MARTIAL LAW RULES RIOTING TEXAS TOWN

DALLAS, Texas, May 10.—(AP)—Governor Dan Moody said at 10:45 p. m. that he had signed the proclamation declaring a state of martial law in Sherman. He said Col. L. E. McGee would remain in command.

Additional troops would not be ordered there unless they were requested, the governor said.

"They will remain in Sherman as long as they are needed," he added.

He said the proclamation was issued upon representations made to him by substantial citizens of Sherman that martial law was needed to clear up mob disorders.

Fourteen arrests had been made tonight by officers in connection with the rioting of yesterday which caused the burning of the court house, lynching of a negro and burning of a negro church and drug store.

At 7 p. m. most of the stores were closed and a fair Saturday night crowd was on the streets, although well scattered.

No charges had been filed against those under arrest, and Sheriff Vaughan said probably none would be placed until feeling had subsided further.

The regular grand jury meets May 19 and there were no indications of a special term.

Full Ticket To Be Offered By Ware County Republicans

Reports were received in Atlanta Saturday carrying the announcement that the republicans of Ware county, of which Waycross is the county site, will offer a candidate for each office in the county, including legislative posts, at the election to be held this fall.

This announcement, made following an enthusiastic meeting in Waycross Friday night of 500 delegates from the 20 counties comprising the eleventh congressional district, was taken in Atlanta as indicating that the republican organization in Georgia will offer a larger number of local candidates this year than ever before. The presence of Clint W. Hager, prosecuting attorney of the federal court in Atlanta, and Henry C. Davis, secretary of the state patronage committee, which is still in charge of republican affairs in Georgia as a result of the failure to name an uncontested state execute committee at the recent convention in Atlanta, confirmed this belief.

Members of the patronage committee who were in Atlanta yesterday declared that the meeting in Waycross and the subsequent announcement were to be considered purely as local developments and not as the first step towards bringing out republican candidates all over the state, but it was considered significant that the Waycross report included information of a joint meeting of the eleventh and twelfth district republican associations to be held in Dublin on June 20. At the same time it was pointed out that the decision of the Ware county committee to present candidates for all county offices will be the first time that such action has ever been taken in a south Georgia county.

WARE REPUBLICANS TO HAVE FULL TICKET.

WAYCROSS, Ga., May 10.—(Special.)—The republican executive committee for Ware county today announced that it will enter a candidate this year for each of the county offices. This is the first county in south Georgia to make such an announcement and the action is creating wide interest.

The ticket will include candidates for what are popularly known as county offices and also for representatives in the state legislature—two in the lower house and one in the senate.

This announcement was made today following the monthly meeting of the eleventh district republican associations last night, Dr. H. J. Carswell, of Waycross, district chairman, presiding.

A district republican convention is to be held at an early date and at this time it is expected that a candidate for congress will be announced.

It is not known yet whether a republican county primary will be held. It may be that a full ticket can be arranged without the necessity of any eliminations by primary vote. If so, the republican candidates will go directly to the general election.

Clint W. Hager, of Atlanta, and Henry C. Davis, of Macon, secretary of the state republican executive committee, were guests last night. A large delegation from the twelfth congressional district was present. Between 400 and 500 delegates from the 20 counties in the eleventh district attended the meeting.

On June 20 a joint meeting of the eleventh and twelfth district republican associations will be held in Dublin.

Work of Policemen Lauded by Citizens

Five policemen were complimented on the performance of their duty Saturday in three letters that were received by Chief of Police James L. Beavers. These letters were read to all watches. Those who were mentioned were Officers Carroll, Warren, Sartain, Maddox and Anderson. The letters were written by Miss Lilly Mae Robinson, H. G. Caruthers and Mrs. Marion D. Glover.

NEW "DRIVES" STARTED

Police To Bar Children Playing in Streets.

Two new "drives" on the part of police were launched Saturday under orders issued by Chief James L. Beavers. The first is to stop children from playing in the streets, as the menace of traffic was pointed out in a letter written by Mayor I. N. Ragsdale. The second was to halt the practice of children shooting at birds with air guns and slingshots, this move being brought about through efforts of the Atlanta Humane Society.

The drive against one-lighted automobiles which was started last Monday saw no arrests Saturday. There were 31 during the week, however, and all were fined $4 except in one instance when the offender failed to show up for trial and forfeited a $7 cash bond.

More Clothes Asked By Salvation Army

With response from more than 300 people to the Salvation Army's "health" week appeal for winter clothing last week, the organization will continue a special collection of warm garments through this week, it was announced Saturday by Ensign Hugo Bloomberg, officer in charge of the social service center here.

The clothing, he said, is needed to be ready for urgent appeals from the city's destitute who will suffer from exposure when the first freezing weather comes next fall unless ample supplies are provided in advance to meet their pleas for help as soon as they are made.

Ban Put on Shipment Of Decayed Peaches

Eugene Talmadge, state commissioner of agriculture, said Saturday that he would use every possible method to prevent shipment of decayed peaches this spring and summer.

He also will rule that the term "orchard run" not be used in connection with shipments, as recommended in a resolution adopted by representative peach growers meeting here Thursday, but size requirements will be entirely disregarded. A grade to be known as U. S. threes will be added as a means of eliminating marketing heretofore known as "unclassified."

Mr. Talmadge said he would issue the order on Monday.

"I have decided to add the grade to be known as U. S. threes, and eliminate the marking heretofore used as "unclassified" over which there is so much contention," he said. "Sizes on the grade requirements also will be cut out.

"With these changes the requirements are fair and equitable. I want to impress the fact, though, that the department is going to be very strict in regard to worms and rotten fruit, and it might not be amiss to make the cautionary suggestion that the peach people get busy with the spray and rid their crops of worms. This department is going to insist that no worms or rotten fruit be shipped this year and branded peaches."

Guest is president of the local association; L. F. McDonald, vice president; M. W. Wise, treasurer, and W. Reid Puckett, secretary.

"COPY BOOKS" ISSUED

Name of Ragsdale Now Printed on Slip.

New "copy books" were issued by the police department to officers Saturday and in the future when a citizen is given a ticket for parking or wandering by a red traffic light he will find that the name of Mayor I. N. Ragsdale is printed on the slip of paper which the officer hands him. On the books in use until Saturday the name of former Mayor Walter Sims was printed, with the name of Mayor Ragsdale stamped thereon with a rubber stamp. It seems that they were printed under the Sims administration and as there was a surplus they were kept in use until Saturday.

Jewish Charities To Report Today On Year's Work

Record of a year of completely rounded social service, including relief for the unfortunate, character-building and wholesome leisure-time training for youth, and free medical treatment for the poor and afflicted, will be reviewed at the annual meeting this afternoon of the Federation of Jewish Charities.

At the same time plans for extension of that service in broader aspects will be presented, with a plea by L. H. Moss, president of the federation, for greater consideration to the problem of youth training and greater facilities in this field. The meeting will be held at the Jewish Educational Alliance, 318 Capitol avenue, at 3:30 o'clock.

E. M. Kahn, executive director of the federation, will present to its members the report of the year's activities, together with recommendation of a complete reorganization of its relief department. This will include in the proposed program for the coming year a development of the social service work of the federation in line with present-day methods, with a staff of case workers and application of all available means for social reconstruction of unfortunates.

The Federation of Jewish Charities, according to these reports, is an organization of comprehensive scope, dealing with every field of social service. Its departments include the Jewish Educational Alliance, which works for youth training and leisure-time direction, as well as providing a branch of adult activities; the Montefiore Relief Association, which is the family service and charity branch; the Morris Hirsch Clinic, a well-equipped establishment for free medical service of every kind, available for persons of all faiths and operated by a competent medical and nursing staff, and the free loan fund, from which worthy applicants of the Jewish faith obtain financial relief at nominal interest.

The Jewish Educational Alliance directs the activities of three Girl Scout troops, a Boy Scout troop, athletic teams of both boys and girls, and cultural activities as well.

Cornstalk Marble Is New Material

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—Corncobs and cornstalks when boiled up in a caustic bath and thereafter compressed and cooled evolve into a dense, coherent and stone-like material which may prove valuable in industrial and electrical service.

The bureau of standards and Iowa State College have been co-operating in the production and experimental study of the new material, which has been temporarily named "maizolith." Maizolith, they conclude, will insulate electrical devices, work into noiseless gears for machinery, and serve all the purposes of compositions now used for making handles, knobs, washers and the like.

To prepare it, the ground corn materials are boiled with caustic soda, washed, beaten, and dried at a high heat. The compound ranges in color from tan to ebony.

Judge Yeomans Hurt In Motor Accident

Judge M. J. Yeomans, of Dawson, judge of the Pataula judicial circuit, suffered a broken arm in an automobile accident near Parrot Friday night, according to information received Saturday by his son, Manning S. Yeomans, state entomologist.

Judge Yeomans will be brought to a private hospital here today. Other occupants of the car, Mr. and Mrs. Ld Stevens, and Miss Sarah Jones, Judge Yeomans' step-daughter, all of Dawson, escaped with minor injuries.

The party was returning from a trip to Atlanta in an automobile. The motor car skidded on the wet road and into a ditch.

The right arm of the judge was resting in a window of the car and it became caught between the car and the embankment. It was broken above the elbow. Mr. Stevens was driving. The fracture was set by a surgeon in Dawson. Others in the car escaped injury.

Have you ever paused to consider that there is not an hour in the twenty-four—scarcely a minute in fact—when the average citizen is not making active use in his home, his clothing, his food, his office or his transportation, either of direct gas service or of some article in whose manufacture gas has played an important part? And, has it ever occurred to you that this fact not only reveals gas as an essential commodity but also one in which the lay investor can place his earnings with the least risk and with the greatest possible assurance of steady and profitable returns? Il Duce Shows Old Fire In Talk to Black Shirts

GROSSETO, Italy, May 10.—(AP)—Premier Benito Mussolini, the foremost Italian orator of his generation, today showed that the fire of 11 years ago was still burning.

The sober statesman who has been absent from the public squares of Italian cities for five years spoke under the hot sun of Tuscan Maytime, and for eight compact minutes held the crowd of 30,000 breathless—his old-time voice carrying to the outskirts of the throng without the effete assistance of loud speakers.

"Black shirts of Grosseto," he thundered. "It was not without motive that I picked Grosseto as the first stop in my tour of Tuscany. I wanted to show my sympathy for your strong rural folk who this morning brought me signs of their devotion . . . . horsemen galloping over the downs beside the train and hearty mothers with their many babies."

With that, local pride swelled and bayoneted carbines were thrust high in the air in the fascist salute, while the entire assemblage shouted "A la la!"

The premier recalled that up to 10 years ago the Maremma district about Grosseto was malarial and deserted, declaring that it was due to fascism that it had become a productive and healthful region.

"And that was without need of senseless political elections," he said. "Fascism is the people and wishes only the people's good. We have already done something but in five or ten years your province will be well on its way. You have pride in your land . . . . stay on it. The demo-liberal times are finished when rural folk were considered of an inferior race useful only in battles of ballots or for the grand tests of war.

"Italians have now returned to their historic position. Fascism has always found its most solid support in the workers of the field. I saw you at the gates of Rome at the time of that unforgettable march when we shook the demo-liberal forces of the world. Now you will always obey my orders. Fascism means moral unity of the nation and is ready for all battles."

Symbolic of the reconciliation between church and state was the formal call paid the premier by Bishop Mattioli, of Grosseto, accompanied by other provincial dignitaries. Mussolini returned the call by a surprise visit to the cathedral.

RHEUMATIC PAIN SOON ROUTED BY SARGON, HE SAYS

Atlanta Man Was Almost Helpless When He Began New Treatment. Ready for Work Again.

"I certainly am thankful for the way Sargon put me back on my feet, and I wouldn't feel like I was doing my duty if I didn't tell others about this great medicine," recently stated

P. C. STERCHI.

P. C. Sterchi, well-known resident of 255 Simpson St., N. W., Atlanta, who was for 26 years connected with the Atlanta Postoffice. Mr. Sterchi is a steward in the Methodist Church, having been an active member for 44 years and for the past 8 years has held his membership in the Nellie Dodd Memorial Methodist Church. His full statement follows:

"Rheumatic pains kept me flat on my back in bed for 5 solid weeks and when I did get up I was almost helpless and had to use crutches. Indigestion came on, my liver became sluggish and I suffered continually from headaches and constipation, and all told, I must have lost 25 or 30 pounds in weight. As soon as I started taking Sargon the rheumatic pains began to loosen their grip. I have taken 5 bottles now, have a hearty appetite, my digestion is fine, I've discarded my crutches and I'm ready to go back to work feeling as well and strong as I ever did. I haven't weighed lately but I'm satisfied I've gained back 8 or 10 pounds of my lost weight!

"Sargon Pills stimulated my liver and gave me perfect regulation. I'll always thank my good friend, Frank Sawyer, for publicly endorsing Sargon, for that's what got me started on it."

The Sargon Man is at Jacobs' Main Store, 48 North Broad St., Grant Bldg., meeting the public and giving the facts about this remarkable new scientific discovery. He cites case after case of Sargon's wonderful powers at work; personal instances of health renewed and happiness restored, right here in this city. Sargon may be obtained at all Jacobs' Drug Stores throughout Atlanta.—(adv.)

W. J. HARRIS EXPLAINS VOTE AGAINST PARKER

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(Special.)—Senator William J. Harris, of Georgia, in a statement concerning his vote against the confirmation of Judge John J. Parker, of North Carolina, declares that "it has been clearly demonstrated that the appointment of Judge Parker was purely a political appointment and made for political reasons."

Senator Harris' statement in full was as follows:

"When Judge Parker's name was first sent to the senate, Southern senators were rather favorably impressed with him on account of his supposed attitude on the negro question, but as time went by it was made clear he is more of a vacilliating politician than a great and upright lawyer. His letter to Senator Overman is an attempted apology to the negro race and in repudiation of statements attributed to him on the negro question in his republican North Carolina campaign for governor. The fact is he was supported by the negroes in North Carolina in this campaign and is now receiving their support.

"I have never knowingly and never intend to vote for the confirmation of any man as a justice of the supreme court who does not rank with the most moral and upright men and whose legal attainments and ability are not the very highest.

"I have always been impressed with the idea of maintaining respect for our courts and holding them up to the high standards they deserve, and since I have been in the senate, made it a rule to advocate and urge for appointment as judges of the federal courts only men of the highest moral character, thoroughly honest and of eminent judicial attainments. At a time when my indorsement was controlling in such matters in Georgia with President Wilson, in the selection of an appointee in the northern district of Georgia, I urged the appointment of that great scholar, Christian gentleman and upright and profound lawyer, Judge Samuel Sibley, the judge who now adorns with great ability and distinction the federal bench in that district.

"I advocated the appointment of the late Judge Alexander King on the circuit court of appeals, than whom perhaps there was no greater and more profound legal mind, or man of more judicial poise and unquestionable character throughout the whole country. I opposed the confirmation of Judge Tilson because he was not a resident of the judicial district he was to serve, and because I doubted his legal experience fitted him for the high position.

"I based my vote against the confirmation of Judge John S. Parker, of North Carolina, on the ground that he is not an outstanding lawyer. There being scores of lawyers in North Carolina with as much ability as that possessed by Judge Parker and many far superior to him.

"These judicial appointments should be made from among the ablest, most honest and outstanding lawyers of the country and especially so as to appointments of justices of the supreme court of the United States, which is one of the very foundation stones of our government.

"This court, in many instances in the past, has been conspicuous in rendering decisions, impartially construing provisions of the constitution and safeguarding the liberties and rights of the people. The court has the power, in passing on laws enacted by congress, to set them aside by declaring them unconstitutional, and, indeed, when an entirely new question arises the decision of the court is tantamount to making a new law.

"It has been clearly demonstrated that the appointment of Judge Parker was purely a political appointment, and made for political reasons.

"For the reasons stated, I feel fully justified in voting against the confirmation of Judge Parker."

Chauffeur Recovers Vanderbilt Diamond

NEW YORK, May 10.—(AP)—A chauffeur picked up "just a shiny lump of glass" today at Jamaica race track and carelessly dropped it in his pocket "for the kids."

A few minutes later Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt came along scanning the ground for a $10,000 diamond stone she had lost. On examination it was found that the "glass" was the diamond. So the "kids" didn't get a trinket, but the chauffeur got a reward.

U. S. AERIAL FIGHTERS READY FOR NEW FIGHT

Maneuvers Scheduled To Start Monday at Aberdeen.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—Air corps fighters, fresh from maneuvers on the Pacific coast, will go on the warpath again Monday.

For a week 18 bombing and attack planes, centered here at Bolling Field, will be pitted against 20 pursuit ships, anti-aircraft batteries, and an elaborate communication system guarding the Aberdeen proving ground, Maryland.

The invaders, under command of Major Hugh J. Knerr, Langley Field, will represent a "red" state which is at war with a "blue" state, whose forces are in command of Lieutenant Colonel Gerald C. Brant. Both officers are native sons of Iowa.

A far-flung net of outposts, linked with the intelligence center at Aberdeen, will be the hope of the defenders to ward off surprise attacks by having its forces ready before the enemy fleet can reach the important airdrome and depot.

The first line, composed of six telephone stations, spaced at five-mile intervals, will be 45 miles from Aberdeen. The second line will be 70 miles away and have nine observation posts spaced at the same interval and equipped with field radio. The final line will be 100 miles away and have 14 observation posts.

Attacks will be made both days and night. Searchlight batteries at the proving ground will seek out the invaders and expose them as targets for anti-aircraft guns.

The exercises will be divided into 17 distinct phases, each of which is designed to determine observation and communication efficiency and develop the anti-aircraft system.

The "red" force will be made up of planes of the second bombardment group, Langley Field, while the "blue" defenders will include members of the first pursuit group, the 67th and 69th coast artillery, the first signal company of the signal corps, and a provisional anti-aircraft brigade intelligence battery.

At the outbreak of the war, "red" planes will be directed against heavy consignments of airplane stocks and material shipped to the Aberdeen depot.

Exercises will begin at 8:30 o'clock Monday morning and continue until 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

MOTHER, CHILDREN AT ODDS OVER WILL

NEW YORK, May 10.—(AP)—A dispute between Mrs. Mary Richards Braman, of New York, and her two stepchildren, Mrs. Ethel Josephine Pomeroy, of Buffalo, and Harold A. Braman, of West Newton, Mass., over a share, estimated at more than $2,000,000, in the Braman estate, was disclosed in a suit filed in the supreme court today.

Mrs. Braman, who filed the papers, is the widow of Chester Elwyn Braman, president of A. D. Juilliard & Company, and officer of other large textile corporations and banks.

Braman's will, probated in Bergen county, N. J., left his residuary estate in trust for his widow and four children. The two named as defendants were born of a former marriage. The others were Lawrence, who died last February 23, and Chester A., Jr., both the children of Mrs. Braman.

Mrs. Braman's suit demands that the Central Hanover Bank and Trust Company, as executor under the will of her husband, turn over to her as sole owner the principal of the trust fund established for Lawrence. The complaint included as a defendant also Chester, Jr., who married Anna Eleanor Roosevelt-Hall, cousin of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Although Mrs. Braman said Chester did not oppose her claim, she claimed her son Lawrence was a resident of New York city, and that when he died intestate, leaving no wife or issue, she took letters of administration and became entitled to his entire estate under New York law.

'Rover Boys' Author Dies at Age of 67

NEWARK, N. J., May 10.—(AP)—The creator of "The Rover Boys" died tonight.

He was Edward Stratemeyer, but to millions of American youths who devoured his narratives, he was "Arthur M. Winfield," or "Captain Ralph Bonehill."

He was 67 years old and had been ill with pneumonia for a week. He was a native of Elizabeth, N. J.

Mr. Stratemeyer wrote his first long story when he was 26. It ran 18,000 words—on wrapping paper—against the advice of his father, who considered it a waste of time. He submitted it for publication. "Golden Days," a Philadelphia weekly, bought it for $75.

A short time later Mr. Stratemeyer gave up his stationery business and devoted all his time to writing.

Wm. C. Wilkinson, Carolina Banker, Dies

CHARLOTTE, N. C., May 10.—(AP) William C. Wilkinson, 64, one of the south's leading bankers, died in a hospital here at 4 o'clock this afternoon from a heart attack.

He was born in Charlotte and lived here throughout his life. When a youth of 16 he entered the Merchants and Farmers National bank as office boy, being promoted to the presidency in January, 1919.

Mr. Wilkinson was a past president of the Southern Manufacturers' Club, president of the Elizabeth Mills, Inc.; of the Lowell Mills, and of the Charlotte Bonded Warehouse Company. He was also sixth district highway commissioner during the entire active life of the commission.

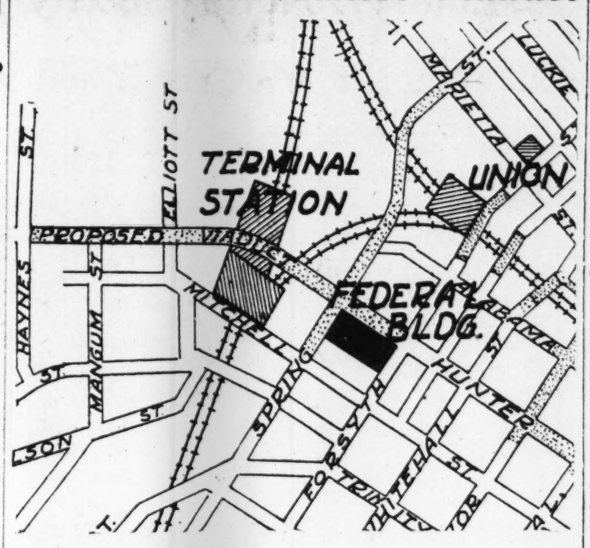

Returning Friday from Old Point Comfort, Va., where he attended a meeting of the executive council of the American Bankers' Association, he was taken directly to a hospital.

Funeral arrangements had not been announced tonight.

Y. The winning production was Anatole France's one-act play, "The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife."

P. O. Site Selection Revives Interest in Hunter Viaduct

Artist's drawing showing projected improvements by erection of a new Union station, a new federal building and construction of the Hunter street viaduct, which was carried in The Constitution December 16, 1928, is shown above. The drawing was published before the site for the new station or the federal building was selected. The new station is now completed and in service, while the government is ready to begin work on the federal building on the site shown in the drawing. Erection of the viaduct is now the only development listed in the sketch which has not yet materialized, and with the realization of the others, interest in the Hunter street project has been revived and plans will be pushed to complete it.

Selection of the site of the new federal building at Forsyth and Hunter streets has caused a revival of interest in a proposed new viaduct extending westward on Hunter street, across the Spring street viaduct and thence to Haynes street, which would give access to a large section of Atlanta, which at the present time is not easily reached by auto.

Location of the new federal building was forecast almost 18 months ago by The Constitution in the issue of December 16, 1928, and at the same time the location of the new Union station was noted by the artist in a drawing of the development of the area showing the projected new bridge.

Erection of the viaduct could be effected now at a comparatively nominal cost, it was pointed out Saturday, because there are no large business houses which would have to be cut or renovated to any great extent to make way for the development.

If, however, the matter is delayed for a long period it might cost many hundreds of thousands of dollars and eventually become prohibitive.

Construction of the bridge has the backing of the Atlanta Improvement Association, one of the most powerful organizations in Atlanta, and several other civic clubs have approved the plan.

The improvement would give a direct traffic boulevard extending to West View cemetery and to the southern and western sections of Atlanta. It also would furnish an uncongested arterial traffic highway into the heart of the business district from the west and southwest, including the Dixie highway, the Bankhead highway and others.

Atlanta's new Union station now is completed, and the federal government, in the very near future, is expected to begin construction of the new postoffice building.

:: PILFERED FORTUNE DWINDLED DOWN TO 43 CENTS ::

MEXICO CITY, May 10.—(AP)—A photograph and a tailor's label tonight remained as the clues by which the authorities believed they had linked the body of an almost penniless man found in an apartment here with the theft of $200,000 in a far-off Canadian city.

The label said simply "The Brown, Stratford, Ontario." In that city the name stands for an attorney and public official who fled with a fortune embezzled from his clients.

A bank book showed that original deposits of $7,500 had dwindled to 43 cents. Persons living as his neighbors said he had spent money lavishly with a handsome young woman who was known as his sister. To these neighbors, to his bankers and to the Mexico customs officials, he was Joseph Thomas Boyd, of Buffalo, N. Y. His entry permit had been issued in New York city.

Brown or Boyd, or "Eric Hauser," as he also called himself to some, lived first in a fashionable hotel. Then his means gave out and he removed to a shabby section.

Presently the young woman disappeared from his life.

When found dead of heart disease he or somebody else had removed virtually all identification excepting a few initials embroidered into handkerchiefs and shirts and the ends of passport cards.

The American consulate, regarding him first as a fellow citizen, took charge of the case. Later, however, D. G. Dwyre, acting consul general, satisfied that he was Brown, asked the British legation to accept responsibility for the body, which was sent to a mortuary firm.

Youth Bound Over In Theft of Taxi

Roger Wing, of Gainesville, 16-year-old student of Riverside Military academy who was arrested here Friday night on a charge of stealing an automobile from the plaza of the Terminal station, was bound over to the grand jury in city recorder's court Saturday afternoon, and his bond fixed at $1,000. The car, he is alleged to have attempted to steal, was in charge of J. R. Pope in the service of a local taxi company.

Guard Kills Man He Is Protecting

PHILADELPHIA, May 10.—(AP)—An accidental shot from a guard's revolver killed Frank R. Lindh, 40, as he sat at his desk in the colonial branch of the Pennsylvania Company for Insurance on Lives and Granting Annuities early tonight. Lindh was night manager of the bank.

James J. Donnelly, guard for a detective agency, said his revolver dropped from its holster and was discharged.

Donnelly was held under a technical charge of homicide.

N. Y. JUDGE CHARGED WITH ACCEPTING FEES

Jurist Now Under Indictment for Using Mails to Defraud.

NEW YORK, May 10.—(AP)—Charges of accepting between $132,000 and $250,000 in legal fees while on the bench and of using artifices to conceal the purposes for which they were paid were laid today against County Judge W. Bernard Vause, of Brooklyn, by United States Attorney Tuttle.

The money was paid to Judge Vause's law firm in 1926 and 1927, Mr. Tuttle said, by the United American Lines "for professional service" rendered in securing for the shipping company leases on three Hudson river piers owned by the city.

Evidence of the payments was found by the federal grand jury which recently indicted Judge Vause and other officers of the Columbia Finance Company on charge of mail fraud.

In a letter to District Attorney Crain reciting the facts as the grand jury had found them, Mr. Tuttle said Judge Vause gave insufficient and unclear answers to questions put to him before the grand jury concerning the payments, their purpose and the disposition of the money.

Judge Vause is free in $2,500 bail on his plea of not guilty to the mail fraud indictment in the Columbia finance case.

15,000 Chinese Slain By Bandit Hordes

SHANGHAI, May 10.—(AP)—In the wake of dispatches reporting the massacre of 15,000 inhabitants of Yungyang in Honan province, on April 23, news was received today that the bandit armies had destroyed 500 villages in central Honan, the inhabitants being "murdered, kidnaped and outraged to unknown numbers, while the countryside was reduced to desolation."

Flames of the burning villages, it was said, lasted four days and could be seen for many miles. Many of those kidnaped were murdered and their mutilated bodies flung into creeks or left in roadways.

The brigands were opposed by nationalist government troops, but only a few outlaws were killed.

The notorious "Widow Chang" was believed to be the leader of a party of 200 brigands. Believed to have become revengeful as a result of the killing of her wealthy husband by bandits, she herself had turned brigand and long had ravaged the country with her followers.

Iron Plates Engrave U.S. Paper Money Now

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—United States paper money is now being engraved from plates made of iron instead of copper, which was formerly the chief metal for fabricating engraving plates. A new process for manufacturing iron engraving plates has been developed by the bureau of standards, and its use is proving more economical than that of copper.

In making the new plates, iron is drawn out of acid solution by electrolysis, and deposited in plate form on the proper surface patterns. When the iron plate is completed, its surface is plated with chromium, one of the hardest among metals, to resist the wearing effects of long service in the printing machines.

Georgian Is Appointed Chief Boiler Engineer

Edwards R. Fish, native of Georgia, has been elected chief engineer of the boiler division of the Hartford (Conn.) Steam Boiler Inspection and Insurance Company in recognition of his widespread reputation as an authority on boiler design and construction as well as his leadership in the field of power engineering.

Born at Stone Mountain in 1870, Mr. Fish received his early technical education at the St. Louis Manual Training school, and later graduated with the degree of mechanical engineer at Washington University. Long a member of the boiler code committee of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, Mr. Fish is chairman of the sub-committee on unfired pressure vessels. He also is a member of the society's power-test code committee and chairman of its sub-committee on boiler testing. He is former president of the American Boiler Manufacturers' Association and is now a director of the American Uniform Boiler Law Society as well as a past member of the council of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

In commenting upon the selection of Mr. Fish for the new post, George H. Prall, editor of The Locomotive, technical journal, says:

"For some reason or other, Georgia seems to have given us some of our best boiler engineers. Sherwood F. Jeter, whose death in December, 1929, deprived his company of its vice president in charge of engineering, was born in Columbus, Ga., and was educated at Georgia Tech."

Don K. Johnston Announces As Legislative Candidate

Opponent of Luther Still Indorses Proposal for Sweeping Revision of Atlanta Government.

Endorsing the proposal for a sweeping reformation of the local city government and declaring that if elected he will work for legislation providing adequate compensation for city and county school teachers, Don K. Johnston, prominent Atlanta attorney, Saturday announced his candidacy for the state legislature from Fulton county to oppose Luther Still, labor incumbent, in event the latter offers for re-election.

Announcement of Mr. Johnston's candidacy is the second thus far to be made for seats representing Fulton county in the lower house of the general assembly, Jo Johnson, also a local attorney, recently having announced his intention to run for the place now held by Miss Bessie Kempton, veteran woman member.

Mr. Johnston was born in Cartersville, but has lived in Atlanta and its vicinity the major part of his life. He was educated in the public schools and studied law in the offices of the late Judge N. L. Hutchins, prominent Lawrenceville attorney.

Shortly after the court of appeals was established he came to Atlanta and entered the offices of Charles D. Hill and after a short time was appointed as assistant solicitor-general, which office he held until Mr. Hill's death. Since that time he has practiced law in this city.

Mr. Johnston resides at 1267 Morningside drive, N. E., where he has lived for several years. He is chairman of the board of deacons of the Morningside Presbyterian church.

In announcing his intention to enter the forthcoming primary as a legislative candidate, Mr. Johnston issued the following statement:

"I favor the election of municipal court judges, marshal and the clerk by the people of Fulton county.

"I favor the consolidation of the offices of the tax receiver and the tax collector which will result in a very substantial saving to the county.

"I shall devote my time and energy to see that such legislation is passed as will assure just and adequate compensation to the school teachers of Atlanta and Fulton county.

"I shall prosecute such legislation as will bring about a reformation in the government of city affairs."

DON K. JOHNSTON.

Mr. Arnold is assisted in the defense by Lowry Arnold, Sam D. Hewlett, Paul Carpenter, B. P. Gambrell and Joe Ewing.

WALTER C. TAYLOR'S TRIAL STARTS MONDAY

Taylor received $3,000 from J. H. Ewing, Jr., for using his influence in securing passage by council of an ice scoring ordinance.

Other counts in the bribery indictment follow:

Counts one and two, payment of $400 to ex-Councilman C. G. Allen for using his influence to obtain permission for the Georgia Power Company to remove its tracks on Central avenue, and payment of $200 to Allen for his influence in a Capitol avenue paving project.

Pool Room Deal.

Counts three, four, five and six, receipt of $250 and $100 from A. P. Calhoun for interesting himself in adoption of a pool room zoning ordinance.

Count seven, payment of part of the money received from Calhoun to Alderman J. Allen Couch.

Counts eight and nine, receipt of bribe money from Fred C. Woodall, acting for R. L. York in the matter of issuing a pool room license.

Counts 11, 12 and 13, receipt of bribes of $300 from Jake Jacobs, acting for Solomon Phiba; $200 from A. Pizanti, and $50 from Jesse L. Prattes for using his influence in obtaining licenses to operate pool and billiard tables.

Counts 14 and 15, receipt of $50 from Carl Witt for using his influence in obtaining permission for Witt to excavate under a sidewalk.

Counts 17 and 18, receipt of a bribe from C. C. McGehee for using his influence in putting through a zoning ordinance.

Count 21, payment of part of the Roane money to York.

Counts 22 and 23, payment of $1,000 to ex-Councilman Charles M. Ford in the Perkerson Park deal.

Where two or more counts in the indictment involve the same transactions, the extra counts were obtained to overcome any objections which might arise, the counts involving the same transactions merely being worded differently.

Trial of Taylor was called first before Judge John D. Humphries, who had presided at the convictions of ex-Councilman Harry York and York's business associate, Jack White, a broker. Judge Humphries disqualified himself in the Taylor case when it was revealed that his brother, Joseph W. Humphries, is a member of the City Club of Atlanta, which contributed to the grand jury investigation resulting in Taylor's indictment.

The case was then turned over to

Moore's Statement.

"To the Citizens of the City of Atlanta:

"When I made my announcement for mayor a few days ago I stated that at a later date I would issue a statement to our citizens, setting forth fully and frankly the policies I would espouse should I be chosen to this honorable and most responsible office by the people of the city of Atlanta. This is as it should be. A candidate for public office should consider it a privilege to take the people into his full confidence by giving expression to the views he entertains about the administration of public affairs.

"For the past six years I have been a member of the city council of Atlanta, and during that entire period I have been a member of the finance committee and am now the chairman of that important committee. Those of my colleagues who joined with me in effort after effort to place the affairs of our city on an up-to-date business basis, adopting modern business principles to increase efficiency and decrease wasteful expenditures, know that the few of us who advocated such a policy received but little co-operation and were in a hopeless minority.

"The system under which we are attempting to operate a modern city is obsolete and antiquated. Loose and inefficient. Cumbersome and unwieldly. Practically speaking, there has been no co-operative effort on the part of the general council in years to bring about a change from the slip-shod business methods in conducting the affairs of the city of Atlanta.

Increasing of Assessments.

"If money has been wasted or unnecessary extravagance has been indulged in, council has invariably pursued the course of least resistance, to wit, increasing assessments upon our property and ferreting out some new line of business to tax, that revenues might be increased and thus pay the price of inefficiency. Let me be absolutely frank with the people of this great city. No one man can bring about the needed reforms in our city government. It is up to the people. Unless council is composed of clear-thinking patriotic and conscientious men who have in mind and heart the welfare, reputation and prosperity of this wonderful city we might as well throw our hands up in despair. This, of all times in the history of Atlanta, is the time to cast aside personal preferences and political factionalism and choose wisely those whom you shall trust to serve you.

"No man could have more interest in the future of Atlanta than I. Here it was that I cast my lot by entering into my career as a businessman. It was here that I built up a business from inconsequential proportions to a business the annual output of which is over $40,000,000. I make this statement, I hope, with pardonable pride. It has been accomplished by the application of business methods inaugurated by me, the cornerstones of which were honesty, efficiency and economy. These same principles I shall carry into the mayor's office should the people of Atlanta honor me with their votes.

"I am persuaded from my experience in council, and am firmly fixed in my conviction, that the legislative branch of the city government as now constituted is too large, unwieldly, and is not responsive to the will of the masses of the people. There is too much opportunity, in a body so large, to shift responsibiilty, and I shall favor by a proper referendum to the people a reduction in the number of those composing the legislative branch of the city government; so that the people will be able to fix definitely responsibility for unfaithful or inefficient service, as in all large bodies charged with legislation and having power to tax and appropriate money a majority is generally more interested in the expenditure of money than in the conservation of the funds coming into the treasury of the city. There is no question in my mind that a smaller legislative body will result in a great saving to the people of the city of Atlanta, as the business affairs under the administration of such a body would be more conservatively handled and would have a tendency to economy rather than extravagance, which would mean a great saving to the taxpayers of the city.

Budget System Advocated.

"In the event of my election as mayor, it is my intention to place the city of Atlanta in all of its departments on a strict monthly budget system. By way of explanation: Instead of allocating all money for the various departments in January, at which time the departmental finance sheets are made up, I shall urge that these allocations be made up for a period of one year based on monthly budgets, controlling expenditures by the month. Under this system an accurate check can be obtained at the end of each month, of expenditures and balance. Under the present system which we have operated under for years, all funds for the different departments are allocated in January of each year, and are made on a one-year basis, and usually these funds are expended during the first six months of the year, because such expenditures are improperly supervised. Then when the June finance sheet is made up, invariably the heads of departments come up and ask for deficiency appropriations to run for the balance of the year. In the event these additional funds are supplied amply sufficient to run through the balance of the year these additional funds are entirely exhausted by October or November, and it becomes necessary for the heads of departments to reduce their forces, thus forcing large numbers of faithful employes out of employment for one, two or three months in each year. Under a properly adjusted and intelligent monthly budget system all of this unnecessary unemployment and gross inefficiency could and would be avoided, and each department would have ample funds to operate efficiently each month in the year. It will also be my plan to have a continuous audit for all departments of the city government instead of yearly audits as is made at the present time; with a continuous auditing system any irregularities in any department will be picked up at once.

"If I am elected mayor it is my purpose to fix departmental responsibility. Under our present system many of the heads of the departments of our city government are only so in name and not in fact. It is impossible to have efficiency in the various departments when they are dominated by political committees. During my official connection with the city I have never had in city positions a single relative or close friend. It is practice I fully approve and advocate. This practice has grown in our city government until it has become a menace to responsible government. I am unalterably opposed to such practices. It breeds corruption as well as inefficiency. Departmental heads should be held strictly accountable to the people for every dollar entrusted to them to be used for benefit of the people, and they should be made to exact an honest day's toil from every employe in their department. At the end of each month they should be required to render an itemized statement of every penny expended during the month, that the mayor and comptroller may check the same against their budget for that month. As the system is now, the wildest sort of extravagance and waste may run over periods from January to June and from June through December without an accurate check-up on expenditures being obtained.

School Situation Scored.

"The notorious publicity that has been given the public school system of Atlanta for the past several years has been a source of much humiliation to the patriotic men and women of Atlanta. The threatened closing down of our schools every year, the lack of funds to pay our teachers' salaries, are most hurtful to the reputation of our great city. It is indefensible. Lack of intelligent and business-like administration of our school system is responsible for the existence of such a condition. If I am elected mayor I shall advocate with all the force I possess, placing the board of education on a monthly budget system, allocating so much per capita for each child actually enrolled in the public schools. The parents and taxpayers would know exactly what it costs per annum for each child in the system, and the board of education would have to live within this monthly budget, and under this plan there could be no such thing as our schools closing down during the term and our teachers going unpaid in the last months of the year. Such conditions as now exist in our school system are unnecessary, if business principles are adopted in this all-important branch of our city government. To allow these chaotic conditions to longer exist is demoralizing to our children, unfair to their parents and unjust to hundreds of unselfish men and women engaged in training the minds and moulding the characters of the future citizens of this great city.

"Should I be elected mayor I shall ecommend that legislative authority be obtained to reform the board of education as it now exists. There is no doubt in the minds of the people that under the present system that the board has become too large and unwieldy and has had a tendency to decrease rather than increase business efficiency. The members of this board should be elected by the people, should consist of not more than seven members. In such a board there would be the elimination of much political log-rolling in our school system which reduces the high standard of educational opportunity the children of Atlanta are entitled to.

"The successive grand juries composed of high class, outstanding citizens of Atlanta and Fulton county, have condemned in unmistakable terms the antiquated and unsatisfactory and unbusiness-like administration of city affairs. This investigation may have cast much odium upon our city, but in the end it will result in incalculable benefit to our beloved city. It has had the effect of awakening the people to the existence of a system that has been condemned as obsolete and unnecessarily expensive by every intelligent business man who has sat in council for the last 20 years, and it has demonstrated that ignorance and dishonesty could be covered up to an extent that is beyond the conception of honest men and honest women. After several months of patriotic service of these grand juries they have brought to light conditions that the honest and conscientious members of the city government, no matter what their suspicions may have been, knew nothing of what was disclosed by the grand juries.

Purchasing Revision.

"It shall be my purpose and plan to inaugurate a system for the purchase of supplies for the different departments of government that will make graft and rebates to any unscrupulous and dishonest city official or employe almost next to impossible. To permit departmental heads to indiscriminately draw requisition for purchases on the purchasing agent on all purchases under five hundred dollars without a check on the necessity or wisdom of such purchase is the height of business folly, and measures will be advocated by me that will put an end to such unrestrained authority on the part of any department or purchasing agent of the city in the future. Open and fair competition in all purchases by the city must and will be exacted under my administration, should I be elected. All honest business men should be invited to bid for the city's business and should be protected from any dishonest or unscrupulous dealer who may attempt to share in his legitimate profits.

"In conclusion, let me say to the men and women who shall participate in the election on June 18: I am not, and never have been, aligned with any faction or any interests seeking special privileges at the hands of the city government. I shall not ask a single penny in contributions from any clique or ring, or corporation having dealings with the city, or otherwise. I shall pay every dollar of my campaign expenses from my own pocket. I shall go into office, if elected, free from any influence, untrammeled and absolutely independent. The only incentive moving me to enter the race for mayor of this great city is a laudable ambition to be of service to all of the people. I have already dealt fairly and impartially with the working man and capital as my records in council will show.

"Since I have been a resident of Atlanta, I have striven to be as useful to the community as my ability would permit.

"As a member of council I have tried to be faithful and efficient. In my every word and vote I have endeavored to be fair and righteous in my dealings with all classes of our citizens, and should I be honored with your vote for mayor of this city, I shall endeavor with the guidance and help of God to make Atlanta a mayor whom you will have no cause to regret having trusted with the exacting responsibilities of this high office.

"WILEY L. MOORE."

Points to Record.

"I am running for re-election on my record of efficient, faithful, honest service," Mr. Pennington declared in making known his intention to re-offer. "That record is an open book and I invite the people of Atlanta to scrutinize it before casting their ballots in the primary."

Thus far, Mr. Pennington is unopposed.

Ed. L. Almand, who announced several days ago for council from the third ward to succeed Charles L. Chosewood, who has declared he will not offer again, issued the following statement Saturday.

"I have entered the race for councilman from our ward after much thought and a great deal of study and I want you to know that I am sponsored by no person or group of people and I am taking care of all expenses out of my own funds.

"I think it is the duty of every citizen of required age to register and vote and investigate each person for whom they vote. I am willing to abide by your decision after you have investigated my principles and my past life and if you do not feel that I am qualified to fill this office it is your privilege to vote against me.

"If elected I intend to go into office without a promise to anyone, but promise all I will do my best to render clean, honest and efficient service."

Mackey Makes Statement.

John C. Mackey, candidate for alderman from the tenth ward in opposition to the incumbent, G. Everett Millican, issued the following statement:

"I am Atlanta born, having resided here my entire life. I have never before offered for public office. I have nothing to sell Atlanta, but stand ready to give Atlanta, her people and the people of my ward my best efforts and thought for a clean, honest and economical business administration of the municipality's affairs.

"In solicitation of the voters' support, I pledge them that my every act, advocacy for or against any measure that may arise in the general council of Atlanta, in event of my election, shall be governed by the strictest honesty, and I promise that no person or citizen shall have cause to complain. I intend to keep my character and reputation above reproach.

"My slogan shall be to represent the best interests of the people of Atlanta, by giving to the taxpayers a better, and cleaner government.

"I advocate reduction of taxes, and will do all within my power to aid in lifting the burden of taxes from the people in every manner possible.

"I am aggressively opposed to allowing our public schools to suffer, but simultaneously demand that the school department remain within the limits of its financial budget each year.

"I will do all within my power to see that the school teachers receive their salaries regularly and without any decrease. I am devotedly opposed to limitation of school terms.

"I believe in every person receiving proper compensation for their services, but am against creation of jobs for anyone to satisfy political obligations at the expense of the taxpayers' money.

"I believe in contracts being let to contractors who live in Atlanta, and who have aided in building the city. I believe in making purchases with home merchants and not with merchants who are not in any manner interested in Atlanta's welfare, but are only interested in getting out of Atlanta all that they are able."

Loehr's Statement.

"I am offering on my record of constructive public service," Councilman Loehr declared Saturday. "I feel that this record entitles me to another term, and ask the voters of the ward to investigate before casting their ballots.

"During my incumbency I have done my best for the advancement of Atlanta's educational system," Dr. Burns declared. "We have many problems, but we are living within the budget set up by council for operation of the school system, and will continue to do so if the board will support my policy, which has been one of rigid economy.

"At the solicitation of a large number of my friends, I have decided to offer for the post again."

Dr. Burns is one of the most popular and efficient members of the board, having been elevated to the presidency after the retirement of George W. Powell, by unanimous vote of the board.

In addition to the mayoralty aspirants the following have announced for various positions:

pacy. Each bishop offered the report for his four-year administration and Cannon's reception far overshadowed those accorded his colleagues.

Limit Bishop Terms.

The bishops will be the center of another controversy when the conference reconvenes Monday. Just before the close today Dr. G. C. French, of Denton, Texas, proposed an amendment to the constitution which was under consideration, limiting bishops' terms to eight years and disqualifying them for re-election until they had been out of office for four years. Several seconds to the amendment were shouted from the floor, but discussion was deferred by adjournment. Attempts to curtail the power of bishops in assigning ministers in annual conferences met with decided reverses in the conference when it voted down proposals to adopt the "open cabinet" policy and to require one-third of the presiding elders of a district to concur in the appointments.

The task of considering the proposed written constitution as recommended by a commission appointed by the Memphis conference four years ago was only half completed and it was predicted a vote on acceptance or rejection of the perfected document would not be reached before the middle of next week. The College of Bishops regarded it as the major piece of business to come before the quadrennial conference.

Advocating an "open cabinet," Dr. W. P. King, of Nashville, Tenn., said the present system of assigning ministers to pastorates "was unfair, unbrotherly and unnecessarily discriminatory." He deplored that the Methodist Church, South, represented what he called "a little section of Christendom, carrying out a worn-out, obsolete system." He said the "open cabinet" principle would assure all preachers being treated "fairly and equally."

Atlantan Loses Point.

T. D. Ellis, of Louisville, Ky., told the conference that there was nothing to prevent bishops from consulting ministers before assigning them and that some were now practicing the "open cabinet" plan. He declared some bishops who had formerly favored it now were against it after having experimented.

The conference voted overwhelmingly against adoption of the principle.

It voted equally as decisively against the proposal of Dr. A. M. Pierce, of Atlanta, Ga., that a presiding bishop obtain concurrence by a one-third of the presiding elders in the district affected in his assignment of pastors. J. L. Decell, of Brookhaven, Miss., said in many instances bishops made appointments only with the approval of all the presiding elders of the district.

Addressing his remarks to an effort to reconsider action of yesterday in amending a section of the doctrinal standards, Dr. F. J. Prettyman, of Baltimore, Md., told the conference he hoped it would "put something in that has life and not shy off and put nothing in." The conference voted not to go back over ground previously covered.

Dr. Walter Anthony, of Savannah, Ga., opposed to adoption of a written constitution of any kind, said the real question was whether the Methodists wanted a constitution and not a question of "orthodoxy or loyalty to Methodism." He said consideration of the constitution section by section was costing much time and money and tried again to get action on the document as a whole, but was ruled out of order by Bishop John M. Moore, of Dallas, presiding.

Record Highway Building Year Is Seen for Georgia

Eleven-Million-Dollar Program Announced by Barnett; Repairs To Cost 2 to 3 Millions.

With highway construction projects totaling between $7,000,000 and $8,000,000 either under way or soon to be contracted for, and an $11,000,000 program announced by J. W. Barnett, highway board chairman, the situation is declared the most optimistic in years.

Estimates of the total revenues of the department for the year run as high as $20,000,000. Ten millions of dollars is seen as the revenue to the department from the gasoline tax; $4,500,000 from the sale of automobile licenses, and $5,300,000 in federal aid fund from the government.

William B. Harrison, comptroller-general, is expecting the gasoline tax revenues, which have been running at more than $1,000,000 a month through the winter, to exceed $1,250,000 in the summer and fall. Receipts of $15,000,000 during the year are expected.

Two-thirds of the tax, which would net $10,000,000, are allocated to the highway board.

Mr. Barnett this week announced that $11,000,000 would be spent in the construction of roads this year. Another $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 will be expended in maintenance.

The highway department at the beginning of the year found itself handicapped by outstanding debts. Colonel Sam Tate, chairman of the board at that time, withheld expenditures until all outstanding debts were paid, putting the department in a position to go forward with an active program before retiring.

JULIUS L. DEGIVE KILLED IN ACCIDENT

When he came to this city Atlanta was poorly supplied with places of entertainment and few attractions of merit made this city a point of stop.

Recognizing the need, Mr. DeGive bought a site on Marietta street, between Broad and Forsyth, and turned the building there into a theater. It was known for years as DeGive's opera house. It became the home of the legitimate, and the best known stars of history appeared behind its footlights. Later on when the house was used for other attractions it was known as the Columbia, and last of all, the Bijou. Finally it gave way to office buildings.

Built Grand Theater.

Later Mr. DeGive built the Grand theater on Peachtree, at that time the largest and most modern theater in the country. Its opening was a notable event. And for years the Grand was the seat of all legitimate shows. At the time it was built there were many people who said that DeGive had a white elephant on his hands. Time proved them wrong.

After that the DeGive interests built and operated with Jake Wells for a while the Lyric theater, which several years ago was torn down and supplanted by the Atlanta Athletic Club.

Julius DeGive, the son, graduated from Georgia Tech in the first class of mechanical engineering. Ever since his graduation he had charge of the mechanical end of the theater business. When the Grand was built he had an active hand in the work, supervising plumbing, lighting and other details. He was a member of the Capital City and Atlanta Athletic clubs.

For a number of years he has been practically retired, his only interests being in connection with the DeGive Investment Company, in which he was a partner with his brother, Henry DeGive, Belgian consul to Atlanta, who succeeded his father to that honor.

CHARLOTTE OBSERVES WEEK OF ANNIVERSARY

Charlotte's Specialty Shop, at 220 Peachtree street, one of the first establishments of its kind to locate in the new business section of Atlanta, will celebrate its third anniversary this week, in view of the success it has attained, with an exceptional selling event.

Considered one of the fastest growing specialty shops in Atlanta, the expansion of the establishment is regarded as remarkable. When the shop was originally opened it offered ready-to-wear exclusively, and now the lines include in addition shoes, millinery, hosiery and jewelry.

With the additional lines featured and the big expansion in business, more space became necessary and the shop was recently enlarged to double its original size. The management is highly optimistic as to the future possibilities of the concern.

Extensive preparation has been made for the anniversary observance, Charlotte says, and many unusual values will be offered, this being by far the biggest selling event the store has ever sponsored. The merchandise that will be offered is in keeping with the store's slogan, "Always Pleases Her," Charlotte declares.

IRON FIREMAN PROVES POPULAR IN ATLANTA

Automatic Coal Burner Holds Big Advantage Over Hand-Firing.

The Iron Fireman, automatic coal burner, is proving unusually popular in Atlanta and vicinity, according to J. F. Baxter, of the Automatic Coal Burning Corporation, local distributor, and all installations, both in large buildings, business blocks and private homes, are reported to be giving satisfactory service.

Iron Fireman users throughout this country and Canada are cutting their fuel costs from 15 to 50 per cent, Mr. Baxter says. According to data compiled by the company, average savings of $493 in annual fuel costs, or practically one-third, are reported by 392 typical users of industrial sizes, and average annual savings of $50 in fuel costs alone are reported by 105 typical home owners.

"Non-agitated forced underfiring, which is the scientifically sound method of firing, is the principle on which the Iron Fireman operates," says Mr. Baxter. "It makes the firebox temperatures 500 to 1,000 degrees hotter than with hand. The Iron Fireman burns the smaller sizes of coal, which cost less. It effects drastic savings in the fuel bill, reduces plant operating cost, eliminates smoke, saves labor costs, gives steady, even heat and boiler pressure. Coal is fed to the fire from below in a continuous stream, a forced draught introducing air in the proper proportions, and volatile gases that ordinarily escape are distilled off the coal and consumed by the flames."

Boyhood Ambition Realized By Veteran City Detective

BY T. K. JONES.

Thirty years in a melange of gunfire and shrieking sirens have failed to weaken the boyhood ambition of a veteran Atlanta police officer, and today, at the age of 62 years, Detective Lieutenant William Howell Andrews envisions the realization of his dream, "lots of chickens and a nice, quiet place in the country."

Surrounded by more than 125 prize leghorns in the backyard of his home at 458 West Ontario avenue Saturday the beloved policeman—whom Chief James L. Beavers has called one of the most loyal he ever knew—told reporters that he planned to retire from the department on a half-pay pension January 1, 1931, and move to a rural location "not too far from the city where the remainder of my days can be spent as I have always wanted to spend them—in poultry farming."

"I can't have the freedom and space I want here," he declared. "so I started to prepare for the 'big venture' seven months ago by buying quite a few baby chicks, and since that time I have gathered more than 17,000 eggs right here at home in addition to having sold many chickens."

A complete daily record is kept of all "deaths," and improvements on his chicken houses, the number of eggs received, et cetera, and from a financial standpoint the lieutenant can tell at a glance just how much "money he has made since October."

"Of course when I move into the country away from my little urban farm," he said laughingly, "I then will be in the business on such a large scale that a record clerk may be needed."

Announcement of the popular officer's coming retirement caused widespread expressions of regret at headquarters.

H. MENDEL & COMPANY OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY

Wholesale Dry Goods Concern Celebrates 30 Years of Success.

H. Mendel & Company, one of the leading wholesale dry goods and ready-to-wear houses in the southeast, this week will observe the 30th anniversary of the founding of the business.

The company was established in 1900 by H. Mendel, the president, and has had a steady and substantial growth. A policy of service to the trade, inaugurated at the beginning, has been rigidly adhered to ever since, Mr. Mendel says, and to this he attributes the success of the establishment.

Associated with Mr. Mendel in the business are Sol Romm, vice president, and S. I. Mendel, treasurer, who personally do all the buying. In keeping with Atlanta's position in the trade, every effort is made to obtain goods simultaneously with any other point or before.

Only merchandise of known quality and nationally advertised is handled by Mendel, which is considered a protection to the trade. The company has played a big part in making Atlanta the center it is in the ready-to-wear and dry goods field.

Montana Woman Lost 19 Pounds of Fat In 4 Weeks

Here's a letter written October 21, 1929, by Mrs. Fred Barringer of Lewistown, Montana, that ought to be read by every overweight woman in America.

When stout women can loose fat and at the same time gain in energy and vigor.

Gain in charm and vivaciousness.

Gain a healthy complexion and have eyes that sparkle with buoyant health.

And at insignificant cost—isn't it time to use common sense?

Please read this letter carefully:

"Gentlemen: I first saw your advertisement in a Billings, Montana, paper and decided to try Kruschen Salts.

I was the first to purchase a bottle in Billings.

I started taking them every morning as directed as I was very much overweight and wanted to reduce.

I had tried going on a diet but would get so hungry that my diet would not last long, so I decided to give "Kruschen Salts" a fair trial. The day I started to take them I weighed 256 lbs. and at present, which has been just four weeks, I weigh 239 lbs. And I must say, I feel better in every way, besides looking much better. Kruschen Salts had a decided effect upon the quantity of food I took and stimulated my desire to greater activity.

I have recommended Kruschen Salts to many of my friends, in fact, have a number of them taking Kruschen Salts.

May all large people, both men and women, who want to reduce in an easy way, give Kruschen Salts a fair trial. Just try one bottle and by following directions, I am sure it will convince any one. I bought my second bottle to-day."

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts four weeks costs but 85c at Jacobs' Pharmacy, or any drugstore in America.—(adv.)

TOURIST TRAVEL LEADS THROUGH PHILADELPHIA

PHILADELPHIA, May 10.—(Special.)—With the early May influx of tourists already exceeding that of previous years, indications are that Philadelphia, with its wealth of historical landmarks and associations and its proximity to other cities and places of interest on the east coast, will be on the main highroad of eastern tourist travel this summer.

To the visitor interested in the nation's history, Philadelphia offers associations which are identified with it alone and which distinguish it among all American cities. Chief of these is Independence hall, where the Liberty Bell reposes, and within whose walls the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States were drawn and signed.

Many of the most interesting old landmarks are to be found within a comparatively small area in the central section of the city. Also in this area are many fine public squares, including the four that were laid out by William Penn when he planned and founded the city nearly 250 years ago. Here, amid finely kept lawns, under old shade trees, visitors may rest and relax in the course of their sightseeing.

Among the landmarks in this area are Carpenter's hall, meeting place of the first Continental congress; the Betsy Ross house, where the first American flag was made; Old Christ church, place of worship of Revolutionary heroes, in whose graveyard lies the body of Benjamin Franklin, and the bodies of signers of the Declaration of Independence and military and civic leaders of the revolution.

Detective Indicted For False Arrest

JACKSON, Miss., May 10.—(AP)—Dan J. Goodin, local private detective, was arrested today on charges growing out of the false arrest of Oliver Lambert, negro, in connection with the wrecking of Illinois Central trains.

Goodin was indicted by the Hinds county grand jury Friday but was not arrested until today. He was charged with assault and battery, carrying a concealed weapon and pointing a pistol.

Goodin is alleged to have taken Lambert into his possession early one morning this week and that night placed him in the county jail on a justice of the peace warrant charging training wrecking.

Lambert confessed to the crime that night but later admitted that he was forced through fear and intimidation to make the confession. Illinois Central special agents developed that it was impossible for the negro to have committed the acts as he was not in the vicinity at the time.

Goodin was released on bond.

SECOND EFFORT TO IMPEACH HUEY P. LONG LOOMS AS LOUISIANA LEGISLATURE CONVENES

Quick Confirmation of Owen J. Roberts Forecast

SENATE LEADERS EXPECT VICTORY WITHIN TEN DAYS

Anti-Saloon Head, Expected To Frown on Appointee, Indicates Nomination Satisfactory.

COMMITTEE TO ACT ON NAME MONDAY

Both Borah and Norris, Who Fought Parker; Will Support Pennsylvanian for Highest Bench.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—The nomination of Owen J. Roberts, of Philadelphia, to the supreme court faces thorough study by the inquisitive senate but leaders were confident today of his confirmation within a week or ten days.

The wet issue raised against the nominee by Senator Sheppard, democrat, Texas, is simmering but a statement issued today by F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, was hailed by the Roberts advocates.

"Integrity of character, legal qualifications, intellectual honesty, judicial temperament and capacity to deal with legal questions from a strictly judicial viewpoint without bias created by personal predilection should determine the fitness of members of the judiciary rather than other considerations," McBride said. "If Mr. Roberts measures up to these qualifications he should be confirmed."

Informed that Roberts has denied a story stating that he denounced the 18th amendment in a speech in 1923, Senator Sheppard said he would withhold judgment on the nominee.

Chairman Norris, of the judiciary committee, said the nomination would be considered at the regular session on Monday and, like all other nominations, referred to a subcommittee. A report from the sub-committee the following week would be in prospects.

Both Senators Norris and Borah, republicans, Idaho, who led the fights against Chief Justice Hughes and against Judge John J. Parker, of North Carolina, have indicated their support of Roberts.

Because of this senate leaders were optimistic of his confirmation.

The work of Roberts as special government counsel in the oil frauds prosecutions has gained the approval of Senator Norris and Borah as well as Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, another foe of both Hughes and Parker.

Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, is a staunch supporter of Roberts. He telephoned the nominee yesterday when the wet question was raised and immediately issued a statement stating that Roberts had never publicly discussed the merits of prohibition and his only discussion had been an academic one on the legal issue of whether prohibition should be enacted by statute or by constitutional amendment.

Senator Reed said that Roberts would make no public statement on the question unless called before the judiciary committee. The judiciary committee refused to invite Judge Parker before it when protests were made against him and there is no indication that it will call Roberts.

Qualifications of Roberts as a special government counsel in the oil frauds cases were thoroughly debated six years ago. At that time the story attributing the anti-prohibition speech to him was before the senate but he was confirmed by a vote of 68 to 8. Senator Sheppard, was one of the eight who opposed Roberts on that roll call.

British Guns Hold Indians in Check

BOMBAY, India, May 10.—(AP)—With Mahatma Gandhi in Yeroda prison and nearly a quarter of a million troops on the alert, British authorities today safely got through the first part of an anxious week-end in the development of the Indian situation.

With memories of Thursday's rioting at Sholapur fresh in mind, they feared further trouble would break out today. But the principal event was political instead of violent.

At Amritsar, the general meeting of the Central Sikh League, chief organization of a fighting race famous for prowess in the Indian army, today resolved to support Mahatma Gandhi's civil disobedience campaign, chiefly conducted hitherto by Hindus.

Such Moslem support for the campaign injected a disturbing but unpredictable element into the situation facing British authorities. Thus far most of the Moslems have held aloof from the Gandhi movement, being traditionally suspicious of the Hindus.

Schools of City To Close, Pools To Open on June 6

:: CHILDREN PREPARING FOR ANNUAL VACATION JOYS ::

Atlanta's army of 60,000-odd school youngsters will desert their books and desks on June 6 and plunge into vacation joys, not the least of which will be the cooling waters of the municipally operated pools, it was announced Saturday by Councilman John A. White, of the fourth ward, chairman of the parks committee, on the heels of the statement by school administration officials of the closing date for the schools.

Playgrounds will open for the summer recreation season on June 17, according to the parks committee head. Mrs. Chester Johnson, supervisor of playgrounds last year, the most successful in the history of the system, again will direct the recreation centers. There will be approximately 40.

Clad only in what the conscience of the individual dictates, visitors at the pools this year will be given absolute freedom, and no restrictions will be placed on the kind, type or color of bathing suits to be worn.

Graduation exercises of the various borough-operated educational institutions will begin on the night of May 29 with the Central night school exercises at the Commercial High school auditorium at 7:30 o'clock, and will end at 8 o'clock on the night of June 6 with those of the Washington High school, city auditorium.

Other graduations were scheduled as follows:

Opportunity school, Commercial High school auditorium, May 30, at 8 o'clock at night; Girls' High school, city auditorium, June 2, 8:30 o'clock at night; Commercial High school, city auditorium, June 3, at 8:15 o'clock at night; Boys' High school, city auditorium, June 4, at 8 o'clock at night; Tech High school, city auditorium, June 5, at 8 o'clock at night.

Junior high school graduations will take place at the respective auditoriums of the schools on June 5 as follows:

Bass, 9 o'clock in the morning; Hoke Smith at 11 o'clock in the morning; O'Keefe at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and Joe Brown at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Girls' High school has the largest class, according to the estimates with 225 students; Tech High is second with 180 and Boys' High and Commercial High are estimated at 150 each.

Mayor I. N. Ragsdale and Councilman James T. Ozburn, chairman of the purchasing committee of council, probably will purchase the ponies to be used on the Grant and Piedmont tracks this week, the mayor stated Saturday.

Playground Directors Named.

Playground directors have all been chosen, according to Mr. White and will begin a week of hard training preparatory to the opening of the parks, Monday, June 9.

Mr. White Saturday issued the following statement regarding the opening of the pools:

"City pools will open to the public Saturday, June 7, at 1 o'clock and the swimming suits featured on the shores of Miami and West Palm Beach the past winter will be seen in Atlanta pools this season, as there will be no restrictions whatsoever. Patrons may wear any suit that can be purchased, so long as it is decent, and the slogan will be 'Let your conscience be your guide' but don't stretch your conscience too far. We want people to enjoy themselves and feel just as much at home in the pool here as they do in other cities.

"Persons can also wear their suits to the pools, but they must enter the gates, so as to check attendance and keep the records accurate; also they can come in and make purchases in the concessions in the bathing attire. All we want is the co-operation of the public in carrying out the rules for the best interest of all concerned. We want everybody to be comfortable and enjoy themselves.

Georgia Girl Speaks Friday At Pittsburgh

Miss Carolyn Russell, of Winder, Will Bid for Place as Oratory Finalist.

A Georgia girl, Miss Carolyn Russell, of Winder, on Friday in Carnegie hall, Pittsburgh, Pa. will make her bid for the honor of competing in the finals of the national oratorical contest at Washington. The chance to speak in the southeastern and central zone finals was won by Miss Russell in the state contest held by The Constitution on April 19, when she defeated speakers from seven other Georgia districts.

The contestants at Pittsburgh, in the order in which they will speak, are as follows: 1, John Clement FitzGerald, Hudson Falls, N. Y., representing district "X;" 2, Miss Russell, representing The Atlanta Constitution; 3, William C. Turner, representing the Louisville Courier-Journal; 4, Miss Margaret Louise Royall, representing Florida; 5, Robert L. King, of Birmingham, representing the Birmingham News-Age-Herald; 6, E. Stanley Goldman, of Taylor Allderdice High school, Pittsburgh, representing the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, and 7, a representative of eastern Pennsylvania chosen under auspices of the Pennsylvania Forensic League.

Miss Russell will be the second speaker on the zone finals program, in a list of seven candidates. Her subject will be "Personalities in the Constitutional Convention," for the prepared address. The ex tempore address subjects will not be announced until each speaker has concluded his prepared address.

Judges of the zone contest will be: Dr. Frank B. Trotter, of Morgantown, W. Va., president of the University of West Virginia; Dr. Charles Henry Ambler, of Morgantown, professor of history in the University of West Virginia, and Judge Frank W. Nesbitt, an attorney, of Wheeling, West Virginia.

Miss Russell will be accompanied to the zone contest by her mother, Mrs. Richard B. Russell, and by her school superintendent and coach, Walter W. Stancil, of Winder. She is the youngest daughter of Chief Justice Richard B. Russell, of the Georgia supreme court, and a sister of Richard B. Russell, Jr., speaker of the Georgia house of representatives.

The winners of the seven zone contests will be given a free tour of Europe this summer.

Florida 'Wild Man' May Be Fugitive

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., May 10.—(AP)—Information leading to belief that the "wild man" captured Wednesday night in the Everglades may be Ben Beckworth, alias Worthington, who escaped from the Georgia penitentiary in 1923 while serving a life sentence for murder, was received by authorities today.

The man, bearded, unkempt and clad in overalls, had terrorized negro bean pickers for several days by creeping up into the fields and seizing their lunches. He would flee the scene. Deputies captured him only after a long chase.

PARKS' INSURANCE INVALID, IS CLAIM

Company Files Answer to Action To Collect $14,000 on Slain Youth.

MACON, Ga., May 10.—(AP)—Claiming invalidity of the contract, the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States Saturday filed in United States district court here an answer to an action brought several months ago by the administrator of Parks' estate to collect $14,000 insurance on the life of James W. Parks, 18, Hapeville, Ga., printer, and victim of an alleged murder plot for which Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Powers, 72, is under sentence of death.

In addition to the $14,000, claimed under a $7,000 double indemnity policy issued to young Parks a month before his death, Frampton E. Ellis, of Atlanta, administrator of the Parks estate, asks $3,000 as a penalty for non-payment and $3,000 attorneys' fees.

Contract Invalid.

Answering the action, the insurance company says the amount of the policy has not been paid because the contract "is not now and never has been a valid contract." That claim is based on the proposition that Parks was merely a conduit through which Mrs. Powers induced the company to issue the insurance contract, and that the contract was procured "as a part of a scheme to cheat and defraud" the corporation. The answer sets out that Parks had no interest in the contract, and made application "with intention of assigning it to Mrs. Powers with all its rights." Mrs. Powers, it is claimed, "paid and intended to pay all premiums due" and to retain "all rights and benefits under the contract." When Parks was shot to death by Earl Manchester, 19, of Rochester, Mich., on the night of last May 27, only one premium of $53.20 had been paid, it was said.

The insurance company says "As a result of Mrs. Powers' felonious conduct her right, title and interest in the contract has become forfeited."

The action for the insurance was brought on the claim that Parks was an innocent party to the transaction, took the policy in good faith, and, under the assignment, Mrs. Powers is due only the amount Parks actually was obligated to her at the time of his death.

Demurrer Also Filed.

The insurance company also filed a demurrer to the petition, praying for its dismissal, and setting up their claim of the law in the case that the insurance contract was dated April 24, and the assignment was dated early in May. Parks was murdered by Manchester three weeks later, both the young men were roomers at Mrs. Powers' apartment on Cherry street, and both located their rooms through advertisements.

Mr. Ellis, as administrator, is represented by the law firm of Brock, Sparks and Russell, and Thomas J. Cochran, attorney. The action probably will be assigned for trial during the next few weeks.

Thousands Slain In China Battles

Both Nationalists and Northerners Claim Victory But Admit Casualties; Foreigners Flee.

SHANGHAI, May 10.—(AP)—Nationalist government armies battled today on two widely separated fronts in an effort to turn back the northern alliance rebels in their drives toward the Yangtse river. With heavy casualties on both sides after two days of fighting, the result was in doubt.

Foreigners in Chengchow were reported in grave danger as nationalists' airplanes bombed the city, destroying the railway station and northern headquarters, said Japanese dispatches.

Contending for supremacy in China, the opposing forces battled on both the eastern and western frontiers of Honan province. The major engagement was along the Lunghai railway between Chengchow and Suchow. In this sector, Chiang Kai-shek, president of the nationalist government and generalissimo of its armies, was in personal command against the northern thrust against his capital, Nanking.

The northern forces were directed by Yen Hsi-shan, governor of Shansi province, and Marshal Feng Yu-hsiang, both of whom seceded from the nationalist government with the declared intention of overthrowing it and ending the "dictatorship" of Chiang Kai-shek.

With all sources reporting heavy fighting for two days between Chengchow and Suchow, each side claimed success for its troops. Dispatches apparently from northern sources stated:

"The northerners 50 miles west of Suchow shattered the nationalist advance, annihilating one Nanking division, leaving the ground covered with dead. Disorder exists among the nationalists, while the northerners have taken many prisoners."

Chinese press dispatches, however, reported nationalist airplanes dropped bombs upon the rebels along the Lunghai railway, inflicting terrible toll, while the "rebel machine guns mowed down the nationalists."

The nationalists, admitting that they had suffered heavy losses, asserted they had forced the northerners to withdraw westward.

The government's areial bombardment of northern troops in Chengchow, said other dispatches, killed 47 civilians and injured many others. Against this attack, the rebels used anti-aircraft guns mounted on armored cars and lorries. A large number of rebel tanks lumbered against the foot soldiery.

Moving northward from Hankow on the western front, a large force of nationalists was reported to have routed a rebel army along the Honan-Shensi provincial borders.

CENSUS CHECK-UP WILL END JUNE 1

Score of Workers To Be Busy Through May, Dr. Broach Says.

More than a score of employes of the local census bureau will be kept busy at least through May in completing the check-up work necessary before a final population announcement can be made.

Announcement of the final figures, whcih are expected to place the population of Greater Atlanta between 360,000 and 361,000, are not expected to be made before June 1.

B. S. Barker, chamber of commerce executive, Saturday highly commended Dr. Elizabeth Broach and her staff upon their work, "Dr. Broach tells me that they are going to keep at it until every person in Atlanta has been enumerated. From my observation I believe that they will do it. I like the spirit in which they are going about their work."

The staff of the census bureau, it was said Saturday, now stands at 24. Twenty-two of these are the office staff, and two are entirely in the field. Eight of those included in the office staff, however, are irregularly in the field pursuing the re-check work now going on.

The present staff represents a reduction from a full staff of almost 250, which was engaged in taking the census when the work was at its peak. Of that number, 15 were in the office and 227 in the field.

The check now going on, as explained by Dr. Broach, is by means of house numbers, and by comparison of the data gathered by enumerators with other records of the city's population.

The city directory, the telephone book, postoffice employes, even political lists are consulted by the staff in the effort to find missing persons. In the event of any discrepancy between the enumerators' records and the information given in other records, a thorough investigation is made until the error is discovered or the records reconciled.

Systematic work by the enumerators while in the field has supplied data readily available for check, it was said. In covering a territory the enumerators started at the northwest corner of a block, proceeding around it from house to house, first going in an easterly direction. If a house is vacant a record is made. Other notations cover houses in which occupants were not at home, the number of houses on the block, and house numbers.

By comparison of these records with other available records an accurate check can be made, and homes and apartments not visited can be located.

In Atlanta, it was said, there is a house number for every 20 feet of a street's length. With the exception of the business district and a few known and isolated instances in the residential districts, the rule holds good over the entire city. The fact, Dr. Broach said, is taken advantage of in the check.

Young Navy Ensign Ends His Own Life

NEW YORK, May 10.—(AP)—The body of Ensign V. Shinkle, 22, attached to the U. S. S. Decatur, one of the vessels here with the fleet, was found today in his room in the Hotel Pennsylvania, a bullet wound in the temple. An automatic pistol, with one cartridge discharged, lay nearby.

The navy and marine register lists a Vincent Shinkle, III, born in Washington state on January 17, 1906, who entered the Naval Academy June 16, 1924, from Washington.

Friends on the Decatur said that Shinkle, a third-rate ensign, was to have met his father tonight.

Petite Organist To Play For Mothers at Big Party

:: CONSTITUTION AND PARAMOUNT TO BE HOSTS ::

At The Constitution's Mother's Day party to be given at the Paramount theater Monday from 11 o'clock, when the show house opens, until 6 the first introduction of Gladys Lyle, petite organist who has just been signed by Paramount, will be made to an Atlanta audience.

Miss Lyle, whose home is in the neighboring city of Birmingham, is probably the smallest person who ever attempted to play a big organ. She is already widely known in theatrical circles as "The Tiny Tot at the Big Wurlitzer" and the performances she has given in a number of theaters have won for her signal praise and the rating of a high class artist.

Although Manager Robert E. Hicks, of the Paramount, has known for some time that Miss Lyle would arrive in Atlanta in time for the first Monday performance, he kept it a secret until Saturday and announced it then as a surprise to the mothers of Atlanta, all over 40, who have been invited to The Constitution party. Incidentally, Miss Lyle will play an organ solo, with special stage settings, especially dedicated to mothers.

"Ladies Love Brutes," a George Bancroft picture, is the feature attraction for Monday and to go with it is a sparkling comedy, one of the best sound pictures yet made, entitled "Actions Speak Louder Than Words." In addition to these two high class features, will be the news reels.

Assurance has been given the Paramount that flowers will be provided for the mothers through the courtesy of the Allied Florists.

GLADYS LYLE, THE TINY TOT.

Byrd's Spectacular Dash To South Pole Narrated

:: PARTY MEMBERS RELATE HARROWING EXPERIENCES ::

BY A. C. ROWLAND,
Associated Press Writer.

PAPEETE, Tahiti, April 28.—(AP Correspondence.)—Dramatic tales of the flight of Admiral Byrd with three companions over the south pole November 29 and of the supporting sledge journey of Professor Lawrence Gould, the geologist, were told modestly here by members of the Byrd antarctic expedition.

The members of the expedition reported that they had a narrow escape from being frozen in at Ross barrier for another winter. Ice began to come in so rapidly that they had to make haste to embark before the ice fields solidified. It was necessary to leave much material, including the airplanes, behind. It took skilfull navigation to get clear without damage to the ships. In this they were more fortunate than the whaling fleet in the same waters. The whalers were nearly caught in the ice and some were badly damaged before they got free.

Plane-Sledge Communication.

Bernt Balchen, fine, modest, courteous gentleman of the true blood of the vikings and the spirit of his eminent countryman, Roald Amundsen—the Balchen who piloted the airplane which carried Admiral Byrd to the south pole—was aboard the City of New York.

The success of this adventure was founded on the most careful preparation. On the flight south, the airplane party had arranged to overtake the geological group under the command of Professor Gould, who had departed some weeks before on foot with dog sleds to explore the map and Queen Maud mountain region, 500 miles south of the base of the expedition, Little America.

When the airplane sighted the Gould party they were on the ice barrier within 50 miles of the Queen Maud mountains. To communicate with Gould and his companions and to drop supplies and mails (which had arrived by ship since the land expedition set out), the airplane had to descend within 200 feet of the surface.

Fifty miles to the south the range of the Queen Maud presented a solid front 15,000 feet in height guarding the way to the pole. To surmount this barrier with an airplane heavily loaded as this one was from a height of 400 feet to an altitude of over 15,000 feet in so short a distance a straightaway flying seemed impossible. To circle around to gain altitude meant too great expenditure of time and fuel. The calculations had been too nicely exact.

13,000 Foot High Peaks.

There was a moment's thought of returning to the base, but that was dismissed. It was decided to make the attempt by straight flying.

Balchen sighted a pass between peaks 13,000 feet high and made for it. As they neared the range it seemed they could not clear it. Then the order was given to jettison cargo. Over went food supplies, until half of what they must depend upon for life should anything go wrong was thrown overboard.

The plane rose just enough to clear the pass, the landing gear almost scraping the summit. And then through this narrow passage winding amid giant peaks, Balchen piloted the plane for 20 miles until the range was passed and they were over the plateau with clear flying to the south pole. It was a feat of daring, iron nerve, surpassing skill and perfect judgment which more than merits the worldwide applause which has been awarded it.

Not so well known, perhaps, is the expedition led by Professor Gould to within 280 miles of the south pole, thence eastward along the lofty Queen Maud mountains for 175 miles. It was a journey of 1,500 miles without the loss of a man and fruitful of most valuable scientific knowledge.

Gould was the first geologist to penetrate the antarctic. His route

BAPTIST LEADERS MEET WEDNESDAY

Financing of Missions Chief Topic of Annual Convention.

NEW ORLEANS, May 10.—(AP)—Viewing as a grave problem the inadequate contributions for missions, the Southern Baptist convention will convene in New Orleans next Wednesday to inspire greater zeal toward offerings, discuss constitutional changes, and seek to aid the church press.

Official reports to the convention covering the 13 years intervening since New Orleans last entertained the Baptists show a decided gain in contributions for missions and benevolences, but declare they are wholly inadequate to meet the needs of evangelism.

Only two losses are shown in the church during the 13-year span. Six hundred churches have vanished from the horizon largely in the rural sections due to the exodus of the farmer to the city, and 19 schools and colleges have been lost because of discontinuance of mountain mission schools fostered for a number of years by the home mission board with headquarters in Atlanta.

These losses, the reports showed, cover only the physical side of life as the membership of the church has shown a healthy increase.

Since 1917 the church has gained 1,026,547 members, 2,578 Sunday schools, 991,673 Sunday school pupils, 19,562 Baptist Young People's Unions and 325,865 members in the unions; 11,850 women's organizations and has shown a gain of $3,935,349.38 in annual subscriptions by the Women's Missionary Union; 1,050 church houses and 1,754 pastor's homes.

The increase of value of local church property is $152,167,902, the growth in annual contributions to local church objects $4,408,318.79, and increase of contributions to missions, education and benevolences $4,408,318.79.

Thirteen new hospitals have been gained with added value hospital property of $13,569,799.68 and six orphanages with added property value of $4,682,770.46.

The period represents an added $40,216,143 in school property and endowment with an increased student enrollment among Baptists of 6,152. Since May, 1917, 2,414,848 baptisms have been performed.

Toothache Sends Man On 750-Mile Hike

VANCOUVER, B. C., May 10.—(AP)—A toothache drove F. Jacobson, veteran trapper, from Coronation Gulf in the arctic early last month and today he was here to have it fixed, having come by dog team, plane, train and steamer.

Jacobson wasted no time in his first trip "out" in five years. He made the 750 miles from his camp to Aklavik, through the darkness of an arctic winter night in 20 days by dog team. He telegraphed for an airplane and continued from Aklavik to Mayo in four hours and from Mayo to White Horse, Yukon, in three and one-half hours.

From there he went by train to Skagway, Alaska, and by boat from Skagway to Vancouver. He made the entire trip in 32 days.

JOHNSON ROBBERY ANGERS SENATORS

Office of Californian Entered and Intimate Letters and Papers Read.

BY PAUL R. MALLON,
United News Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(UN) Political letters containing the most intimate facts about public officials in Washington as written by the fluent and often caustic pen of Senator Hiram Johnson to his friends back home in California were surreptitiously read by some intruder who broke into his office in the capitol early today.

As this marked the fourth rifling of a senator's office within a week it created a major crime problem for capitol police and local detectives who were called in.

Professional Job.

All they could develop was that it was a professional job. There were no evidences the windows had been raised, so it was deduced entry must have been by a pass key. Drawers in Johnson's private desk were pulled out. His complicated card index letter file had obviously been scrutinized carefully, with particular attention to his private correspondence.

A batch of private letters which all Washington knows are regarded as contemporary masterpieces on the passing political situation in Washington, were left on top of the file case.

A cabinet nearby had been jimmied apparently by one who well knew how.

The intruder wasted no time with Johnson's bulky office correspondence, containing the usual letters a senator writes to his constituents.

He knew where things were that even Johnson did not know until his file clerk told him today.

Burglar Used Gloves.

The detectives said they found evidence the burglar had used gloves to prevent leaving any tell-tale finger prints.

Throughout this session of congress there has been a feeling of uneasiness among senators. During the hot prohibition arguments last winter, many senators complained they were being trailed. Others reported their offices had been ransacked. Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, said his office was being watched, and Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, complained his files had been searched.

It also was learned today Borah has recently seen a letter substantiating his allegations that his office was watched during the prohibition furore last winter. The letter is said to have been addressed to a member of the house, and said the man who "went through" Borah's office is now in the prohibition service in St. Louis. The author of the letter is understood to be in the government service.

At the same time, it developed the office of Senator Moses, republican, New Hampshire, who is abroad, also had been reported rifled recently.

Another senator privately reported a bottle of liquor stolen from his desk. It apparently had been taken by a night colored janitor, it was said.

The negro janitor was one of the first questioned by detectives investigating the Johnson case. He said he left the office at 12:30 a. m. and everything was in good order. He locked the door behind him.

NEW ORLEANS, May 10.—(UN) Anti-administration forces will seek to oust Huey P. Long, Louisiana's 36-year-old governor, when the state legislature convenes at Baton Rouge Monday, the United News was reliably informed today.

Opponents of the young fiery haired executive will start impeachment proceedings as soon as possible after the session opens. The first move will be an attempt to remove J. B. Fournet, an avowed Long supporter, as speaker of the house.

If the opposition forces are successful in this move, and they claim 56 of the 99 votes in the house of representatives, an investigating committee will be appointed to probe the Long administration.

Political feeling here and at the capital today was said to be the highest in the history of Louisiana since reconstruction days when the carpet bag rule was ousted from this Confederate stronghold.

Long, a jovial and carefree person, but one who rarely leaves his hotel room without two armed bodyguards, has just returned from a statewide speaking tour where he denounced efforts of anti-administration leaders to discredit his administration.

Nineteen charges were made against the youthful governor at a special session of the legislature last year. These, however, were dropped when 15 members of the senate signed a "round robin" that they would not convict the governor.

These charges included ones of intimidation of Charles P. Manship, publisher, of Baton Rouge; of misappropriation of state funds; attempted conspiracy to murder J. Y. Sanders, Jr., a member of the house of representatives; and of participating in wild studio parties in New Orleans' Vieux Carre.

Practically all of these charges, anti-administration leaders said, have been revised and brought up to date, and with several additional ones, will be presented to the house for investigation. Long has been the center of political turmoil since his elaborate inauguration two years ago.

One of the first breaks occurred when he removed several officials in the Louisiana State University and other state institutions and placed persons who were charged with being political supporters of the administration in charge.

Since this break charges and counter-charges have been made. Former Governor John M. Parker organized the Louisiana Constitutional League, with headquarters in New Orleans, for the announced purpose of exposing Long.

Long, who finished a five-year law course with honors at Tulane University 18 months before his class, fired back at his enemies in picturesque fashion. Speaking in rural sections he would don hand-me-down trousers, a work shirt and cotton socks. Appearing in more metropolitan sections, he would dress in the latest modes of fashion.

Losing the support of every daily newspaper in Louisiana, Long recently started his own weekly publication, the Louisiana Progress. Through this mouthpiece he has made bitter attacks against publishers of the state and his political opponents.

Heart Beat Record Heard on Phonograph

BERLIN, May 10.—(AP)—The first transmission of heart-beats and heart-murmurs to phonograph records was privately demonstrated today by Dr. R. W. Schulte, director of a Berlin school of physical culture.

Reactions of the human heart to fright, physical exertion, the effects of caffein, and other stimuli, were exhibited. The records are expected to enable patients whose illness is so serious that they cannot be removed to obtain expert opinion on heart disease from authorities in distant cities.

The records will be publicly demonstrated at the Dresden international hygiene exhibition on May 15.

Colorful Event Is Held Out-of-Doors for First Time, Under Grant Field Flood-Lights.

To the blare of martial music the Reserve Officers' Training Corps of Georgia Tech Saturday night staged its annual military tournament, beneath the flood lights of Grant field for the first time.

The tournament consisted of competitive drills for prizes and, after the awarding of these trophies, closed with a military parade. Later, in the Tech gymnasium a colorful military ball, given by Scabbard and Blade fraternity, climaxed the evening's program, when Miss LaTrelle Robertson, sponsor for Cadet Lieutenant Colonel Lynn Strickland and Mrs. William Dietch, wife of Cadet Colonel Dietch, led the grand march.

Three battalions were represented in the maneuvers Friday night, the infantry, signal corps and coast artillery. The ordnance corps and the naval unit were not included. The competition was between squads, platoons, companies and individuals in order, followed by the awarding of special medals awarded by the military department.

Judges for the events were Captain Howard Dilts and Captain John Nicholson, of Tech, and Captain J. B. Gibson, of the Georgia national guard. There were a number of officers from Fort McPherson present, but purely as spectators.

The list of winners and the awards of the drills follow: Squad competition, won by a picked infantry unit under Corporal Ed Patton; platoon competition, won by coast artillery unit under Cadet Second Lieutenant S. J. Warner; company contest, won by Company A of the infantry under Cadet Captain A. J. Hecke; and the individual drill, three places awarded the following in the order of their winning: J. The squad and platoon trophies were presented by Dr. J. B. Crenshaw, director of athletics at Tech, in behalf of the Tech Athletic Association, the donor. The company trophy, a silver cup, was presented by Dr. M. L. Brittain, president. This award is known as the Steele trophy and is given by an alumnus in memory of the Tech students who were killed in the World War. The individual medals were presented by Dean W. V. Skiles, in behalf of the military department.

A gold medal given by the Joseph Habersham Chapter of the Daughters of the Revolution to the outstanding senior in military achievements was awarded to Cadet Colonel W. H. Dietch, by Mrs. J. J. Simpson, of 19 Brookwood drive. A second medal given by the John Floyd chapter of the Daughters of 1812 for the most outstanding member of the Navy R. O. T. C. unit was presented to Harold Breedlove, a junior, by Mrs. Elizabeth Pettit Ware. This annual award was founded by Mrs. C. Deckard Tebo.

A saber, Sam Browne belt and saber chain, presented annually by the Reserve Officers' Association to the senior having the best military record for the four years' course, was awarded to Cadet Major Allen E. Hauck. It was presented by Major George L. Blossom, president of the R. O. A.

TARIFF MEASURE HITS IMPASSE

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—An impasse was reached by the tariff bill conferees today over the flexible provision, but republican leaders expressed confidence that a satisfactory settlement would be consummated and a bill finally passed by both houses.

The deadlock came when the senate conferees declined to agree to a proposal by the house group that the former ask the senate to release them from their promise not to recede on the flexible and debenture proposals without another vote on them in the senate.

Backed by a big majority vote in the house against the debenture and modified flexible clause withdrawing presidential rate changing power, the house conferees insisted that the senate give its conferees a free hand to work out an adjustment in conference.

Despite the adverse house vote of last week, the senate conferees refused to acquiesce in the proposal and the conference adjourned subject to call without an agreement on any of the six points still in disagreement between the two houses.

Chairman Smoot, of the senate finance committee, said he would call another conference for Tuesday or Wednesday.

Republican leaders are anxious that a compromise on the flexible clause be worked out before the conference reports the bill to the senate. Several compromise suggestions were discussed today but no plan advanced to the point where it could be voted upon.

With the debenture believed to be headed for definite abandonment, the whole question now appears to hinge on a settlement of the flexible dispute. Republican leaders are striving to formulate some kind of an arrangement that would meet President Hoover's wishes.

BYRD POLAR DASH IS DESCRIBED

south followed that taken by Roald Amundsen on his sledge journey which carried him to the south pole December 14, 1911. To reach his objective Gould had to travel over 500 miles of the surface of the Ross barrier which overlies a deep gulf in the coast of the antarctic. The route was to the eastward of that followed by the British explorers, Scott and Shackleton, but over the same ice barrier.

On arrival at this point of the coast the purpose of the expedition was to explore, map and examine geologically the terrain to the eastward, toward King Edward land. The party also was to plant caches along the route from Little America on the coast of the Ross barrier to the foot of the Queen Maud range—to supply the return journey and as depots of supplies from Admiral Byrd's dash to the pole, should some accident compel a forced landing.

When Gould and his party arrived at the great mountain range they made a discovery which Gould said gave him and every member of his expedition the greatest thrill of their whole stay in the antarctic. It was the cairn erected by Amundsen in repassing the mountains on his return from the pole. In it he had deposited the account, in his own handwriting, of his discovery of the south pole.

This precious document is the most cherished possession the Byrd expedition is bringing back with them. Its discovery has had a profound emotional influence on every member of the expedition and it is looked upon as something sacred, to be spoken of with the south pole and the edge of the Ross barrier. It is at a point 280 miles from the pole and 500 miles south of the nearest open sea.

Great Mountain Range.

Both Balchen, who saw them from the air, and Gould, who explored and examined them geologically, told of the scenic splendor of the Queen Maude range. Gould said it was one of the greatest mountain ranges in the world.

Other great mountain chains, such as the Himalayas, the Rockies or the Alps, he said, are to be approached only through foothills or along rising ground until, when the high peaks are sighted, the spectator's point of observation is so elevated that he sees that part of the mountains which is higher than where he stands.

The approach to the Queen Maud mountains, on the contrary, is over the surface of the Ross barrier at an elevation above sea level of but 200 feet. Thus the explorer sees this majestic mountain mass, 15,000 feet in height, snow-covered from base to summit, and encrusted with vast glaciers flashing like jewels in the sunlight in its full splendor. All who saw it bear witness that no other mountain scenery in the world can match this.

Geologically this range of mountains is unusual. Other great mountain systems, such as the American Cordillera and the Alps, have been formed by the crinkling of the earth's surface and built up by the accumulation on that surface of volcanic debris. The Queen Mauda range is of the formation termed geologically as fault block, its great peaks of tabular formation having been thrust up by some tremendous convulsion from the earth's interior, through a great fault, or chasm.

Meteorological Research.

The results of this, the first geological investigation of the antarctic continent, are destined to be of great interest when they become known. Professor Gould said there was such a wealth of material he could have passed another year in the sector he examined, and he regretted he could not stay on.

The meteorological researches have been the most complete ever undertaken in polar exploration. It has been said that a thorough knowledge of the atmosphere, air currents and weather conditions over the antarctic continent would enable meteorologists to predict the world's weather months in advance. It has been hinted that the researches by the scientists of the Byrd expedition will add greatly to that knowledge.

One is impressed by the spirit of good fellowship among the members of the Byrd expedition, especially among the 42 who passed the antarctic winter in the ice at Camp Little America. Here were gathered human beings from widely separated regions of the earth, compelled to pass months in the necessarily crowded quarters of a camp with outdoor temperatures which forbade prolonged exposure. Indeed, the quarters were so crowded that the majority had to go into their bunks to give room for the setting and clearing of the tables at meal times. Yet from this situation of potential dynamite, the company emerged with mutual esteem, good comradeship and many lasting friendships.

Byrd Rescues Member.

This is a tribute to the discernment of the commander in choosing his material and his tact and qualities of leadership. The measure of a leader is determined not only by results achieved, but by how he is regarded among those under his command who have made his success possible. Admiral Byrd's qualities, known to the world, are confirmed and enhanced by the esteem and loyalty of those who serve with him and which are evident even in the tone of voice in which they speak his name.

They tell a story of how one of the aviation staff nearly lost his life by drowning while supplies were being transferred from the ship to the barrier ice. He was thrown into the water by the breaking off of the ice on which he was standing. The first man to plunge into his aid was Byrd, who stayed by the aviator for the 20 minutes it took to bring rescue.

The City of New York left Papeete April 17, but had to turn back when she was well out to sea to bring ashore a number of stowaways from the American freighter Arcturus. The latter vessel had put into Tahiti in distress and her crew had been in a state approaching mutiny ever since. The City of New York, having landed the stowaways, finally cleared for Panama April 18.

The Eleanor Bolling, having arrived late, remained at Papeete until April 22. It was said that she would overtake the City of New York and tow her into Panama.

URBAN LEAGUE WEEKLY BULLETIN

BY JESSE O. THOMAS.

The Butler street branch of the Y. M. C. A. launches its annual financial drive Monday. Many new features are to be added to its program if the present financial drive succeeds in reaching its goal. Among these features is a city wide extension program of boys' club activities under the designation of Comrade Clubs fostered by unit organizations set up in each ward under the leadership of an active committee of citizens interested in the development of boys and a voluntary senior group leader. No single activity on the part of the Y in all its history has met a greater response and stimulated greater appreciation than this city-wide extension program. The leading ministers and pastors of various denominations as well as business and professional men and women are expressing themselves enthusiastically in favor of this new feature.

The building is now in constant use for different types of recreation including volley ball, basketball, drill practice, swimming, indoor tennis and billiards. The weeks of May 12 and August 11 will be known as free swim weeks during which time any boy may be taught how to swim under the protection of trained life guards

PEPPER'S TALK CLOSES LAW INSTITUTE MEET

Former Senator Says Senate Unfit To Cope With Law's Tangles.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—George Wharton Pepper, former senator from Pennsylvania, tonight assailed the present state of the nation's laws as being in "a fair way to become a mess," and characterized the senate as unfitted to remedy the situation.

Pepper addressed the closing meeting of the eighth annual convention of the American Law Institute, attended by approximately 600 leading members of the bench and the bar, who, a few hours before, had approved almost in its entirety a "model code of criminal procedure," proposing a score of drastic changes in legal practice.

They had also devoted two days to consideration of the institute's proposed 18-year task of "restating" the tremendous volume of the nation's common law.

It was this undertaking to which Pepper referred. Even if congress had authority to undertake it, he said, "one shrinks from the spectacle of the senate debating a restatement of the common law."

"Even the confirmation of presidential appointments on a commission to make the restatement," he continued, "would involve interminable and acrimonious debate.

"The area of choice would be limited by excluding all who had ever expressed intelligent opinions on any subject or had been indiscreet enough to talk in their sleep."

The convention dinner was addressed also by Henry Upson Sims, of Birmingham, Ala., who warned that much of the proposed "restatement" would necessarily be changed before the law in all states became conformable to it, and by Justice Roger A Stone, of the Minnesota supreme court.

Justice Stone asserted members of the American bar had become "slaves of 'stand-patism' during the last century," and that partly as result of this the legal profession "is not so well considered today" as it was a decade or two ago.

"On the ethical side," he said, "no profession, and possibly no business, is put on a lower plane in the lay mind than our own."

ILLINOIS CAMPAIGN ISSUES SHAPE UP

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 10.—(UN)—Liquor and gold are emerging as issues in the United States senatorial race in Illinois between Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, republican, and James Hamilton Lewis, democrat.

One month after the primary in which Mrs. McCormick defeated Senator Charles S. Deneen for the nomination by opposing the World Court, that issue seemed to be paling in popular interest.

The Chesterfieldian "Jim Ham" Lewis, noted for his oratory, and his perfection of tailoring, had an easy victory in his campaign for the democratic nomination, in which he opposed prohibition. He will carry that issue over into the regular election.

It appears, however, that Lewis also will make the most of Mrs. McCormick's report that she spent a quarter of a million dollars on her primary campaign.

In the primary Lewis said he intended to force a clear-cut vote on prohibition. Twice before, once in 1922 and again in 1926, Illinois has demonstrated its opposition to prohibition. The majority in 1922 was almost 500,000 anud in 1926 it was about 300,000. The polls were direct referenda on whether wine and beer should be authorized.

With those votes in mind, and Chicago admittedly wet, Lewis hopes to force the issue in face of Mrs. McCormick's dry stand and thereby hopes to gain many republican wet votes. In doing so he probably will lose some dry democrat votes but they are fewer in number than wet G. O. P. followers, elections have shown.

The democrats seized upon Mrs. McCormick's expenditures as revealed in her testimony before the senate investigating committee in Washington. The democrats charged that the total expenditures in her campaign were around $1,000,000 and in resolutions said she was "disqualified for the senate" in view of the bar placed before Frank L. Smith.

Indications from the democratic camp are that all their resources will be thrown behind Lewis in the hope that he will carry the rest of the ticket to victory.

Judges Selected For High School Paper Contest

Judges of the 1930 high school newspaper contest conducted by the Georgia Tech chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalistic fraternity, will include two members of the Tech faculty and a representative from The Constitution, sponsor of the contest, it was announced Saturday by Randolph Whitfield, president of the local chapter of the fraternity.

The judges will be Dr. W. G. Perry, of the Tech English department; Professor George M. Sparks, head of the Tech night school, and N. S. Noble, city editor of The Constitution.

Any one copy from among the issues of the current scholastic year can be submitted in the contest for the handsome silver cup to be awarded the winner. The time limit for sending in entries is May 26, and results of the contest will be announced on May 31. Any high school publication in the state, a weekly or other paper, is eligible, though annuals are not. The object of the contest is to promote a higher standard among the high school papers of Georgia and encourage perfection in student journalism.

Numbers of interesting and readable high school papers were submitted in the previous contests, and it is expected that the event this year will draw an even larger number of entries. The contest was organized five years ago by The Constitution and the local chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon, which has been on the Tech campus for eight years with a membership drawn from the Yellow Jacket, comic monthly; The Technique, a weekly newspaper, and The Blue Print, an annual. Pi Delta Epsilon was founded in 1909 as a national organization.

Previous winners of the contest follow: First year, Red and Black, Athens; second year, Albany High school; third year, Blue and White, Savannah, and fourth year, Co-Ed Leader, Commercial High school, Atlanta.

Bear for Work, Employes Say of New Court Nominee

OWEN ROBERTS GREATEST OF ALL PHILADELPHIA LAWYERS

BY THOMAS E. LEWIS.

PHILADELPHIA, May 10.—(NANA)—A bear for work. A man so punctual and regular that employes tell time by his arrivals and departures. At home a "perfect darling, a jolly, fun-loving companion."

That, in the words of his employes and his wife, is Owen Josephus Roberts, who "didn't want to be a lawyer because lawyers aren't honest," but who kinds himself today, at 55, named by President Hoover for a place in the highest tribunal in the land.

Owen J. Roberts, the boy, wanted to be a school teacher. His father, Josephus Roberts, former councilman, believed he was "good at arguments and ought to be a lawyer." But Owen was also "good at arguments" with his father, and he stood pat on being a school teacher.

So Owen's father said they'd ask Owen's school master, Dr. William Kershaw, head master of the Germantown Academy, if a man could be both a lawyer and honest. Owen himself put the question. And here it was that the wise old schoolmaster uttered a reply that gave America one of its finest lawyers.

"Owen," the schoolmaster replied, "You can be honest about anything," and the die was cast.

Mr. Roberts' reply when asked if he would accept the place offered by the president, is typical of the man. Without an instant's hesitation, although he himself had recommended Chief Justice Robert Von Moschzisker, of the supreme court of Pennsylvania, a life-long friend, for the post, he replied:

A Duty and a Pleasure.

"I consider it both a duty and a pleasure to accept. It is a tremendous surprise."

That is Owen Roberts, always driving straight to the point. The fact that he will sacrifice a lucrative income, which it is understood runs into hundreds of thousands of dollars annually, meant nothing to him—the fact that duty had called was the only consideration.

Mr. Roberts was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania law school in 1898, with highest honors. Soon afterwards he was admitted to the bar, and devoted much of his attention to corporation law, at the same time reaching out into criminal and other branches of the legal profession.

In 1901, Mr. Roberts saw his ambition to become a teacher fulfilled. In that year he was appointed an assistant professor in the University law school, and, as his father often remarked in retelling the story, "both Owen and myself were satisfied." Later he was named to a full professorship.

In 1903, when John C. Bell, later attorney general of Pennsylvania, was district attorney, Mr. Roberts was made his assistant. Many of the men who served in the same office as colleagues of Mr. Roberts have since achieved places of distinction in public life, including Chief Justice von Moschzisker, William A. Gray, noted criminal lawyer, and Judge Joseph H. Taylane, of the common pleas court here.

A World of Experience.

As an assistant district attorney Mr. Roberts picked up a world of experience as a prosecutor which was invaluable when the government selected him as special prosecutor in the Teapot Dome case. Meanwhile, his private practice was expanding and he came to be known as a "lawyer's lawyer," or counsellor for other lawyers who had steered their cases into troubled waters.

His public life has been an open book. When anybody in Philadelphia thinks of the legal profession at its best they think of Owen J. Roberts. An approachable, likable man, who can converse on a wide range of subjects, he can always find time to be courteous, however busy.

Widespread acclaim for President Hoover's choice came from scores of prominent lawyers and jurists here, regardless of politics. The justices of the state supreme court and superior court who could be reached were unanimous in approving the selection. Judge William B. Linn, of the superior court, said:

"No better appointment from the American bar could have been made."

Although Mr. Roberts would not discuss his views on the wet and dry question, a prominent lawyer, who is a close friend of the nominee, said:

"Nobody ever thinks of Owen J. Roberts as either a wet or a dry. They think of him only as a great lawyer."

Six feet tall, with bluish-gray eyes and hair which is graying at the temples, Mr. Roberts has a finely chiseled countenance. Severe when he is driving home a point of law, he has an infectious smile. Orator as well as lawyer, he has never lost a case before the United States supreme court, although he has appeared before that tribunal more than 200 times. This is believed to be a record. If he has a hobby, besides his work, it is nature study. His spare time is spent at his 800-acre farm near Kimberton, Chester county, where he takes personal charge and supervises the raising of his poultry and live stock. He does not play golf.

Cherished Traditions of Law.

Mr. Roberts' private office reflects the most cherished traditions of the law. Inside one seems to live with the greats of past and present as one gazes at the bronze and steel engravings on the wall.

Daniel Webster, former Chief Justice Taft, former Chief Justice Rice, of the Pennsylvania supreme court; Calvin Coolidge, the late Chief Justice White, of the United States supreme court; Abraham Lincoln—these and other great men have looked down from the walls of Owen J. Roberts as he was hewing that brilliant career which in all probability will lead to the highest court in the land.

At home there is another picture—Owen J. Roberts coming home to a smiling woman with curly, dark hair and a reserved manner which seems almost shy, and reading a detective story.

"Yes," said Mrs. Roberts, "he grabs a lurid detective story the minutes he comes into the house."

And then the person who knows him best told what Owen J. Roberts is like around the house.

"He's the best companion in the world," she said. "So jolly and funloving. This news is like a bolt from the blue. We really didn't think Owen would be asked to serve.

"Owen away from the office is a very different person from when he is at work. At the office he is very serious, but at home he acts as if he hadn't a care or worry in the world.

"On our farm we have a dairy herd and almost every kind of animal in the world. Our favorites are two Irish terriers. For nine years we have had a camp on the Pocono lake reservation, in the Pocono mountains where we rough it, and where Owen chops wood from morning until night, when he is not in a canoe."

:: FOOD MAKES BIG HIT WITH FORMER ATLANTA MEN ::

BALTIMORE, Md., May 10.—(AP)—Forty-eight federal prisoners, transferred to Fort George G. Meade from the overcrowded federal penitentiary at Atlanta, grew ecstatic today over life in the army, notably the food and the cots.

About 150 other prisoners are expected from Atlanta in the next few weeks, it was said at the fort. Four deputy wardens were in charge of the first detachment.

At the fort the men slept last night, on army cots in airy barracks, while in the penitentiary, they said, they had iron cots in crowded cells.

Four wooden barracks, surrounded by a high fence of barbed wire, have been set aside for the prisoners. The soldiers of the garrison are quartered just across a road. Most of the prisoners are Volstead law violators, but some were sentenced for narcotic and postal offenses. None was considered of the dangerous type.

For breakfast the men had oatmeal, hot cakes, scrapple, butter and bread, biscuits and coffee. Last night they had pie at the end of a substantial dinner. The army cooks prepared the food.

HIGHWAY PAVING WILL BE COMPLETED

THOMASVILLE, Ga., May 10.—Letting by the Georgia highway board of contract for paving the seven miles from Thomasville to the line of Thomas and Grady counties on the Thomasville and Tallahassee, Fla., automobile road, marks the beginning of work to complete the capital to capital highway, from Atlanta to Tallahassee, through Thomasville.

Between Thomasville and Atlanta 65 miles are as yet unpaved and between Thomasville and Tallahassee there are 17 miles—all in Georgia—not hard surfaced. The contract just let will reduce the miles to ten. Florida has had a paved road open, from Tallahassee to the Georgia-Florida state line, for almost two years.

When the paving from Thomasville to the Georgia-Florida line is all laid, there will be a continuous all-paved automobile road from Ellaville, through Albany, Thomasville and Tallahassee, on to Pensacola, and thence to New Orleans.

Steering Wheels Must Be Strong

Materials used in steering wheels react differently to temperature changes, necessitating special devices which have been perfected by Dodge Brothers metallurgists to test their strength at temperatures varying from zero to 120 degrees Fahrenheit.

AVIATOR IS HELD FOR NINE DEATHS

FAYETTEVILLE, Tenn., May 10. (AP)—An airplane accident near here April 27, when a plane fell and killed nine of a group assembled on a railroad embankment, will be investigated by the grand jury.

At the conclusion today of the preliminary hearing of Milton P. Covert, pilot of the plane, he was bound over to circuit court on a second degree murder charge. Al Gombert, manager of the Dixie fliers, who was arrested yesterday on a warrant charging second degree murder, had agreed to be bound by whatever action was taken in the pilot's case.

Both furnished $3,500 bond and, if indictments are returned, will report here June 13 for arraignment. They left Fayetteville shortly after the hearing.

G. F. Cheatham, state witness, testified he heard Gombert tell Covert to "blow them off" the railroad embankment, where a crowd had gathered to watch a stunting exhibition by Covert. From the embankment the exhibition could be witnessed without paying a 25-cent admission charge to the field. The plane fell into the crowd from an elevation of about 20 feet.

Denial was made by Gombert that he had given such instructions to the pilot.

Gombert said that the accident was caused by striking a vacuum and that it was unavoidable.

Busy-Body Publicity Seeker Jailed for Offering Judge $5,000 To Favor 'Al' in Padlock Case.

MIAMI, Fla., May 10.—(AP)—Alphonse Capone, Chicago gang lord, today sought protection of state courts from the announced plan of Miami city officials to arrest him, according to the "Chicago plan," whenever he is found within the city. His federal court plea yesterday for such protection was fruitless, and the gangster's attorneys turned on recommendation of Federal Judge Halstead L. Ritter, to the courts of the state.

The legal tangle in which the Chicago racketeer has found himself, since arrival at his Miami Beach residence April 20 was enlarged today with the arrest of Nathan Grebstein, Miami real estate man, on a contempt of court charge that he offered Circuit Judge Paul D. Barns $5,000 "or more if necessary" to decide padlock proceedings instituted against Capone's palatial Palm Island home "according to law."

In an order issued out of Judge Barns' office, Grebstein was assigned to jail until further notice. The order said that Grebstein approached the judge on two occasions with the offer. Attorneys for Capone said that the man had come to them with a proposition to have the case decided for them, but said they had refused to listen to him.

Grebstein, in jail, said he had talked with Judge Barns in the latter's chambers, but maintained that the conversation centered about golf. He was arrested after a 24-hour hunt. He said he does not know Capone.

Chief Deputy Sheriff C. E. Coleman, who headed the search, said Grebstein did not appear to be an associate of Capone, but rather as a man ambitious to act as an intermediary between the gangster and the court.

Hearing on the gangster's petition for temporary injunction restraining Miami police officers from arresting him whenever he is found in the city was set for 11 a. m. Monday before Circuit Judge Uly O. Thompson.

Judge Thompson Thursday night granted the writ of habeas corpus that released Capone, his brother and two companions after their detention in Miami municipal jail on investigation charges.

Continued hearing on the petition of State Attorney N. Vernon Hawthorne to padlock the Capone residence under the Florida nuisance law is expected to occur shortly after the gangster and his wife file answer to the petition Tuesday.

Chief of Police Guy C. Reeve, who is named defendant in the circuit court petition for temporary injunction against arrest of Capone without warrant, said today that he had been misunderstood in reporting that the gangster made a plea in municipal jail Thursday for immunity of prosecution because he was a World War veteran. The plea, Chief Reeve said, was made by Albert Drignano, one of the men arrested with Capone.

MISSOURI STOCK LOSS IS FIXED AT $2,000,000

Audit of Young Crash Is Filed in Federal Court.

ST. LOUIS, May 10.—(AP)—Losses to stockholders and creditors in recent collapse of W. H. Young & Brothers, Inc., brokerage firm which operated more than 60 offices in 15 states, will exceed $2,000,000, according to an audit filed in federal court by F. E. Williams, federal receiver.

The report showed that the public holds $1,703,350 of preferred stock of the Young company and its two subsidiaries, the Midwest Holding Company and the Industrial Holding Corporation. This stock was held to be worthless. The auditors reported they found books of the company so tangled and incomplete that they were unable to state the exact condition of the firm.

The company was sent into receiver last March when it failed to pay its 12 per cent dividend per month on its preferred stock.

W. H. Young, president, and his brother, Fred C. Young, vice president of the brokerage firm, face prosecution in Barton county, Missouri, under the state blue sky law. They also are under bonds here to face any charges that may be filed and are under investigation by postoffice officials.

The auditor's report lists assets of $97,310.54, including $48,948.91 in accounts receivable which are declared in the report to be disputed, with collection of many accounts impossible.

Young preferred, sold without Missouri state registration, was listed at having been purchased to the extent of $1,237,500 by the public, which also absorbed $217,400 of preferred stock of the Midwest Holding Company and $248,450 of Class A common stock of the Industrial Holding Company.

National Dry Survey 'Wet,' Declares Dr. A. J. Barton

BY UNITED NEWS.

Dr. Arthur J. Barton, chairman of the executive committee of the Anti-Saloon League of America, issued a statement here Saturday branding the "National Prohibition Survey" as "wet" and attacking the movement behind it as "doubly pernicious because it seeks to undo what we have achieved in the realm of moral and reform legislation and seeks to do this under the veil of deception."

Thomas Edward Kennedy, acting executive director of "National Prohibition Survey," has announced the project is an impartial, non-political, non-sectarian effort to survey more than 32,000,000 Americans on the question of prohibition at an estimated cost of $7,000,000, all to be raised by popular subscription.

Governors Invited.

Under the plan of the survey governors of all states have been asked to serve upon its advisory committee and Kennedy announced 27 states are represented by their governors, by officially designated alternates, or by persons selected by the survey itself. Governor L. G. Hardman, of Georgia, has declined to serve.

"My belief," Dr. Barton said in his statement, "is that if any dry governor has accepted membership on Mr. Kennedy's advisory board he is under a wrong impression as to the character and purposes of the organization. We may have some governors who are babes in the woods."

He attacked the motives prompting the survey as designed "to break down prohibition sentiment in the United States," denied the necessity of any such project, asserted "the drys will take care of the cause of prohibition at the ballot box in November in a manner that will ultimately convince all of the wets," and said:

No Neutral Ground.

"No matter what Mr. Kennedy or anyone else may propose, or what may be their motives, there is no neutral ground in this fight. It is 'war to the knife and the knife to the hilt' in this fight between the forces of constitutional government and the forces of lawlessness and anarchy. The drys throughout the nation will not be deceived by the National Prohibition Survey. 'The voice may be the voice of Jacob, but the hand is the hand of Esau.'"

Dr. Barton explained that his impressions of the National Prohibition Survey were "thoroughly confirmed by an extended personal interview with Mr. Kennedy in which he indicated he would be glad to have me associated with the movement, in which he positively refused to give the names of his backers and in which he refused or failed to answer frankly my frank charge that his movement is backed by the wets and that his organization is a wet organization.

"The most that he could say," Dr. Barton said, "was that neither Raskob nor duPont would be connected with it. He admitted frankly that the men to whom he is looking as backers are men who drink liquor.

"Earmarks of Wets."

"Mr. Kennedy's organization and movement have all the earmarks of the wets. In my mind there is no doubt at all that it was conceived and is backed by the wets. Why should wealthy men in New York and Chicago wish to come to Atlanta to establish headquarters for a national prohibition survey? My judgment is the headquarters were established in Atlanta because Atlanta is the largest city in the southeast and in the heart of the dry south. I have no doubt at all that the movement has as its sole purpose to seek to break down the prohibition sentiment of the United States and especially of the south, which is regarded by New York, Chicago and other wet centers as the citadel of prohibition.

"What is the necessity for a national prohibition survey? We have national prohibition enacted in the regular and orderly way; it is being enforced in the regular and orderly way and is being upheld by the citizens of the United States in the regular and orderly way, both at the ballot box and through regular judicial procedure.

"How could private citizens, by sending out questionnaires, hope to make a better survey than the law enforcement and observance commission appointed by the president and backed by the prestige and power of the federal government? The character of this proposed survey is clearly indicated in my mind by the character of the questionnaire which has been published. The 15 questions are, in my mind, clearly formulated not with a view to ascertain an intelligent expression of opinion, but with a view to confusion."

GRUNDY IS TERMED ENEMY OF LABOR

Mine Workers' Head Puts Approval on Candidacy of Davis.

PHILADELPHIA, May 10.—(AP) Declaring that Joseph R. Grundy was labor's "greatest foe," John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, in a radio address tonight indorsed the primary ticket headed by Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, for the republican nomination for United States senator, and Francis Shunk Brown, for governor. Senator Grundy is Mr. Davis' principal opponent.

"For many years," said Mr. Lewis, "I have been in personal contact with industrial and political conditions in Pennsylvania. As a representative of the men engaged in the mining industry I have good cause to know of the manner in which the power of the state has been used to aid the forces arrayed against the cause of labor and human advancement.

"For this reason, it is essential and opportune that my voice be raised in support of the candidates indorsed by the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor in the present primary political campaign, namely, James J. Davis and Francis Shunk Brown. Labor has no greater foe than Senator Grundy, recently appointed by the present governor at Harrisburg. Grundy seeks, by fair means or foul, to intrench himself in a public position that would vastly increase his power and influence as a representative of special interests. For long years, the name of Grundy in Pennsylvania has been synonymous with the terms of favor for special privilege and opposition to the cause of labor. He has championed the strong and attacked and humiliated the weak; brutal in his arrogance, ruthless in his execution, he has fought the reforms advocated by organized labor with unexampled ferocity.

"Grundy is an intellectual throwback who might have descended from a robber baron of the middle ages.

"As indicative of the manner Grundy will function in the United States senate one need only to refer to his conduct during the present week, when he was paired in favor of the confirmation of Judge Parker for appointment to the supreme court of the United States. Grundy found himself in positive sympathy with the man who wrote the decision of the circuit court of appeals in the Red Jacket injunction case, which delivered into un-American economic servitude 50,000 mine workers in southern West Virginia. This decision was so repugnant to the majority of the United States senate that Parker was defeated for confirmation."

HOOVER TAKES LIMIT OF MOUNTAIN TROUT

Twenty Beauties in President's Basket After Short Session.

ORANGE, Va., May 10.—(AP)—President Hoover spent today casting for trout in the waters about his Rapidan fishing camp and emerged with the maximum number allowed under the Virginia law.

The chief executive led his party in the day's fishing, with Larry Richey, one of his secretaries, next with 17 trout, three under the total caught by his chief.

Others who enjoyed the day's sport which began almost immediately after the party arrived at the mountain camp early today, were Associate Justice Stone, Secretary Wilbur, Walter Hope, assistant secretary of the treasury; Captain Joel T. Boone, White House physician; Mark Sullivan, a newspaperman, and Dr. Hubert Work, former chairman of the republican national committee.

The chief executive had chosen one of the most beautiful times of the year to visit his camp. Rhododendron was just breaking into bloom as he passed over the winding mountain trail. The rock garden built at the instance and under the supervision of Mrs. Hoover also was fragrant with new spring flowers.

Leaving the White House after an early breakfast the president and his party made a swift run to the camp. They had hardly arrived before Mr. Hoover had donned his fishing garb, high top rubber boots, and he was soon in the stream casting his favorite baits.

Lolling about the camp later he found surcease from the heat of the capital and relief from political struggles. Mr. Hoover expected to return to his office Monday morning.

One member of the party who was unable to take a full part in the day's sport was Secretary Hurley, who has been resting at the camp for several days. Mr. Hurley has suffered for several weeks from a stomach ailment and this week after attending the Tuesday cabinet meeting he accepted the invitation of the president to convalesce at the Rapidan camp.

Mrs. Hoover was unable to accompany her husband. A wrenched back which she suffered last month has kept her confined to the White House.

Boston's Police Arm Undergoes Revamping

BOSTON, May 10.—(AP)—Reorganization of the Boston police department was begun in earnest today when Eugene C. Hultman, newly-appointed police commissioner, issued orders abolishing the so-called flying squadron and the liquor and vice squad. Patrolmen attached to the units were assigned to other duty.

An investigation into the pensioning of Oliver G. Garrett, who directed a large part of the activities of the liquor squad, led to the departmental shake up. The case of Garrett, who acquired wealth while serving as a $38 a week patrolman, is now before the grand jury.

Abolition of the two units leaves responsibility of liquor law enforcement in the various parts of the city directly up to division commanders.

Passion Players Of 1930 Make Formal Bow

OBERAMMERGAU, Germany, May 10.—(AP)—The 1930 version of the famous Oberammergau passion plays which was shown to an invited group amid cold and rainy weather Thursday night, will be given its first public performance tomorrow.

Age has made some changes in the cast of this historic production, presented annually by pious villagers who live the lives of their revered Biblical characters and earn their living by the sale of wood carvings.

The decennial passion play represents the fulfillment of a vow made at a time of extreme suffering. In 1632 the "terrible plague" raged in the valleys of the Loisach and the Ammer. Eighty-four persons died in Oberammergau alone in less than a year. This was an appalling percentage for a village numbering less than 600 inhabitants, and nobody could foresee the end of the pestilence.

It was then that the village elders went to their church and vowed to hold a passion play every 10 years from then on if God would hear their prayers and banish the scourge. Not a villager died of the plague after that vow.

Thus while the oldest texts of the Passion Play date back to the fifteenth century, it was not until 1634 that it became a holy obligation upon the community.

From then on the play became the chief aspiration of the Oberammergau folk. A villager holds that there is no greater honor than to be chosen for a part in the production and to hold it throughout the years life permits him.

With Farmers on Growing Larger Crops, Ford Asserts

:: MAGNATE OPPOSES CURTAILMENT, HE SAYS IN INTERVIEW ::

BY A. M. SMITH.

DETROIT, May 10.—"I want to say to the farmers that I am with them in their refusal to follow the advice to curtail crops," Henry Ford said.

"I believe that quantity is our economic salvation, quantity in essential things. The farmer has his land, he has his machinery, he has his own energy, he has all the chemistry of the sun and soil—and he is asked to let all of that, or half of it, lie idle to cause a shortage and high prices.

"It is conceivable that financiers might do that with money, and it is conceivable that manufacturers might do that with goods, and that, too, would be all wrong. But it is not conceivable that farmers would do it. They never have and they never will.

"The farm is a success when it raises crops, an agricultural success; a success in the partnership between nature and man. If it is not a financial success that does not prove that something is wrong with agriculture; it may indicate that something is wrong with finance. But even if the farm is not a financial success the farmer at least preserves the fertility of the soil and makes an honest and wholesome living.

"The two systems, agriculture and finance, the one natural, the other artificial, the one productive and the other manipulative, are pulling separate ways.

"One lives off increase; the other off interest. There is no chance of their uniting. One will have to subjugate the other, and I think the end of it will be that finance will become more natural instead of nature becoming more financial. That is, the weight of future power is on the side of nature and the men who work along with her.

"It seems certain now that farmers, having seen the weakness of all their would-be helpers and advisers, will go back to farming, just raising as much as they can and improving their methods as fast as they can.

"The usefulness of the farm is not limited to the production of food, as I have said. That is only one of the raw materials which the farm produces. We are beginning to recognize that the soil is the source of all of our basic materials. That is, whereas we used to mine our materials we are now thinking about growing many of them. We shall get a seasonal as well as a geological supply.

"But that will not come if production is restricted. And please bear in mind that surplus of raw materials always forces invention of new uses. It is the pressure of quantity that compels men to find new uses for a product.

"What led to the new uses of corn, which now makes interior building walls and silk dresses and stockings? Nothing but the pressure of surplus corn. All progress must come out of surplus over and above the actual, immediate need. The farmer is putting pressure on progress when he produces quantity.

"This is the season for planting and I hope it breaks all records. Planting is at once the most ancient, necessary and profitable of human labors, because it is profitable to everybody in a practical way. Something is going to grow on the land. If it is not something useful it is something useless or harmful. To advise farmers to let good land go back to weeds is pretty foolish. It is easier to grow crops than to fight weeds.

"I am of the opinion that more people ought to go back to the farm. In the first place, they belong there. Our big financial centers are full of people who come from the country districts. Of course, everybody is entitled to experience. I am ready to concede that a term of city-living has had a beneficial effect on many country-living conditions.

"But the biggest problem of today is providing jobs for people who come from the country and who have jobs of their own back home if they could only stick to them. The farm offers a home and a living, anyway. That is, if taxes don't eat up both.

"One thing this reckless era of government finance will have to answer for is the taking of farmers off their farms. When government makes it a hardship to own property in the country and when people begin to get the idea that they are better off without property there isn't much to look forward to.

"Another thing, the railroads have their share of blame for the farm situation. They have made it hard for the farmer and the consumer to get together. Their theory of operation has been to get every cent the traffic will bear, leaving the producer a bare living and taking every cent possible out of the ultimate consumer.

"The railroads have claimed a higher value for their services than the farmer puts into the product or the consumer gets out of it. It is a flagrant instance of an artificial system of finance defeating a natural system of supply. It will have to be changed. There has been an underproduction of transportation.

"It is perfectly idle for boards and bureaus to pretend to be tackling the farm problem by confining their attention to the farmer and advising him to sit down idly on his land and shut off production.

"The fault is not with the farmer. Pay a little attention to taxes, to railway rates, and the resulting howl will prove that you have hit the bullseye."

Color Effects Used in Homes Follow Nature

Today there is color in everything, and in the mind of the public there has been built up an appreciation of the correct manner of combining colors to obtain predetermined effects in home decoration. With this new understanding of color has come a realization of the part nature plays in establishing one's likes and dislikes. Floors should be darker than the walls and ceiling, just as the ground is darker than the horizon and the sky. Light colors should be used on a ceiling to diffuse the light, just as it is diffused from the sky. Moderate colors go on the walls, as in nature they are to be found near the horizon.

With plain walls there should be contrasting detail in the floor, and with plain, dark floors the monotony should be relieved with touches of color around the walls. These principles are elementary in home decoration.

Manufacturers who realize the possibilities offered by the use of color in homes have been quick to bring out suitable materials. Among these, the linoleum manufacturers have taken a leading part. Today it is possible to select a pattern of linoleum in practically any color or texture to go with any color scheme or type of room. So great is the choice that it is equally easy to find a suitable pattern for a public building or for a private home.

Those who still think of linoleum as a floor material for bathrooms and kitchens must revise their notions of it. Today leading architects and decorators are using its colorful designs in every room in the house. One manufacturer alone, with more than 400 designs in his line, supplies almost every conceivable need for a modern floor material.

Plans Made Public For Summer Cruises

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(Special.)—Plans for summer cruises of naval reservists of Atlanta and for the members of the naval officers' reserve class at Georgia Tech were announced here today by the navy department.

Hill Election Case Reopened in House

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—The election contest of John Philip Hill, republican, against Vincent L. Palmisano, democrat, for the seat in the house from the third congressional district of Maryland, was reopened today before a house elections committee.

Counsel for Hill renewed the charges of fraud.

Palmisano's attorney directed attention to decisions of the Maryland court of appeals to the effect that provisions of the state election law, where not specifically set out as mandatory, are simply directory.

National Wholesale Grocers Convention To Open Tuesday

800 Delegates and 1,200 Visitors and Guests Expected To Be on Hand for Three-Day Session.

Approximately 800 wholesale grocers from all parts of the United States, together with their wives and other guests bringing the total number of visitors upward of 2,000 will convene at the Biltmore hotel Tuesday morning for a three-day gathering of their thirty-eighth anual convention, which will continue through Thursday.

A preliminary meeting will be held Monday with the gathering of the executive committee and the annual meeting of the board of directors. The executive committee will convene on the mezzanine floor at 2:30 p. m., while the directors will meet in the Pompeian room at 8 o'clock Monday night. All wholesale grocers arriving in Atlanta by Monday night are invited to attend the meeting of the board, regardless of whether they are members of the board or of the association.

Morning and afternoon sessions will be held throughout the convention with an elaborate program of entertainment scheduled for the visitors, including bridge luncheons, sightseeing tours of the city and its environs, theater parties and the annual banquet which will be held in the main dining room of the hotel Wednesday evening.

The convention proper will get under way Tuesday morning when it will be called to order by J. H. McLaurin, president. W. A. Albright, president of the Albright-England Company, of Atlanta, will preside and following the invocation by the Rev. D. Witherspoon Dodge, pastor of the Central Congregational church, Mayor I. N. Ragsdale will welcome the visitors to the city, as will Mr. Albright. The response will be made by J. D. Faucette, of Bristol, Tenn.

McLaurin To Speak.

After the selection of special committees on auditing, resolutions and nominations, President McLaurin will deliver the annual address, terminating the forenoon session. The afternoon will be devoted to an executive session for wholesale grocers only, during which, it is announced, matters of outstanding importance to all wholesale grocers will be discussed. Frank S. Gates, of Ardmore, Okla., will preside.

Visiting ladies will be taken on a tour of the shopping districts at 2:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, and at 7:30 that night delegates and their guests will be entertained at a party to be held at the Fox theater.

Wednesday morning's session, to be held under the presidency of August Janszen, Jr., of Cincinnati, will hear the report of the nominating committee and will proceed with the election of officers for the ensuing year, following which Wilbur R. Orr, president of the National Food Brokers' Association; C. E. Hume, president, National Canners' Association; George D. Olds, Jr., president, Associated Grocery Manufacturers of American, Inc.; Ray C. Thompson, director, American Wholesale Grocers' Association, and former State Senator E. D. Rivers, of Lakeland, Ga., will deliver addresses. An open forum then will be held on the subject of developments and organization in behalf of independent business men and community builders.

In the afternoon the visiting ladies will be entertained at a bridge-luncheon while the executive session, presided over by R. H. Rowe, of Washington, D. C., secretary of the association, will hear reports of the standing committees. Group meetings will follow to discuss questions of financing, warehousing methods, cost accounting, perpetual inventories, cash-and-carry departments and voluntary chain stores. Numerous other trade problems will come up for disposal during this session.

Final Day's Session.

The final day's meetings will begin with a morning session at 9:30 o'clock Thursday, with P. W. Robertson, of Valdosta, in the chair. A motion picture depicting the progressive grocer's retail modernization methods will be shown, following which Carl W. Dipman, editor of The Progressive Grocer, will deliver an address, as will Clarence E. Huck, of the American Wholesale Grocers' Association. An open forum will conclude the morning meeting.

At 2:30 p. m., Thursday the open forum will be resumed with general discussion invited, during which ladies of the convention will be taken on a sightseeing tour. At 8 o'clock Thursday night there will be held a general mass meeting in behalf of community builders, under the auspices of the Independent Merchants' Association of Atlanta, the session to be held at the Atlanta Baptist Tabernacle under the presidency of Edgar Watkins, of Atlanta, general counsel for the association. President McLaurin also will speak at this meeting.

Committees in charge of the entertainment of the visitors while in Atlanta are:

COLLINS ANNOUNCES FOR EDUCATION POST

M. D. Collins, for the past ten years superintendent of education of Campbell county, Saturday announced his candidacy for state superintendent of schools in opposition to Dr. M. L. Duggan, who has announced for re-election.

M. D. COLLINS.

Mr. Collins has had wide experience as an educator in the schools of Georgia and is prominent in secret order ranks in Georgia. He is vice councilor of the Junior Order of Georgia and deputy grand master of the Georgia grand lodge of Odd Fellows and is also an active worker in the Masonic fraternity, Elks and the Red Men. Before locating in Campbell county he taught and superintended schools in Gwinnett, Coffee, Hall and Walton counties. He was born in Union county in 1885 and graduated from Hiawassee High school and attended the University of Georgia and Mercer University.

In his announcement, Mr. Collins says:

"I am in favor of a liberal appropriation to the public school fund and shall fight for the prompt payment of the amount appropriated. I believe that the teachers are the most valuable employes of the state and that they should be paid as promptly as other employes are paid.

"I am heartily in favor of the equalization fund and the distribution of same in a way that will more nearly equalize every child's opportunity, thus giving each child the benefit of a nine-month school term.

"All candidates for governor and the general assembly are in favor of liberal appropriations for schools and the prompt payment of teachers. I purpose, if elected, to work with these other officials to relieve the present embarrassing school situation."

Executive Suite At State Capitol To Be Beautified

The executive offices at the state capitol probably will be the first on the main floor of the state house to be remodeled in the course of renovation now in progress, it was learned Saturday.

Plans for the suite, it was said, are to make it the equal in beauty to that of any state in the union. The walls of the governor's private office, it was learned, will be finished in mahogany, with paneling extending the full height of the walls from floor to ceiling. Similarly, oak panels will cover the walls of the reception room, and in the other rooms of the suite panels of other kinds of wood will be used.

A new and ornamental ceiling will be installed in both the governor's office and in the reception room, and the floor, of heavy cork, will be recovered.

Progress of the work last week enabled painters to refinish portions of the walls in the open lobbies. A white paint, with a slight tinge of gray, is being used. The first coat of paint also has been placed in the rotunda.

The present color of the interior is a drab brown to which the original two-tone color scheme of dark brown and tan placed a number of years ago has faded. It is pointed out that the light color selected for the interior will do much toward making the building brighter and more cheerful.

One by one the rooms of the state capitol are giving way to workmen who are cutting channels in the masonry for electric wiring conduits and making repairs. As each office is entered by the workmen business is temporarily transferred to another office, or suspended until the work is completed.

The rotunda and the south lobby are filled with scaffolding. On the third floor balcony movable scaffolds are in use, upon which workmen are repairing cracks and defects in the ceiling.

The geological, agricultural and natural history exhibits, always among the principal features of interest to visitors at the capitol, now are closed to the public. The various cases first were wrapped in heavy paper and later inclosed in protecting boxes of half-inch wood erected about them. Similarly their legs are wrapped and inclosed in boxes.

Officials and employes in the state house are finding some trouble in pursuing their work without interruption. At any moment the clang of a sledge hammer on a chisel or the clatter of a falling crowbar is apt to disrupt a conference.

Monk New President Of Emory Glee Club

George Monk, soloist, has been named president of the Emory Glee Club as successor to Albert Kelly. Billy Hunter is the new vice president and Robert Martin is secretary. Tigner Thrasher has been chosen by the executive committee as business manager.

David Goldwasser, this year's publicity chairman, will receive his Glee Club charm as a result of a special vote of appreciation for his work by the members of the club.

Dr. Malcolm H. Dewey, director of the club, announced that plans are under way for another tour of Europe by the organization in the summer of 1931.

SPECIAL SCHOOL BODY LAUDS KINDERGARTENS

Child Started Off Correctly and Given Better Groundwork, Committee Says.

Declaring that the kindergartens in Atlanta start the child off correctly—educationally as well as for its life work—a special committee from the Atlanta board of education Saturday released for publication an article designed to acquaint Atlantans of the educational facilities furnished by the public school system.

Text of the statement follows:

"Kindergartens were established in Atlanta in 1922 upon the recommendation of Strayer and Engelhart, educational experts from Columbia University, who made a survey of our Atlanta public school system about that time.

"The word kindergarten means 'child garden,' and therefore the meaning and purpose of the kindergarten is to furnish a stimulating environment in which young children can grow and develop.

"The kindergarten is the foundation on which all other school work depends.

"Children who have had kindergarten training pass through the grades with less retardation than children who lack it. First grade teachers throughout the country testify that failures in the first grade are reduced approximately 50 per cent where there are kindergartens.

"In the state of Georgia as a whole it takes two to two and a half years for the average child to get through the first grade. In Atlanta, where we have kindergartens, 85 per cent or more complete the first grade in one year.

"Nor are the good results of kindergarten training manifest in the first grade merely; they are cumulative throughout all grades.

Better Students Produced.

"For instance, last September the first of our children who had had the benefit of kindergarten training entered junior high school. Our records show that at the examinations at the end of the first quarter in junior high that out of all subjects taken this group of students failed in 5.6 per cent of the subjects, while the immediately preceding class entering junior high, in February, 1929, which had not had the advantage of kindergarten training, failed in 10 per cent of the subjects taken. This shows a reduction in failures of nearly 50 per cent.

"Kindergartens are extremely popular in Atlanta. There are kindergartens in every white elementary school in Atlanta. Many of them are on double session. The actual attendance upon our kindergartens is approximately 2,400 pupils. Perhaps there is no more popular feature of our school work with our patrons than the kindergartens.

"Pupils enter kindergarten at the age of five years and remain there one year.

"There are no kindergartens in the negro schools.

"Our kindergartens cost us last year $98,150. This represents a cost per pupil per year of about $44.50.

"Our schools as a whole are costing us approximately $60 per pupil per year. So kindergartents are costing one-fourth less per pupil than our schools as a whole.

"Kindergarten equipment must, of course, be equipment suited to children five years of age. You would not want unabridged dictionaries, nor world histories nor algebras for kindergarten children, five years old. You must have things that belong to the play-world, such as dolls, blocks, toys and other things of that class. These are the necessary tools of learning for the kindergarten children. Without this equipment there is no kindergarten.

Little Money Spent.

"The average amount of money spent on kindergarten equipment in Atlanta school system has been $50 per kindergarten This was bought out of recent bond money. Previous to this bond money the board of education had furnished no equipment for kindergartens. The parent-teacher associations, the principals and teachers provided some kindergarten equipment for certain fortunate schools; other kindergartens had little or none.

"A kindergarten properly equipped would cost $500 or more.

"The present-day schoolroom is a laboratory in which children work out problems of life. These include not only the mastery of such subjects as reading, spelling and arithmetic, but the solution of these problems in the modern school develops desirable social habits and attitudes.

"The playthings to be found in our kindergarten and primary grades are necessary to develop skill in reading, spelling and arithmetic, but they have a social value far greater than just that.

"The kindergarten starts the child off right in education, and, what is more important, in life."

Friends of Kipling Wonder At Masefield Appointment

:: SELECTION OF NEW POET LAUREATE IS PUZZLING ::

LONDON, May 10.—(AP)—While appointment of John Masefield as poet laureate of England was commended generally today, there was one popular school of British thought which wondered how much consideration was given Rudyard Kipling, and why Kipling, probably most widely known from his preachments on "The White Man's Burden," was passed by.

The post of poet laureate is awarded as official recognition of past literary achievement in the realm of poetry, rather than with the idea that the incumbent, like the court jester of old, will break into poetry upon certain public occasions.

Some of the critics today saw equal merit as poets in both Masefield and Kipling, and therefore looked further in an effort to understand why Masefield was picked from the two. There were many who recalled how Kipling incurred the tacit disapproval of the British court and the royal family with a famous barrack room ballad which Queen Victoria resented.

The ballad at point hailed "The Widow of Windsor," and commented on how she sent her soldiers to "barbarous wars" and asserted that she bought "'alf o' creation" with English blood.

Many held, however, that this could not be the reason Kipling was passed by, since only last year he was the house guest of King George at Balmoral castle, which, it was considered generally, was an evidence that all was forgiven and forgotten.

Some expressed the opinion that Mr. MacDonald, prime minister, to whom it was given to make the choice, would have found it difficult to name Kipling. Kipling probably more than any other figure in British literature has put into his work the doctrine of British empire, and has glorified so many of the wars Great Britain has fought. Mr. MacDonald and the labor party are, of course, greatly inclined to pacifism.

Many observers concluded that Masefield was chosen because he possibly was considered the more truly an English poet with his tales of Britain at sea—on which, Mr. MacDonald said at the opening of the naval conference, would always be found Britain's destiny—rather than Kipling with his rollicking barrack-room ballads, which do not always do England particular credit.

Andrew W. Smith Dies At New York Home

NEW YORK, May 10.—(AP)—Andrew Watrous Smith, retired financier and sportsman, died today at his home on Park avenue after a long illness. He was 72 years old.

He began his financial career in New Orleans. He owned many famous race horses that were trained on his farm near Lexington, Ky.

Surviving are his brother, Sidney J. Smith, and two sisters, Mrs. Alfred Kessler and Mrs. Flora Strafford, all of New York. He never married. He was an uncle of Earl E. T. Smith, who married Consuelo Vanderbilt.

A private funeral will be held at the home tomorrow and burial will be at Ballston, N. Y., where Mr. Smith's country home is located.

Gulf Will Rebuild Burned Oil Plant

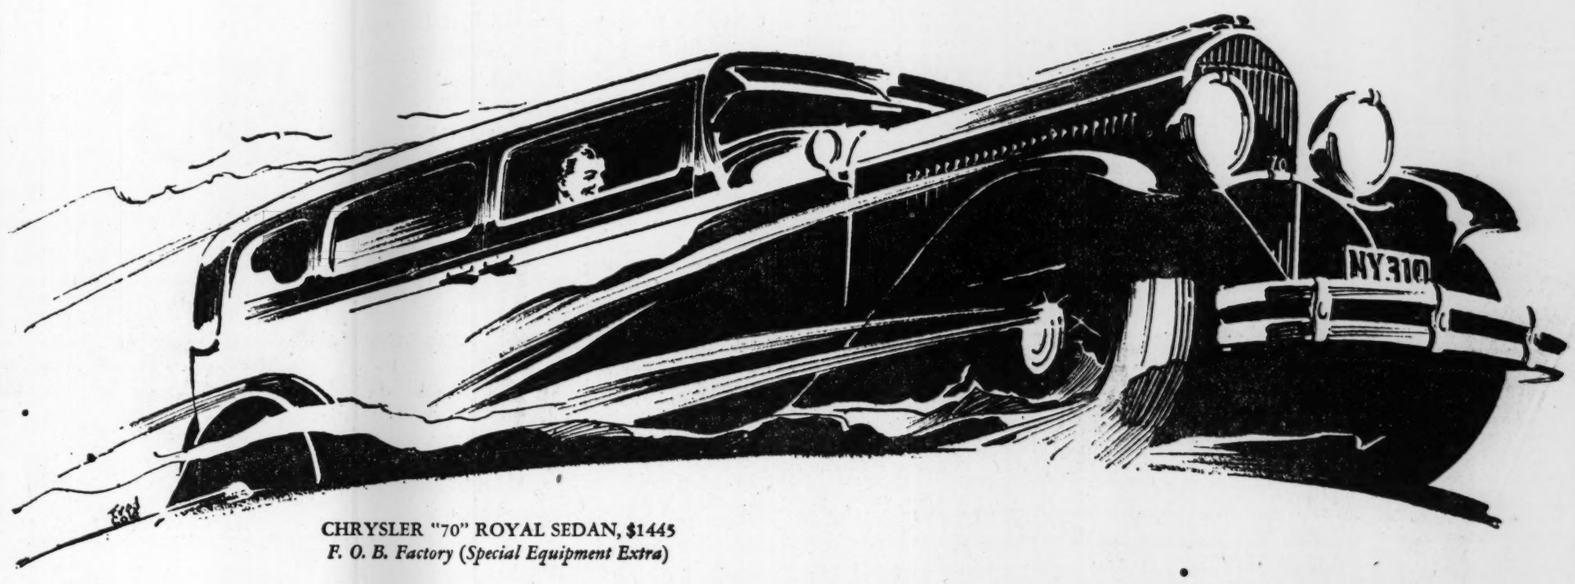

BAYONNE, N. J., May 10.—(AP) The Gulf Refining Company plant here, partially destroyed by a fire which still is burning but under control, will be rebuilt immediately, Charles B. Berger, vice president of the company, announced today.

Reconstruction work will start as soon as the blazing oil is extinguished and the ruins cool, he said. He estimated that it will cost $1,000,000 to replace the equipment destroyed. The flames gradually are subsiding.

Could I arrange for an investment program that would finance retirement from business in 20 years? Do you have any suggestions to offer?

By saving regularly each month for a number of years, a retirement fund can be established that will enable anyone with regular employment to build an income that will finance an old age of independence and comfort in later years. For instance, $40.00 saved each month and invested in Southern Natural Gas Corporation Preferred Shares will be $20,734.00 in twenty years. During this period, $9,600.00 would be the amount actually paid in, while $11,134.00 represents the interest that would be earned at 7% and paid into the account over a twenty-year period. This figure may be doubled or trebled, according to circumstances, by increasing the number of payments in proportion to the amount desired. COTTON CO-OPERATIVE GETS DOWN TO WORK

General Manager Creekmore Takes Charge; Headquarters Unselected.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 10.—(AP)—E. F. Creekmore, of Fort Smith, Ark., vice president and general manager of the American Cotton Co-operative Association, today was place in active charge of the association instead of waiting until August 1, as previously planned. Announcement of the action was made by directors of the association at the close of a two-day meeting here.

Through the action of the directors Mr. Creekmore was placed in complete control of the operation and personnel of the association, which comprises a number of offices in the United States and foreign countries that formerly operated as the American Cotton Growers' Exchange.

The directors said they contemplated no change in personnel by Mr. Creekmore.

The exchange formerly served as overhead agency for all the 15 state cotton co-operatives and through which sales of the various co-operatives were handled.

Under the terms of a contract drawn and approved by the directors today the American Cotton Co-operative Association in the future will handle all details formerly devolving upon the American Cotton Growers' Exchange and the various co-operatives, relieving them of the responsibility of transportation, warehousing, invoicing, insuring, classing and selling cotton of their more than 200,000 members.

The plans as announced by Carl Williams, member of the federal farm board, yesterday will enable the American association to handle 11 per cent or more of the entire United States cotton crop, the percentage depending upon the increase in membership in the various state co-operatives.

Mr. Williams pointed out that nothing in the contract would disturb the present relations between the state co-operatives and the members, but that it would relieve the state associations of a vast amount of details and would effect economies.

The contract will be submitted to the boards of directors of the 15 state co-operatives for approval and will become effective on August 1 for handling the 1930 and succeeding crops.

Allen Northington, president of the American association, and Mr. Williams both said they anticipated ready approval of all co-operatives.

The selection of a headquarters city for the American Cotton Co-operative Association was passed until the next meeting of the board. Houston, Montgomery, Atlanta, Birmingham, Memphis and Dallas have filed bids for the headquarters.

Gloria Swanson Denies Gifts to Hindu Mystic

LOS ANGELES, May 10.—(AP)—Gloria Swanson, screen actress, denied in municipal court today that she ever made any gifts to Swami Bantapha Raw, Hindu crystal gazer, as allegedly claimed by him. She was called as a witness against Raw in his preliminary hearing on charges of grand theft.

The actress declared she was not even acquainted with the defendant. Yesterday Mary Pickford denied similar allegations. Mrs. Adele Allerhand, who complained that Raw had obtained $4,600 from her, said he had claimed the two actresses, Charlie Chaplin and George Arliss, as his clients.

The court announced that a bench warrant would be issued for the arrest of Chaplin Monday if he avoids service of a subpoena. The prosecutor reported he had been unable to reach the film comedian.

The hearing was adjourned until Monday when Chaplin is due to testify. He and Arliss have denied knowing the fortune teller.

Unlicensed Radio Broadcaster Guilty

ST. LOUIS, May 10.—(AP)—George W. Fellowes, convicted by a jury of operating an unlicensed radio broadcasting station at his home here, was sentenced today by Federal Judge Charles B. Faris to serve one year and a day in Leavenworth penitentiary and then was paroled for deportation as an undesirable alien.

The sentence and parole were ordered by agreement between the court and defense counsel. Fellowes, a washing machine salesman, was turned over to immigration authorities to be deported to England.

He is the first person convicted for illegally operating a short wave length station under the federal radio act and his case was regarded as a test case.

Japanese Officers To Instruct Chinese

TOKYO, May 10.—(AP)—The Associated Press learned here today that an important agreement has been concluded between the Nanking government and the Japanese war office whereby at least 30 Japanese army officers would be employed as instructors and organizers by the Chinese national army.

The Japanese war office is selecting officers, mostly artillery men and engineers for this duty. The instructors will proceed to China during June and July and will be assigned to the Kanking War College.

TEXAS TORNADO KILLS ONE AND INJURES FIVE

Blow Strikes North of Capital; Great Damage to Crops.

AUSTIN, Texas, May 10.—(AP)—A tornado swept down on a section of Hill county 30 miles north of here today, killing one person and injuring at least five others.

The tornado hit in only a small area and property damage in the sparsely populated section was expected to be slight. The tornado apparently swooped down in the vicinity of Anderson Bend and traveled only a short distance before rising again.

Unconfirmed reports were that the home of Chris Sylvester had been destroyed and that Sylvester had been seriously injured. Other members of his family also were reported to have been hurt.

F. W. Tucker, 36, a lumber worker, was killed. Harold Johnson was seriously injured when struck by flying debris. Less seriously injured were M. S. Fletcher, L. G. Fletcher, W. H. Johnson and J. A. Tucker.

Tucker was killed when the six men who were in a house at Anderson Bend, rushed from the structure when the tornado struck. A heavy timber borne in the teeth of the gale, hit Tucker in the head, killing him instantly.

Johnson was caught under a falling truck, overturned as he sought shelter along its side. Three other motor trucks in the yard of the house were torn to pieces, one of them being lifted away.

The other four of the group which rushed from the dwelling were caught by the tornado and buffeted about trees and stumps.

Heavy damage was reported from other sections in the vicinity of Austin from rain and windstorms. Reports that Bertram and Burnet, two villages 50 miles northwest of here, were destroyed by a tornado were disproved when telephonic communication was re-established.

Big Sales Increase Reported by A&P

NEW YORK, May 10.—(Special.)—A steadily growing increase in dollar sales is shown in figures made public by headquarters of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company covering April. Sales for the four-week period ending April 26 totaled $86,137,806 against $77,324,008 for the corresponding period of 1929, representing an increase of $8,813,798 or a percentage gain of 11.40.

There was even a greater increase in tonnage sold, since the lower level of retail food prices enables a customer to obtain more merchandise for a dollar than last year. Figures for the month just closed were 404,319 compared with 359,129 for April, 1929, a gain of 45,190 or 12.58 per cent.

Wesley Memorial Concert To Close Music Week Here

The closing event of National Music Week, which has been sponsored in Atlanta for the seventh year by the woman's division of the Chamber of Commerce, will be a concert at Wesley Memorial church at 3 o'clock this afternoon at which Horace Russell, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, will make the principal address.

Both the senior and junior chambers have indorsed the work of the woman's division in the observance of a week devoted to bringing the attention of the people to an intensive consideration of music and the subject of Mr. Russell's address will be "The Value of National Music Week." Other numbers on the program for this afternoon will be an organ recital, "Piece Heroique," by Dr. Charles A. Sheldon, who also will contribute other numbers, including "Reve Angelique" and "Prelude and Toccata." Miss Margaret Battle, well known musician and director of music for the North Avenue Presbyterian school, will sing "Hallelujah" by Mozart; Mrs. Griffith Dobbs, of the Griffith School of Music, will give a selection on the harp. George Rogers, soloist of the First Presbyterian church, will sing "Eri Tu" and a group of songs, including "Sleep, Holy Babe," "Legende" and "Lift Thine Eyes" will be contributed by Gussie O'Neal Johnson, director of Agnes Scott Glee Club, accompanied by Professor C. W. Dieckman at the piano.

Every day of the week has been marked by varying programs, in which prominent musicians have taken part. Each day there have been band concerts at noon and at 5 o'clock in the afternoon by the following: Georgia Power Company band, Police band, Georgia Tech band, Tech High band and the letter carriers' band. The latter is composed of negro letter carriers. Colored schools and colleges also have been active in the observance of the week.

Italy Will Release Right to Emigrants

ROME, May 10.—(AP)—The Stefani News Agency, in what is evidently a statement inspired by government sources, tonight declared that new dispositions had been taken to guarantee all Italians resident abroad freedom from military service on returning to Italy, no matter what their age or length of stay.

A single exception will be made for Italians who return to Italy during their minority and at the time of calling up their class for service have resided in the country for more than two years.

The Stefani statement says that during the first three months of 1930 there were 2,701 Italian residents of North America and 4,841 from Latin-America who returned to Italy with Italian passports. None of them was obliged to do military service.

Boreas Makes Return To Rocky Mountains

DENVER, May 10.—(AP)—Near winter weather returned to the Rocky Mountain region today.

The cold extended from Montana down the eastern tier of the Rockies as far as Santa Fe, N. M., where snow was accompanied by freezing temperatures.

Fruit crops on the western slope of Colorado appeared to have suffered severely from frosts and freezing temperatures. Districts around Grand Junction reported temperatures as low as 18 to 26 degrees.

Santa Fe, N. M., ordinarily a stranger to cold weather, was visited by a brief snowstorm and the mercury reached 30 degrees. Heavy snow fell at Trinidad in southern Colorado.

As the storm struck at the height of the lambing season, heavy losses were predicted by livestock men.

Forger of Borah Papers Must Serve

BERLIN, May 10.—(AP)—Vladimir Orloff, Russian expatriate, sentenced to four months imprisonment last July for fraud in connection with forged documents alleging that United States Senators Borah and Norris had been bribed by the Russian government, must serve out his term. On the appeal of the public prosecutor, an appeal against the original sentence was quashed. The court upheld the sentence against Orloff, and against his accomplice, Pawlonowski.

MENTAL HYGIENISTS TALK OF RELIGION

Faith Is Attacked and Defended as Giving Hope to Hopeless.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—The religions of the world found both foe and friend today at the closing sessions of the first international congress on mental hygiene.

"Modern science has undermined all the ancient theologies and religious philosophies," said Dr. A. Eustace Haydon, of the University of Chicago. Declaring that the present age "is witnessing the greatest transformation of the world religions in all their long history," he warned against "the danger of using the traditional guarantees and compensations of the old theology in dealing with young people in this age of science."

Dr. Oscar Pfister, Swiss professor, in holding that mental hygiene and religion are mutually helpful, said that religion is often able to render harmless dangerous conflicts, "for it serves as a protection against harmful mental irritations and mitigates inner tension which otherwise may grow unbearable."

"Through religion," he continued, "those who are dissatisfied with their day by day existence, receive a relative satisfaction of their longings for a fuller life, for happiness and higher values."

There is need for a new religion, said Dr. Meyer Solomon, of Chicago, while expressing a "kindly and tolerant attitude" toward the old religions. Dr. Solomon said, "we need to lay before individuals certain goals in life so that they will be self-sufficient, and individually and socially good."

Dr. Harrison Elliott, of Union Theological seminary, envisioned mental hygiene as bringing to religion a conception in which it is possible to have love and ego expressions on a mature level rather than on an infantile or childish basis."

"Just as the child may grow into an adult relationship with his parents," Dr. Elliot said, "without being disloyal to them so it is possible to come to an adult relationship with God."

"Mental hygiene needs something outside of itself to aid it—and that is religion," said Dr. Paul Hanley Furfey, of Catholic University, who held that there was no substitute for religion.

First 340 Cities Report Big Gains

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—The first 340 cities of more than 10,000 population reporting 1930 census returns showed a 23.5 per cent gain over 1920. The 340 aggregated 11,623,358. In 1920 those same cities totaled 9,409,490.

The first 200 cities had shown a gain of but 19.5 per cent. This apparently mounting gain may be counteracted by the complete report of cities of more than 100,000. These larger cities have shown a trend to slow down in growth.

While more than half the cities of 10,000 or more have reported, only about one-third of the cities of 100,000 or more are included in that number. In 1920 there were 737 cities of more than 10,000—a total which probably will be increased to about 800 in 1930. Of the 737, the cities of more than 100,000 numbered 68.

Gob Steals Yacht To Desert Navy

MANILA, P. I.—(AP)—A new way of deserting Uncle Sam's navy has been introduced here.

Deciding that he had enough of navy life, a sailor tried to make his A. W. O. L. a matter of permanent record by leaving the islands in a yacht he had stolen.

With the yacht Intrepid, owned by Roy M. Barcal, prominent local yachtsman, he headed for China and he had gotten well started before it was discovered the vessel was missing.

Two navy seaplanes were sent to search for it. They found the lone "gob" sailing merrily along outside Manila bay and 16 miles up the coast to the north. When the deserter saw the planes, he dived overboard in an effort to reach shore and escape, but the planes landed and placed him under arrest.

Heir to Alfonso's Crown 23 Years Old

MADRID, May 10. — (AP) — The Prince of Asturias, heir to the Spanish throne, today observed his 23rd birthday. A recent decided improvement in his health lent especial cheer to the occasion in court circles.

Madrid was in gala dress. The national flags were flown everywhere in the streets, a special mass was held in the chapel of the royal palace, attended by the king and queen and the royal family.

For several years the health of the young prince, a sufferer from haemophilia, has been the cause of great concern in palace circles.

Naturally the report of a marked improvement in the crown prince's condition and his appearance at public functions was hailed with great satisfaction. The prince now indulges increasingly in physical exercise.

Paraguay and Brazil Sign Frontier Pact

RIO JANEIRO, May 10.—(AP)—Representatives of Paraguay and Brazil today signed a protocol settling a long-standing boundary dispute between the two countries.

Foreign Minister Octavio Mangabeira signed for Brazil and Fulgencio Moreno, Paraguayan minister, for Paraguay. The vexed question of ownership of Ilha Margarida, where police of the two countries clashed several months ago, was settled by the protocol.

A treaty dealing with the boundary dispute had been signed in May, 1927, but several further questions have since had to be negotiated.

Fliers Commended For Record Flight

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—Commandants of naval air squadrons which participated in a 1,000-mile record-breaking flight into New England were commended today by Secretary Adams, of the navy, for their "unprecedented record of reliability" on the maneuver.

All of the 139 planes were back on their ships at Hampton Roads, Va., after having flown 150,000 air miles with a broken strut, the only mishap. While in Washington yesterday they were inspected by Secretary Adams.

The flight was the largest single movement of naval aircraft.

American Killed By Bandits in S. A.

BOGOTA, Colombia, May 10.—(AP)—A payroll robbery today near Bucaramanga, something new in Colombian crime, resulted in the death of Paul Roy Keating, of Oil City, Pa., paymaster for the Tropical Oil Company.

Keating, accompanied by three other employes and a member of the constabulary, was carrying payroll funds of 135,000 pesos (about $33,350) in a pay car and safely reached the plant that was his goal. When he began paying the workmen, robbers appeared and opened fire with revolvers, killing Keating. Then they seized the car and compelled the driver to speed them away, later putting them out.

The Colombian government began searching for the assailants immediately and notified the American state department it would do all it could to capture the slayers of the 23-year-old American.

Because of the spectacular nature of the holdup, which has greatly excited Colombians, police believe it was the work of foreigners.

GIRLS' HI WINS TECH HI DEBATE

Girls' High debating projects for the year culminated in the annual Girls' vs. Tech High debate on May 1 in the G. H. S. music hall. The subject was most timely: "Resolved, That Chain Stores Should be Drastically Curtailed." Very interesting were the arguments of both the negative and affirmative sides. Madge Stewart and Helen Geffen, the G. H. S. defenders, were the proud victors.

A scientific exhibition including live ducklings, bees, flowers, and even miniature model homes, was displayed the latter part of the week in the alumnae room. All branches of the science department in co-operation with the home economics department combined their efforts in collecting the display.

"The Charm School," this year's senior play, was presented on the afternoon and evening of May 10 at the Atlanta Woman's Club. The production was both enjoyable and successful. Bertha England and Eunice Housmon, the leads, are considered ideal lovers by freshmen and seniors alike. The proceeds go to defray graduation expenses.

Plans for graduation have already been completed. Every day brings June a little nearer.

PUPILS OF FAITH FIRST GRADE WORK IN THEIR GARDEN

High kindergarten children are happy to welcome Betty Anne Holmes and Norma Westmorland back in school again, while Low 1 is also glad to have Laverne Chandler back after being absent for a long time.

High 1 gardens are growing and blossoming under the care of the children. Everyday the pupils hoe and water their flowers.

We enjoyed taking our lunch to the woods where we heard the birds and saw many spring secrets.

High 6 was very sorry to lose another one of its classmates, Dorothy Reagin, who was transferred to Gordon.

We now have only 37 pupils, but we hope we may all be ready to graduate together.

Faith school was very proud of the children who made requirements for athletic buttons this year. We were especially proud of Annie Lois Hammock and Lamar Cofield of High 6, and Winnie Little of Low 6, who made gold buttons. The ones who made silver buttons were Bertha Pratt, of High 5, and Mae and Mary Wingate, of High 6. There were 24 bronze buttons in all. We hope to do even better next year.

Jasper, Alabama, Police Fight Duel

JASPER, Ala., May 10.—(UN)—One policeman is dead and another probably fatally wounded late this afternoon as the result of a point-blank gun battle between the two officers on the main street of Jasper today.

Luke Suggs, shot through the chest and head, is dead, and Marvin Childers, another policeman, is in the Walker county hospital, with grave wounds.

Childers' pistol had been fired four times, and that of Suggs had been fired once, it was discovered after the shooting. No charges have been preferred against Childers, according to Sheriff Kilgore.

Eye witnesses said the two men were talking on the street in front of the courthouse when both suddenly drew guns and began to fire. No one knew what conversation had passed between them.

New Styles Produce More Noise in Women's Clothing

MEN'S APPAREL REMAINS SAME AS 20 YEARS AGO

NEW YORK, May 10.—(AP)—Modern feminine clothes are twice as noisy as were grandmother's, according to United States bureau of standards measurements announced here today.

This was one of numerous phases of sound presented to the Acoustical Society of America. On the more serious side was a discovery at Colgate University that loud noise partially paralyzes the stomach.

The racket made by modern styles was found while the bureau of standards was testing sound absorbing power of audiences with a view to giving engineers better data for building theaters, auditoriums and assembly places to improve hearing. V. L. Chrysler and W. F. Snyder, of the bureau, made the report.

The extra noise comes from failure of the new styles to absorb sound. Absorbed sound is noise completely swallowed by the object it strikes. No part of absorbed noise remains to be reflected back to increase the general hubbub.

Twenty years ago, said Mr. Chrysler, a woman's clothing absorbed 4.7 units, a unit being one square foot of complete absorption area. That is, grandmother's clothes were equivalent to letting the noise pass out through an open window of 4.7 square feet in area, but a woman today absorbs only like a tiny window of 2.2 square feet.

The cause of lower feminine sound absorption, Mr. Chrysler said, is not only shorter skirts but the difference in texture. Grandmother mostly wore wool or other heavy stuff, all fine sound absorbing materials, but the thin, silky creations of today lack the absorptive power. A woman has to put on her coat before she approaches grandmother as a silencer, and even then falls short of the record, rating only 4 units.

Men class as formerly, ranging from the equal of a four-foot window without overcoats, to 4.7 when overcoated.

By establishing the amount of sound absorption very accurately, the bureau enables engineers to get rid of the repeating echoes called reverberation. These can last as long as 15 to 20 seconds, Mr. Chrysler said, illustrating with the familiar droning announcement of trains at some large railway terminals. He said the slow speech is forced in order for the words to outlive the stronger position of the echoes.

At Colgate University four persons swallowed balloons inflated sufficiently to register the expansion and contraction of the stomach. The experiments were performed by E. Lawrence Smith, of the department of psychology.

They showed first the well known fact that when normal a stomach has a rhythmic motion of contraction and expansion. This rhythm was abruptly cut down by about one-third when the test room was filled with noise equivalent to the inside of a boiler factory or to a riveting machine.

This shock to the stomach was no temporary thing, but lasted through 10 minutes that the racket was continued. The noises had the same effect on all four persons, but its after-effects differed. Some of the subjects returned to normal slowly, but others showed an abnormal speeding up or intensification of stomach movements before becoming quiet.

Stomachs were similarly affected even under more commonplace noises, such as the equivalent of street cars, elevated and subway trains, newspaper pressrooms and motor trucks. These rackets slowed the action by about 10 per cent.

Dr. Harvey Fletcher, of the Bell Telephone laboratories, New York, was re-elected president of the Acoustical Society. Other officers re-elected were Wallace Waterfall, the Celotex Company, Chicago, secretary; Vern O. Knudsen, University of California, vice president, and Dr. E. E. Free, New York, treasurer.

Prison Conditions Deplored In U.S. by Sherwood Anderson

SOCIETY HAS TWO CLASSES, HUNTER AND HUNTED

MARION, Va., May 10.—(UN)—Man's inhumanity to man and prohibition are directly contributing factors to the recent epidemic of prison riots and revolts, in the opinion of Sherwood Anderson, novelist, who has fought for prison reform through columns of his two weekly newspapers which he publishes in the mountain town of Marion.

"The bullying attitude of so many officers of the law, congested prisons due to the fact that prohibition and other sumptuary laws are sending men to jail who shouldn't go there, together with an obstinate failure on the part of the public and public officials to realize that bad men are sick men who need the attention of a psychiatrist rather than a jailer," are other factors given by Anderson toward making up what he calls "our present deplorable conditions."

It was the Smyth county jail here, alleged by him to be badly outmoded and inadequate, that gave Anderson his impetus toward prison reform. He hammered at it through columns of the Smyth County News and the Marion Democrat until he obtained results. Residents of the county a few weeks ago passed a $25,000 bond issue to add more rooms and renovate those in use at present time in the jail.

"Sometimes I am inclined to divide humanity into two classes—the hunter and the hunted—and to say that society itself is sick," the novelist said.

Anderson's gaze riveted itself on the Smyth county jail. "I got started fighting that thing," he said, "when our county officers, humane and intelligent men, asked me to inspect it, to see for myself how bad conditions were. They were terrible.

"I found the inmates housed together in conditions of intimacy so obnoxious a hog would have been revolted. In one little 11 by 12 foot cell I found 19—19, mind you—men!"

Anderson paused, and then began to discuss prohibition. "I tell you another thing that's wrong with our criminal procedure," he said. "Instead of dividing America into hunters and hunted, it might be better to say that it is composed of those who get caught and those who don't. A man of some prominence may transport liquor without much fear of molestation, but the poor man gets it in the neck. Prohibition has put a lot of men in jail who shouldn't be there; or, if they should, at least half the grown-ups of the country, including many judges, should be there too."

Los Angeles Gain Close to Million

LOS ANGELES, May 10.—(AP)—A growth of 220.49 per cent in the past 10 years in the population of Los Angeles county is revealed in the census tabulations thus far for 29 communities.

Compilation of returns reveals for these communities a population of 361,868, compared with 112,908 in 1920, an increase of 248,960. The banner goes to Southgate, southerly suburb of Los Angeles, with an enumeration of 19,501, compared to nothing in 1920. In no area of the county reported has a decrease been found.

The five census supervisors within whose territory the city of Los Angeles is contained do not expect to be able to determine this city's population for another week or more. Newspapers, however, observing the progress of the enumeration, calculate the population to be in the neighborhood of 1,300,000, compared to 576,673 in 1920.

Montgomery Shows 65,801 Population

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 10.—(AP)—Census figures for Montgomery announced today by Dr. T. C. Casady, district supervisor, gave the city a population of 65,801, an increase of 51.1 per cent over 1920 figures.

The increase was 22,337. Since the 1920 census the city has extended its boundaries and annexed what in 1920 was the municipality of Cloverdale. The population in 1910 was 38,136.

Mississippi Delta Expects Flood River

NEW ORLEANS, May 10.—(AP)—While the Mississippi delta today was recovering from a deluge of near cloudburst proportions and high winds of last night, the United States weather bureau here issued a warning that the Ouachita river at Arkadelphia, Ark., would exceed flood stage by six to eight feet by Sunday morning.

Flood level at Arkadelphia is 12 feet and at Camden 30 feet.

Six-inch rains of late yesterday blocked highways in many sections of north Mississippi. Eight inches of rain was recorded in one hour and gale winds unroofed houses and blew down trees in Lowndes county.

Fish lake was out of its banks in Washington county. Bridges were washed away and the Leland-Greenville highway was blocked.

Minor damage was also reported from heavy rains in the Clarksdale area.

Widow of 2 Months Kills Children, Self

CHICAGO, May 10.—(AP)—Mrs. Albino De Porre, two months a widow, slew her three children today and committed suicide.

The tragedy was disclosed by neighbors who called at her cottage. The woman had slashed the throat of her eldest daughter, shot to death a boy aged 9 and a daughter, 11, and then cut her own throat and shot herself.

Poverty and grief over the death of husband and father were thought to have driven the woman to the act. The triple murder and suicide wiped out the family.

C. & O. Gets Permit To Improve Road

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—Arrangements to finance the purchase of more than $30,000,000 worth of new equipment for the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad and affiliated systems were approved today by the interstate commerce commission.

With the commission's sanction as given, the Chesapeake & Ohio will now be permitted to issue and sell $19,800,000 in equipment trust certificates, while the Pere Marquette, one of its subsidiaries, will likewise issue and sell $5,100,000 in like securities. The balance of the funds necessary to meet the cost of the new rolling stock will be supplied from funds on hand.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 10.—(AP) Two thousand, two hundred and sixteen stills, with 2,105,617 gallons of mash and 41,181 gallons of liquor, were seized by federal prohibition agents in Kentucky and Tennessee during the first 10 months of the present fiscal year, Ernest Rowe, acting prohibition administrator for the area, announced today. He placed the value of property destroyed at $160,730 and the value of property seized but not destroyed at $469,707.

According to Rowe, 6,307 arrests were made in the district during the period from July 1, 1929, to April 30, 1930. Four hundred and sixty-three automobiles were seized.

Superintendent's Message

My dear Boys and Girls:

This particular week has been designated by those interested in the development of air mail as Air Mail Week. I have recently sent out a letter asking that each of our schools write a letter to some school on the leading air mail routes of the United States. I sincerely trust that all of you will take an interest in this matter and see that you get some letters to some schools in the United States by air mail during the present week.

I sometimes think that in our study of transportation and of transmission of news we do not realize the amount of time saved in new methods and improvements in transportation and transmission of information. Possibly no one thing in the entire world is bringing about a better understanding between nations than the quickness with which we can travel from one country to the other, and the instantaneous way in which we can receive information all around the globe. There was a time when we sat around our firesides and simply listened to those who spoke at our elbows. The day has arrived when we can sit in our own homes, in our comfortable chairs, and in our living rooms and be at the fireside of all the people of the earth. It is possible in an instant to receive information from practically every civilized country in the world. This is bringing us to the point where we understand each other and where our love for each other becomes greater, and where the brotherhood of man really becomes a reality.

This wonderful improvement in our understanding of other nations does not lessen our respect and love for our own, and one of the best ways in which we are becoming acquainted with those of our own country, as well as other countries, is through the air mail service. Formerly it took 18 to 24 hours to get mail from Atlanta to New York. Now it takes only five or six hours.

Formerly the sending of information by mail from New York to San Francisco was a matter of four, five or six days, even with the very fastest train. Now Lindbergh can start at dawn and fly from 10,000 to 15,000 feet above the earth and reach New York in time for supper and rest. This is bringing the states of the United States into one great family. The air mail is saving time, and time is life. We are anxious to promote this great industry and to bring to the attention of our people the marvelous advantages which it affords. I am, therefore, writing to ask that the boys and girls of Atlanta public schools participate in the celebration of this week, and in this way help to further one of the great fundamental causes that will bring our entire United States close together.

Always your friend,

WILLIS A. SUTTON,
Superintendent of Schools.

Rum Runner Loses Fight for Vessel

MIAMI, Fla., May 10.—(AP)—Judge Halsted L. Ritter in United States district court here today refused to order return to its owner of the motor vessel "Fornella" seized July 29, 1929, in British waters while carrying 336 sacks and 30 jugs of liquor from Bimini to another Bahaman island.

The ruling was made in the case of George L. Ford, owner of the vessel, against John Kline, assistant deputy customs officer here, and Hugh Williams, custodian of the coast guard storage base. The vessel was seized 11 miles off of Bimini while Ford, an American citizen, and a mechanic Harry Jones, were hauling the liquor between the two British islands under contract with Eugene Sherman, a British citizen. Ford and Jones later were acquitted of a charge of violating federal prohibition laws.

Judge Ritter's ruling today was in effect that any vessel of American registry may be stopped, searched or seized by coast guardsmen if the latter believe it is violating prohibition laws.

He also refused to order the liquor returned.

Teacher Sues Head Of School System

CHARLOTTE, N. C., May 10.—(AP)—Miss Alice Warren, Charlotte school teacher, today filed suit for $100,000 damages against W. R. Foreman, chairman of the Charlotte school board's finance committee, and Aubrey M. Elliott, principal of Alexander Graham Junior High school, because of the school board's failure to renew her contract as a teacher for the next school year.

Miss Warren alleges in the complaint that Foreman "conceived the wicked, malicious and fiendish scheme" of revenging himself on Warren G. Myers, friend of Miss Warren, "by means of a diabolical plot to ruin the plaintiff in her good name, reputation, fame and credit."

Myers has a suit for $10,000 pending in court now against Foreman, his brother-in-law, who he alleges, defrauded him of that sum.

The complaint further alleges Foreman went to Elliott and secured his assistance in the conspiracy and that Elliott "in spite of the plaintiff's good record" agreed not to recommend her for re-election.

MURPHY STUDENTS ENJOY ATHLETICS AT MAY PROGRAM

May Day was one jolly day for Murphy High school! We had relay races, volley ball games, baseball games, jumps and challenges. Some children put sacks on their feet and ran in them. It was very funny watching them trying to run, then fall, and then up again. Annie Parker came first. A few of the children selected partners and tied the left leg of one child and the right leg of the other together and ran three-legged races. It was hard to try to run "tied up." Margie Woodbury and Vera Chandler won in this.

Friday afternoon there was a meeting of the house and grounds committee. The people present were H. O. Burgess, principal; W. R. Johnson, W. O. Saunders, E. A. Gilliam, R. R. Ritchie, Mrs. Paul West, Mrs. L. V. Kennerly and Mrs. J. L. Moore. They were entertained at a luncheon in our home economics department.

Seven High 2 sold the most tickets for the P.-T. A. play and won the $5 prize.

Mr. Jenkins' class had the most papers at the paper sale we had April 30. The prize was a picture, "Venetian Sunset."

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

GEORGE WASHINGTON.
First President of the United States.

The Life of George Washington. Commander in chief of the American forces during the war which established the independence of his country and first president of the United States, compiled under the inspection of the Honorable Bushrod Washington, from original papers bequeathed to him by his deceased relative. By John Marshall. The introduction is by Honorable Henry St. George Tucker, former president of the American Bar Association. Vols. I-II.

Mr. Tucker comments on the union of the two names. Washington and Marshall, and the interest that has always been excited over anything in which they appeared or were connected. This new edition of the life of Washington by Justice John Marshall, after the passing of 100 years in which there has been seen the progress and advancement in education, science, arts, and most of all in commerce, will naturally attract the attention of readers over the United States, and especially is it most valuable to the students of American history. It should be the property of every citizen for, as Mr. Tucker says, "the life of the greatest American, written by the greatest American jurist, cannot and will not, fail to attract the attention throughout the United States of the thoughtful men and women, who will find in it a mine of interesting facts and suggestions of the early administration of the government."

In the preface no excuse is necessary for the offering of a revised edition. It is still the belief that those days or that time was the most important in the history of American affairs. The history of General George Washington is still interesting and instructive from the time of his appointment as commander of the American armies. It is the history of America. And of all the writers of that time there is not one who could so ably wield the pen of patriotism as Judge John Marshall, a man whose watchword was ever justice. It is a great subject, discussed by a great jurist and is presented to the public after a careful revision. (Walton Book Co., New York.)

THE STORY OF WAGNER.
BY RALPH T. JONES.

If you are the kind of person who takes an intense interest in the personal life of a genius, you will enjoy reading "The Truth About Wagner," by Philip Dutton Hurn and Waverly Lewis Root, published by Frederick A. Stokes Company. For surely no volume ever went more carefully and exhaustively into the personal side of a life than does this about the immortal master of German music and opera.

The book is chiefly concerned upon recent discoveries of private letters, manuscript and other bibliograph of the great composer. Most of the items referred to are in the Burrell collection in England.

It is the purpose of the authors to destroy what has come to be known as "the Beyreuth tradition," about Wagner's creative years. They deny the assertion that Wagner owed his creative achievements to his second wife, Cosima, and instead credit the first wife, Minna, with exerting the influence which resulted in his immortal "Ring" series of operas.

The writers present a thoroughly credible argument for their theory and, after reading the book, one is inclined to agree entirely with their deductions.

But the feeling is left that, after all, it doesn't matter. For this commentator is one of those peculiar individuals who is interested in nothing concerning the life of a composer save his music, doesn't care anything about the morals of a poet if his verse is good and is quite willing to let a butcher indulge in as many secret vices as he cares to so long as he sells good meat at reasonable prices.

BY ELAM FRANKLIN DEMPSEY, D. D.

"Who Who Among North American authors" is no longer in its infancy but is a full-grown youth, the latest volume, Volume 4, 1929-30, containing 1,383 pages. A book of this size cannot any longer be called a "baby," although in the family of "Who's Who" it is not a very ancient member, the first volume having been issued in 1921. To the editor, Alberta Lawrence, there should therefore be extended hearty congratulations upon a remarkable success in bookmaking. This work is issued by "The Golden Syndicate Publishing Company," Los Angeles, Cal., and has already become a standard reference work in public libraries, universities, colleges and teachers' training institutes. It is stated also that "Many public school systems of our country have installed it as the textbook on authors of the school curriculum." For the courage and enterprise in producing this valuable work, the world of American letters is greatly indebted both to the editor and the publishers.

Volume 4 gives the biographical data of more than 10,000 authors and press writers of the United States and Canada; also data for Mexico and the various possessions of the North American countries will be found. The editor is careful to state that, "Inclusion cannot be paid for, the standard of literary excellence being the only admission possible. All sketches are gained direct from the author, insuring accuracy of detail and dates." This, of course, makes the work trustworthy and constitutes it a real authority in its field.

Over 90 Georgia writers are listed in this volume, including men and women, poets and prose writers, authors and journalists—all sections of the state and almost all callings in life being represented. Among the cities represented are Atlanta, Athens, Augusta, Macon and Savannah. It is interesting to note that many smaller places are also the homes of Georgia writers, as has always been the case in literary history.

By all means, we rejoice to see American letters advancing to a consciousness that is distinctly national and such a volume, by affording a meeting place in which all the writers may be studied without regard to sectional lines, is a distinct contribution to this desired end. It has been inevitable that our literature should be full of reminiscencies and echoes of that of other lands, but today it seems that we are attaining at last a flavor, a tang, that is especially our own and that is definitely American.

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

The Evolution of the Art of Music. By C. Hubert H. Parry. Revised edition with additional chapters by H. C. Colles, M. A. (Oxon), editor, third edition, Groves Dictionary of Music and Musicians, also music critic of the London Times. The history and growth of musical art are here followed in complete review—from the first and the simplest to the highest in musical history. (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

The Naval Blockade—1914-1918. By Louis Guichard, lieutenant in the French navy, attached to the historical section of the French ministry of marine, doctor of law. The London Times says: "If these matters are discussed at an international congress those concerned in the discussions will be ill advised if they neglect to study the facts which Monsier Guichard has so ably collected and presented." (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

Adventures of the Air. By E. Keble Chatterton. Author of "Through Sea and Sky." This thrilling story comes from "right across the arctic wastes, China and the Himalayas, charting a new route, Captain Harwood steers the Atalanta, first airship of the Anglo-American aerial transport, in a desperate race to Calcutta with the Illinois, owned by a gang of international crooks. It is a splendid story to be enjoyed not only by the lovers of the air, but by those who stay on the ground. (Lippincott's Book, Philadelphia.)

We Look at the World. A striking analysis of the growing world-consciousness of the American people, and the reactions of the world at large to our international thinking. By H. V. Kaltenborn. Published by Rae D. Henckle Co. In the very first place in this book the question is asked, "What do the American people desire in their relations with the rest of the world?" The author's motive in writing this book is to show what the rest of the world thinks of the Americans. He is looked upon as the country's foremost interpreter of international events. He is associate editor of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, is a lecturer of world reputation, and for the past seven years has been a weekly radio speaker, so it is through this book that a well-known man brings a worldwide message to his people.

"For the tug and mortal strain of nations come at last in peace—not war."

The Pattern of Life. A book demonstrating the system that has revolutionized child psychology. By Dr. Alfred Adler, in whose methods common sense goes hand in hand with science and introduces the reader into his clinic and uncovers the basic troubles of wayward and defective children. It is edited by Dr. W. Beran Wolfe. (Published by the Cosmopolitan Book Corporation, New York.)

The Home-Owner's Annual. Dorothy and Julian Olney. How to do things about the home and grounds and how to plan a home. Mr. and Mrs. Olney are graduates of Barnard College and Columbia University. They have traveled over the country in every direction and have finally settled down to real home-owners in White Plains, N. Y., where they are practicing what they are preaching through this attractive little manual, much of the manuscript of which was prepared by Mr. Olney in his 50-mile ride between White Plains and his office in New York. (Century's Book, New York.)

The Inside of Prohibition. By Mabel Walker Willebrandt, who was the well-known assistant attorney-general of the United States in charge of prohibition cases. This book is not only the "inside of prohibition" but the outside also from the viewpoint of Mrs. Willebrandt. She was connected with the attorney-general's office for eight or ten years and in this book she presents the cold facts "without fear or favor." Whether wet or dry, the story as told by the writer will be of interest, for it is a problem that is facing the people of the United States and one in which they should be vitally interested. (Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.)

Improve Your Memory. By Bertrand Lyon. Concentration of the key to mental mastery. By the author of "Practical Public Speaking." One of the daily questions of this century is "How can one's memory be improved?" Professor Lyon's directions are being fully tested and the soundness of his system is being admitted by everyone who studies it. The whole course is based on concentration, association and repetition. Selections from poetry and prose enrich the work, and it is really a good investment. (Lothrop Lee & Shepherd Co., Boston.)

The New Generation. A handbook for parents and a magna charta for children. Introduction by Bertrand Russell. This handsome book is edited by V. F. Calverton and Samuel D. Schmalhausen. Thirty-two famous anthropologists, physicians, psychiatrists, educators, psychologists and writers have contributed the essential product of their lifetime of study and research. The book is divided into five parts: (1) Parents versus Children; (2) The Child versus Civilization; (3) The Family Romance; (4) Potentialities of the Child; (5) Education and Enlightenment. (J. A. Macaulay Co., publisher, New York. $5.00.)

Plays and Pageants from "The Life of the Negro." By Willis Richardson. The real author of the pageants is Dr. Carter G. Woodson, though he did not wish his name to be used. There will be much interest in this volume and it will be of special assistance to the negro schools and churches. (The Associated Publishers, Inc., Washington.)

Toward Civilization. Edited by Charles A. Beard, editor of "Whither Mankind." The question, "Is modern life a jangle and a confusion or the prelude to a stronger and truer existence—a civilization?" This is a question that philosophers and moralists are still in doubt about. There's another question that is always being asked in this connection and that is, "Do they have faith in their work?" The contributors to this handsome volume are widely known writers. (Longmans, Green & Co., New York. $3.00.)

Plume of the Arawas. By Frank O. V. Acheson. The scene is laid in the picturesque region around Taupo lake and mountains in the heart of the North island of New Zealand. It is the well written story of the brown man of the southern Pacific—navigator, warrior, mystic and bard. The author writes interestingly of the past and the future of this race of Caucasian descent and ancient lineage known to the world as the Maori of New Zealand.

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

The Go-Between. A New Novel by the Author of "The Unknown Daughter." By Therese Benson. "Can a woman fall in love with a man who is only a name to her?" The question can be answered after the reader finishes this story of a double impersonation which has an interesting and romantic ending. The characters are a well-known American writer who, at the beginning of this story, hied away to a little Connecticut farmhouse to put the finishing touches on his last novel; among the characters are a manuscript reader, an old friend of the novelist who not only steals his pen name but his check also, and makes an effort to play the same game the second time, and then comes "Go-Between," a young girl, a Chinese-American, who is unusually clever.

These characters the author has woven into a most interesting story of mistaken identity and plenty of entanglements. It is a wholesome story with plenty of charm that will please the reader. (Dodd Mead & Co., New York).

The Royal Woman. Heinrich Mann's latest masterpiece. In Germany this story was published under the title, "Eugenie: or, The Bourgeois Age," and proved to be a splendid seller.

This great author has written this book in his ripest maturity—it is two stories told simultaneously, the story of an upper middle class family, and through them, as symbols, the story of Eugenie, Napoleon Third and Kaiser William. The crisis of the story comes when the characters are acting out an amateur play about Eugenie and the police step in. The novel is cleverly told, is called a masterpiece. The author, Heinrich Mann, is well known as an able portrayer.

He has tried to be a "European," rather than a German. He was one of the first to labor for a true conciliation of minds between France and Germany. In 1927 he was officially received by the faculty of letters of the University of Paris and delivered the now historic address, "Toward an Intellectual Locarno." (Macaulay's Book, New York).

Yoked With a Lamb. By Helen R. Martin. The author of these stories, the daughter of a minister who spent many years in the Pennsylvania Dutch settlement, has written a number of interesting and entertaining stories of the "up-country" people. There are 10 stories in this collection, all of which will be thoroughly enjoyed. (Dodd Mead & Co., New York).

The Pitcher of Romance. By Richard Washburn Child, ex-Ambassador of the United States to Italy. This writer long ago was placed on the list with Kipling and others whose work has long been appreciated by the readers of today. The story treats of the daily life which is unknown only to those who are walking through the world with eyes closed. Some reader says that all the stories written by Washburn have a touch of DeMaupassant in them, they describe present-day situations in which the leading wish of each character is to find romance, one way or another. The book contains 12 short stories in which there are no dull lines. (J. H. Sears & Co., New York).

Hollywood Gold. By Phyllis Gordon Demarest. If you want to know the real story of the movie people out in Hollywood, the author tells it without any frills or furbelows. It is a real human interest story in which the characters are men and women who are everyday workers. (Macaulay's Book).

JUNIOR BOOKS.

Young Heroes of the Bible. By Anne Stoddard. Introduction by Rev. S. Parkes Cadman. This book contains a collection of beautiful stories from the Old Testament adapted for reading aloud to the children about Isaac, Joseph, Rebekah and other best-loved heroes of the Bible. The book is divided into four parts. The illustrations are by the well-known artist, Arthur Zaidenberg. (Century's Book, New York.)

A Yankee Girl at Richmond. By Alice Turner Curtis. The juniors who have been reading this series about the Yankee girl at Bull Run, Shiloh, Gettysburg, Vicksburg, Lookout mountain, and others, will thoroughly enjoy following Molly Brooks during her stay in Richmond. (Penn Publishing Co., Philadelphia.)

When I Was a Girl in Hungary. It is a long jump from Richmond to Hungary, but Elizabeth Pongracz-Jacobi, with illustrations from photograph, is prepared to tell you an interesting story about the "Children of Other Lands," and this time it is the story of her childhood days. (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co., Boston.)

The Scout Jamboree Book. By Fifteen Boy Scouts, from whose stories this book was taken. With a foreword by James E. West, chief scout executive. While this book will be of interest to any boy, it will be of special interest to the boys who were unable to go on the World Jamboree. It reveals page by page all the excitement experienced of the great adventure in which 50,000 Boy Scouts from all over the world took part. While the newspapers gave most of the interesting news featured at the time, it was not like reading the real true story of what the boys experienced. After a hundred manuscripts were submitted, all of which they claim were excellent, the stories as told herein were accepted. (G. F. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

The Boast of the Seminole. By D. Lange, author of popular Indian stories. Illustrated by Harold Cue, tells this time about a sergeant in the United States army, station at Fort Brooke, Florida. It is a thrilling story with a splendid plot and one which will interest both boys and girls. (Lothrop, Lee & Co., Boston.)

Lakewood Park To Have Health Pageant Tuesday

With the Fulton County Health Day pageant postponed from Friday to Tuesday afternoon, a big Sunday school field day planned for the coming Friday and Saturday set aside for the ancient auto congress and intercollegiate motor marathon, Lakewood park is in for a busy week.

Four dances, three of the regulation modern type and the other an old-time square dance, will round out a full quota for the amusement resort. The standard weekly schedule of Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday night dances with Rudy Mincey as the musical maestro and the Wednesday night old-time affair with the Dixie string band in charge, leaves Monday as the only day of the week in which something special is not slated.

Maypole dances by ten schools, drills and exercises by a dozen others from Fulton county, coronation of Harold Russell as king and Martha Burson as queen of health, and the health pageant proper will mark the Tuesday afternoon program in front of the grandstand. Thirty-nine county schools will be dismissed after morning recess period so that the most colorful of the Health Week presentations can be given four days after it was originally planned. Friday morning rains caused the postponement.

Friday afternoon, May 16, from 4 to 6 o'clock, the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer will have its annual field day on the race track, in front of the grandstand, followed by fun on the Midway and a surprise feature.

Saturday the wheezing motors of collegiate flivvers will be the order as pilots of ancient autos from Georgia Tech and other schools compete in the first annual intercollegiate motor marathon and old car congress. City and county thoroughfares and the mile race track at Lakewood will be the scene of the antiquated gathering.

The following week's piece de resistance will be the annual police barbecue on May 21.

Gallant Fox and Crack Brigade Give East Edge in Derby; Georgia Beats Tech, 4-3, To Sweep Two-Game Athens Series; Crackers and Volunteers Split First Double-Header Here

Across the cotton fields comes a chorus of wails from seven Southern league baseball lots. Seven of the eight entries in President Martin's championship race seem to have disappointed the old home towns.

Only the Memphis faction seems satisfied. The Chicks are breezing along, full of fire and brimstone, making the other clubs look not unlike the Bloomer Girls.

One detects in the New Orleans prints that the Pelicans lack something and "things will be better" (indicating that things now are not as good as they might be). The Pels are several games behind the Chicks, but hope to catch up in the present series.

Tuning in on Chattanooga, the third-place club, one hears timid murmurs as come from the darkened room where the man is getting over the effects of a wild night at the frat house. The Lookouts started out to win 154 games out of 154 and have fallen a bit short of the mark so far.

From the direction of Birmingham come the plaintive wails of Zipp Newman, who wonders "where this bad streak of baseball is coming from." Zipp adds that Manager Clyde Milan will "have to shake, rattle and roll his Barons; they couldn't do a thing right for doing it wrong."

Little Rock is disheartened over an early start for "the champions" that was not exactly impressive. Furthermore, the desertion of two stars was a blow.

Alarmed at the poor showing of the Bears and incensed by the effort of President Jimmy Hamilton to move the club to Knoxville, the complaints are loudest just now from Mobile.

And from Nashville come cries of pain that are intensified by the insistence of Manager Rowland that he has the championship team of the league.

Atlanta fans had their turn at the wailing wall early and have settled down to watch the club fight its way along to better things. The uproar here has almost died out.

TOO MANY PROMISES.

Probably the unusual situation results from the over-optimistic predictions of managers before the season opened. Only Johnny Dobbs and Larry Gilbert were quiet; the others promised pennant winners.

All the clubs looked entirely too good before a game was played. The test of competition showed up no more than the usual run of weak spots.

Pretty soon one or two of the others will get going and give the Chicks a battle. But now the unrest is general.

STRIBLING EXCURSION FAILS.

Pa Stribling's fears were realized. Phil Scott ran out of his fight with Young Stribling. Soon the Striblings will sail for home. What promised to be a profitable adventure turned out to be nothing but a voyage.

Stribling knocked out a big German in his only fight in England and his showing in that engagement was probably what made Phil feel so bad.

The Striblings probably will sail in time to view the Sharkey-Schmeling bout in New York and begin negotiations for a match with the winner.

If Schmeling wins they might land it, but if Sharkey takes the fight, they will be far from a big shot.

It is not likely that Sharkey again would consent to fight Stribling. He beat Stribling once by a hair-line decision in a poor fight and knows when to leave well enough alone.

GALLANT FOX, CRACK BRIGADE GIVE EAST EDGE

High Foot and Tannery West's Outstanding Derby Horses.

By George Daley.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 10.—William Woodward's Gallant Fox will move on the Kentucky Derby at historic Churchill Downs, Louisville, Ky., next Saturday the most popular and shortest priced favorite of recent years. His manner of winning the Preakness stakes over the Pimlico track Friday was so convincing of his quality, speed and stamina that another pot of gold, equal to the $51,950 just earned, appears to be at his mercy.

Barring accidents he is likely to complete the famous double accomplishment confined heretofore to Sir Barton.

The Preakness was a real test. Earl Sande found himself engulfed for five furlongs but he guided his mount through the perils of pockets and interference to a glorious victory after a bitter head-and-head drive through the stretch with T. M. Cassidy's Crack Brigade. Gallant Fox was forced to close a gap of seven lengths to reach a contending position on the back stretch and this proved his quality and class.

STRONG ENTRIES.

The east will be strongly represented at Louisville with two such color bearers as Gallant Fox and Crack Brigade.

The Kentucky Derby ever has been a magnet for racing fancies and the fifty-sixth renewal next Saturday promises to eclipse all others in brilliancy of scene.

Lord Derby will be there. The seventeenth earl of that name, made even more famous because his family founded and gave title to England's great turf classic, has made a special visit to this country to see the running of this famous fixture which borrowed his name. He himself will stand with the stewards and present to the proud and happy owner of the winner the gold cup which goes as a trophy. Lord Derby then will broadcast his impressions of our derby over an international hookup.

All of 60,000 racing fanciers gathered together from far distant points will watch the heroic struggle and a million or more will listen to hear the earl talk and to learn the name of the winner.

Governor Sampson, of Kentucky, has issued a proclamation declaring Derby Day a holiday. That shows in what esteem the race is held and how deeply the visit of Lord Derby is appreciated.

FAVORITES WIN.

In recent years favorites have fared well at Churchill Downs. Four of the last six—Black Gold, Bubbling Over, Whiskery and Reigh Count—raced to victory. Flying Ebony (in the field) was second choice in 1925 while Clyde Van Dusen had a strong following last year when he splashed his way through the slippery mud to beat a big field including E. R. Bradley's Blue Larkspur, the favorite and eventual champion of the three-year-olds of 1929, and leading money winner of 1929.

As usual the rumblings of intersectional controversy are being heard. Over a stretch of ten years the score is even at five each. The odds this time are in favor of the east, in quality if not in numbers.

E. F. Pritchard's Tannery and the Valley Lake stable's High Foot are the favored ones of the middle west. The former has just refused an offer of $50,000, made by George Collins, for the son of Ballot-Blemished, which shows how high he is on his candidate. He prefers to gamble on the chance for racing glory rather than to accept what amounts to the value of the purse with a thank you. Furthermore the colt has been backed from 100 to 1 to 6 to 1.

HIGH FOOT.

High Foot, son of Prince Pal-Belle Fair by High Time, also has been backed in the future books from 50 to 1 to 6 to 1 by R. J. and M. A. Nash, his owners, who stand to win a small fortune if he gets down in front. This colt had a short winter campaign at New Orleans, where he showed so much promise that he was hewed out of the Louisiana Derby, which he had at his mercy, for the sake of shooting at bigger game.

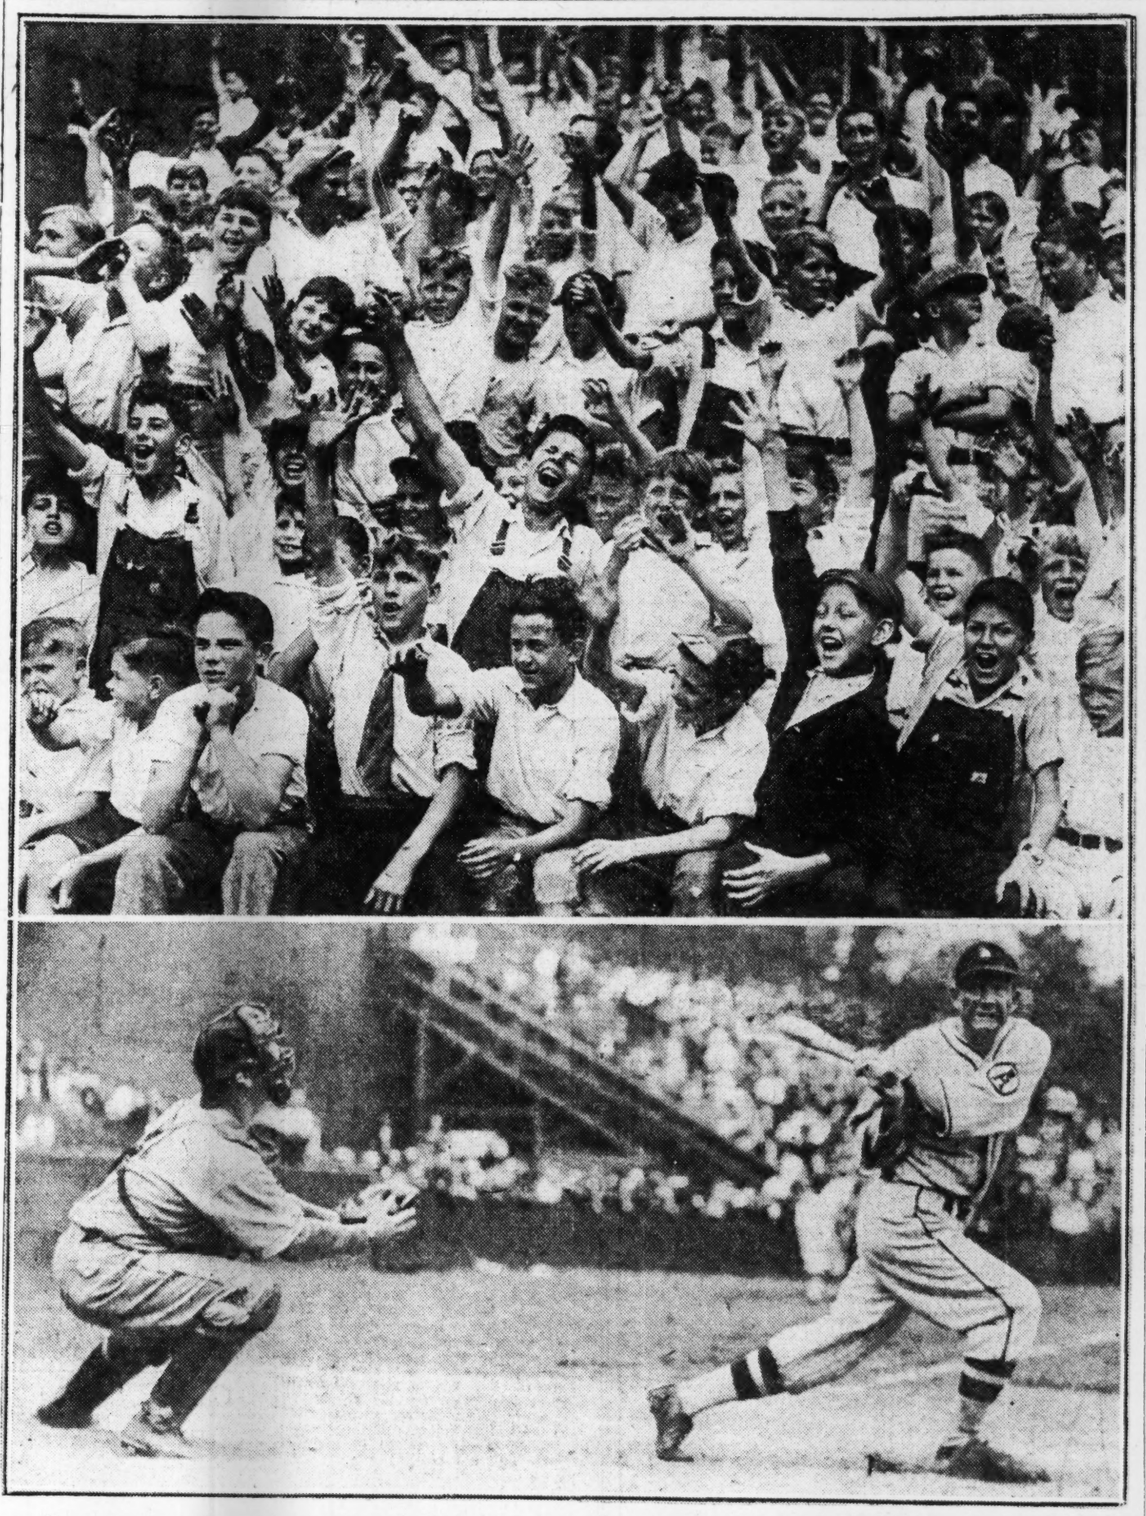

Tannery has proved his mettle on the track this spring winning two races and is in prime condition. A week ago he easily beat E. R. Bradley's Breezing Thru and Buckeye Poet, running a mile and a sixteenth in the fast time of 1:44 2-5. This just about killed the last hope of Mr. Bradley, who long has been ambitious to be the first owner to win the Kentucky Derby three times. He and H. P. Whitney have each scored twice.

Other western horses which can be marked as having some sort of a chance are B. B. Jones' Gallant Knight, winner of the Breeder's futurity last fall, and J. N. Camden's Sydney, which was hampered by a vile temper last season but which has improved in disposition as a gelding.

MANY OUT.

The hazards of racing have cut deeply into the ranks of our leading three-year-olds with the season still young. Four of the first dozen already are out of competition. H. P. Whitney's Boojum, winner of the Hopeful stakes, has been laid away for a year with a weak tendon; William Ziegler's Spinach, beaten a head by Flying Heels in the Pimlico futurity last November, strained his back in the running of the Wood memorial; the Everglade stable's Dedicate, probably the best in the west, suffered a leg ailment, and on the eve of the two $60,000 races, Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt's Desert Light popped a splint only last Wednesday. So are four of the best lost to racing for the present, at least.

Knothole Gang Roots as Crackers Divide With Vols

No matter how the score goes the Knothole gang at Spiller field is always loyal. They may be seen above cheering the Crackers as they divided a double bill with the Vols Saturday. Boys under 12 are admitted free each day to the games. Below is the final act in the first game which the Crackers lost. Sam Langford, Cracker outfielder, is shown missing the third strike for the final out, leaving two men on base. Langford fouled off eight balls before missing. Note the strain depicted on Langford's face. He took a terrific cut at the ball but could not connect.

GRIMES CLEARS LEFT FIELD WALL WITH HOME RUN

Blethen Loses Opener; Meadows Wins; Fielders Have Big Day.

By Ed Danforth.

Two rip-snorting baseball games were spun out yesterday afternoon in Spiller Field with rain clouds hanging low, occasionally spraying the athletes and the bleachers.

The Nashville Basement Bargains won the first one 4 to 3. The Crackers won the final by the identical score and kept the Nashvilles down there in the cellar.

Over six thousand people, an old fashioned noisy crowd that was not yet surfeited with baseball, as are crowds in August, took both the defeat and the victory of the home club in good-humored uproar.

BLETHEN FAILS.

Climax Blethen, breathing fire with his fast ball and weaving geometric designs with his curve, turned back the Vols for seven brilliant innings in the first game. Then he tired and the Vols drove them back at him so fast that the game was lost before Manager Johnny Dobbs could warm up Dumovich as relief. Blethen blew up without a word of warning, like the gasoline stove of ancient narrative. Climax showed great improvement over earlier starts; he should be ready to win next time out. They wore the old boy down in the Brooklyn training camp and he has never been the same.

Lee Meadows high carded the Vols in the seven inning nightcap and while he grew careless in the last frame and had two bad breaks in fielding behind him, he came through in good shape to win.

SPECTACULAR FIELDING.

Both games were marked by spectacular fielding from the home nine. The hired hands were taking crazy chances and making good on them. Si Rosenthal was the particular Cracker defensive star. Si twice climbed Billygoat Hill and pulled down drives from the bat of Jim Poole. Either lick would have been over the short right field fence at Nashville by a mile.

Roy Carlyle, the Norcross boy who has been out yonder and has come back close to home to ply his trade of fence busting and fly chasing, broke into the second game, replacing Elton Langford in left field. Every time he came to the plate the mob gave him a big warm hand. Roy was signed and Jim Battle was dropped by the waiver route just in time for the second game. That was the only change in the roster yesterday which sets a new low record for the season.

Bill Barrett, evidently a prime favorite with the customers, also drew plenty of applause for just being there.

What with applause for sensational fielding and at the end of every inning nearly every Cracker had his personal ovation. It must have sounded downright cheerful to the young men of the Dobbs household.

TARHEELS LOSE TO PRINCETON

PRINCETON, N. J., May 10.—(AP) Princeton's track and field team halted North Carolina's winning streak today, winning a dual meet, 80 2-3 to 45 1-3. North Carolina had won seven straight dual meets before tangling with the Tigers.

Princeton would have won by an even more impressive margin had it not been for Farmer and Brown, each of whom recorded two firsts for the southerners. Farmer won the 100 and 220-yard dashes and Brown the discus and javelin throw. The only other double winner of the meet was Summerill, of Princeton, who captured the 120-yard high hurdles and the broad jump.

The outstanding individual performance of the day was turned in by Hudder Dawson, of Princeton, who broke the college record for the mile, which he covered in 4 minutes, 20 seconds.

Princeton won eight events to five for North Carolina, with one tie, Austin, of Princeton, and Ruble, North Carolina, splitting the first and second-place points in the pole vault when they deadlocked at 12 feet.

Ivey Griffin Joins Little Rock Club

MOBILE, Ala., May 10.—(AP)—Pitcher Floyd Van Pelt, formerly with the Chattanooga club, was signed today by the Mobile club, according to Manager Jimmy Hamilton.

Ivey Griffin, former first-sacker of the Milwaukee club, with Atlanta last spring, joined the Little Rock club here today. He was purchased from Milwaukee for $3,000, according to Manager Jack Steele, of the Travelers.

NEW ORLEANS, May 10.—(AP)—Louisiana State University's track team defeated Tulane today, 62 to 55, in a close meet.

WYKOFF LOWERS CENTURY RECORD

LOS ANGELES, May 10.—Frank Wykoff, University of Southern California sprint star, today lowered the world's record for the 100-yard dash when four timers clocked him in 9 2-5 seconds. The feat was accomplished at the Southern California A. A. U. championship track meet at Occidental College.

Wykoff eclipsed the record by one-fifth of a second without the aid of starting blocks. His mark equals that of George Simpson, of Ohio State, whose time with starting blocks is under consideration for approval for the world's record.

Southern California won the meet with 93 points and the Los Angeles Athletic Club was second with 75.

Alabama Divides Bill With Aggies

A. & M. COLLEGE, Miss., May 10.—(AP)—The Mississippi Aggies today checked the victorious stride of the University of Alabama Crimson Tide, taking the second game of a double-header, 6 to 4, after the Tidesmen had won the first encounter, 4 to 3, in 12 innings.

The loss was Alabama's third within conference circles this season. The games ended the Aggie season except for a brace of games with the University of Mississippi.

GEORGIA AGAIN DEFEATS TECH

Bulldogs Rally in Ninth To Sweep Series; Score 4-3.

By Buck Anderson..

ATHENS, Ga., May 10.—Making their last appearance in a baseball game on old Sanford field, three Georgia ball players worked their way to the bases in the ninth inning of the second Tech-Georgia game here this afternoon. Two of them came home when Cliff McGaughey, Bulldog shortstop, singled into center field to send in the tying run and the winning run and sweep the series here. The score was 4 to 3.

All ball games have a hero but this particular game had four heroes. Hero No. 1 was Captain Harry Gorman, who played his last game at home in a Bulldog uniform this afternoon. Harry came to bat in the ninth inning with Tech leading, 3 to 2. Not having hit in three previous times at bat, Brosnan, Tech hurler, may have thought that the Georgia catcher was his meat. If so he was grossly deceived. Gorman took a slam at one and sent the ball into right field for a clean base knock.

Jimmie Murdock, Georgia's star hurler, also making his last appearance here, obligingly kept his bat on his shoulder while Pitcher Brosnan sent four balls past him.

Roy Day, scrappy little third baseman and a senior, too, was next at bat for the Bulldogs. He connected with one of Brosnan's offerings for an infield hit. Three Bulldogs were perched on base.

FOURTH HERO.

The fourth hero of the contest then appeared on the scene. Cliff McGaughey walked up to the plate.

Spiller Knothole Gang Likes To See 'Em Score

Youngsters Still Have Pitchers for Hero—John Dobbs Is Favorite.

By Ralph McGill.

Ah, lack-a-day! These children of ours in this, our materialistic age.

Out at the corner of Spiller field there is a stand which the Cracker ball club erected and in which boys under 12 years of age may sit and watch the games free of charge.

"Spiller's Knothole Gang" is their designation.

This reporter visited Saturday as the Crackers were engaged in getting a lead on the Nashville Volunteers in the first game of the double-header. Climax Blethen happened to be on third at the time.

"Blethen right now because he is on third base. Any one would know that," they said.

Oh, me, these children!

They enjoy the ball games as few people do. Their knowledge of the game is not as deep as it might be. They do not care for the sacrifice or the little rollers. They watch that plate and the runners that cross it. These boys of today have come around to the old American custom of winning, so much depreciated by our English cousins.

They have their theories and they have their heroes, but they pay off at the plate. As who doesn't?

Times haven't changed so much, however. The pitchers remain the big shots with the boys.

THE OLD URGE.

The old urge to pitch or catch seems to spring eternal within the 12-year-old human breast. It is the old sense of the dramatic, the old ego which makes a man imagine himself the center of the stage always.

Climax Blethen was still a hero

Hamilton Seeks 'Road Team' Status

Reports from Mobile Saturday were that Jimmy Hamilton, owner and manager of the Mobile Bears, had requested the league to make his team a "road team." All of which means that the Bears would play all games on the road, an open confession that things have collapsed financially at home. R. J. Spiller, of the Crackers, said he had not received a request for a vote. They are said to be in the mail. It is not thought that the request will be granted. Hamilton's recent request to move the franchise to Knoxville was refused. It is thought that he will be forced to sell out.

TECH NETMEN DEFEATED, 7-0

Tarheel Tennis Squad Sweeps Matches on East Lake Court.

Without losing a single set and pushed hard only twice, the Tarheel tennis squad of the University of North Carolina kept its record clean Saturday afternoon by trimming Georgia Tech's netmen by a 7-0 count.

The victory, Carolina's ninth straight, was achieved with almost as little difficulty as the count indicates. The set scores were deuced on but two occasions, both in the doubles, and each time the Tarheels pulled out safely.

Hendlin, who won the Carolina intercollegiate singles crown some time ago, subdued Williamson, Tech's fiery red-head, at 6-2, 6-2, to start the day's rout. Merritt, winning from Goldin at 6-4, 6-2, kept the parade moving. Liskin defeated Conniss, 6-1, 6-3; Graham downed Reybold, 6-4, 6-2, and Baggs won from Napier, 6-3, 6-2, to give the lads from Chapel Hill a clean sweep in the singles.

Hendlin and Liskin, doubles champions of the Carolina tourney, repulsed Goldin and Williamson after a hard battle at 10-8 in the first set but swept on easily to run the match at 6-2. Merritt and Graham, breezing to a love victory in the first set of their match with Conniss and Reybold, had a bit of trouble in the second set but won through at 8-6.

Both the Tarheels and the Jackets are slated to play in the Southern conference tournament at New Orleans the latter part of this week.

Benny Leonard Finds Max Eager To Get Down To Work

KNUTE ROCKNE TAKES CHARGE AT NOTRE DAME

Coach Shows Old-Time Spirit as He Directs Irish Work.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., May 10.—(AP) Knute Rockne, the "vital Viking" of Notre Dame, came back to his football world today, bristling with his old time vigor and determination to mold another invincible gridiron machine.

Showing scarcely a trace of the illness that forced him from the football wars last fall, the Notre Dame wizard dismissed solicitous inquiries as to his health upon his arrival and hurriedly plunged all conversation into a discussion of forward passes, line smashes and punts, of which he is a master teacher.

Only a slight limp was noticed in his right leg, long attacked by a blood clot, or thrombophlebitis. During his sojourn at the Mayo clinic, Coach Rockne said, the blood clot was definitely halted and his complete recovery, long in doubt, was assured. Coach Rockne came directly to South Bend today from Rochester, Minn., and will return there for final observation in June.

No sooner were greetings over today than Rockne was busy looking after athletic affairs at Notre Dame. He hustled about, gave orders to the student managers, and then conferred with his assistants, who have been directing spring football practice during his absence. In the afternoon, he got his first glimpse of his 1930 edition of his football team, made corrections and sent it back to the proof room.

Whether the spring practice will be continued for a few more days was not decided. His assistants, "Hunk" Anderson and Jack Chevigny, have been pushing the Ramblers through hard spring workouts for several weeks.

The Notre Dame campus is planning a big reception to celebrate his return to the gridiron and to what seems to be good health.

"I feel fine and am ready to go," said "Rock." "My physicians believe they have stopped my trouble and while I am not going to take any more chances, I am confident all is well. The team? Well, I don't know yet. We lost some good men from last year's team, but if some of the boys come through we will have a good team."

George Fisher Has Been Around Plenty

The spring hitting sensation of the National league, George Fisher, of the Cards, has had considerable experience in baseball, and John McGraw is not the first big league manager to let him go.

Fisher at 18 was a pitcher in the Eastern league. Joe Cantillon got him and made an outfielder of him at St. Joseph. He hit .352 and .359 two years and then was sold to Washington. Then followed a year at New Haven, two years at Minneapolis and three at Buffalo. He has always hit over .300.

Glenna Tries Course

Glenna Collett, American woman's champion and captain of the United States woman's team, is shown practicing on the course at Sunningdale, England. The American team will meet the English team in a series of matches, beginning May 12 and concluding May 17, at Formby, England.

Stars and Bars Wins Rich Race

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 10.—(AP) Stars and Bars, from Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney's Green stable, today won the $10,000 Clark handicap as the racing season opened at Churchill Downs. The Audley farm's Easter Stockings ran second with Hal Price Headley's Pigeon Hole third. Stars and Bars, an outsider in the wagering, paid $28.30 and stepped the mile and sixteenth in 1:47 2-5.

Star Shines.

Paul Murphy, star back at Penn, has signed as assistant football coach at the University of Kansas.

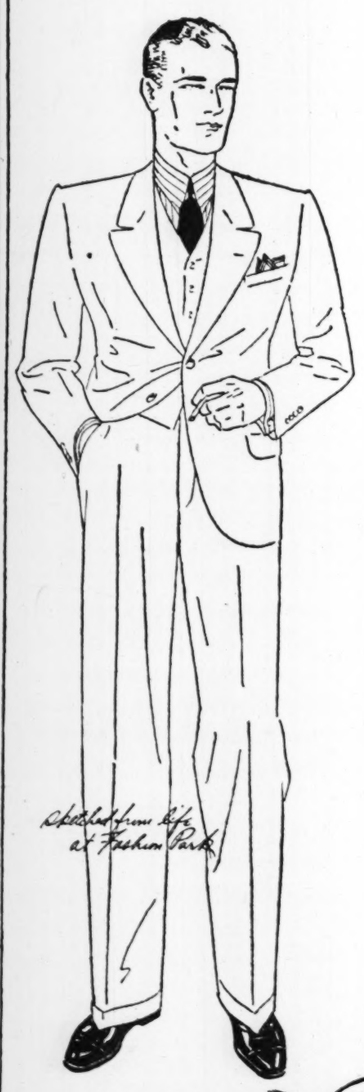

Yale Crew Wins Triangular Regatta

DERBY, Conn., May 10.—(AP)—The Yale 150-pound varsity crew scored its second victory of the season today by defeating Harvard and Princeton in the annual Goldthwaite triangular regatta on the Housatonic over the Henley distance of 1 5-16 miles. The time for the winning boat was 6:33 2-5. The course record is 6:28.

Harvard finished second in 6:35, just a bare half length behind the Blue and Princeton was but four-fifths of a second behind the Crimson.

The water was fairly smooth and a slight breeze helped the boats along.

WILLING TIES BRITISH STAR AT SANDWICH

Two Will Play Today for St. George's Vase; Women Are Ready.

By Frank H. King,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

SANDWICH, England, May 10.—(AP)—Dr. O. F. Willing, with a rock-like steadiness which has made him a famous figure of the golf links, today tied with Rex Hartley, young British Walker Cup player, at 148 for the 36-hole competition for the prized St. George's vase and an 18-hole play-off tomorrow will decide the issue.

The Portland, Ore., dentist thus has another chance to win the trophy for which he also was in a tie in 1923 with Francis Ouimet, his fellow countryman. Ouimet defeated him by a stroke in a play-off.

MINOR BATTLES.

The struggle today marked another phase of the 1930 American offensive against the citadels of British golf, but all the Anglo-American battles thus far are but minor engagements compared to the big events coming next week.

A score of American girls will be among the 180 starters in the British women's championship at Formby Monday and the international team play for the Walker Cup is booked for Sandwich Thursday and Friday.

Events since the arrival of the visitors indicate the closest sort of competition in the major encounters. Glenna Collett's team of women made an impressive showing against their British women opponents at team play. The British professionals barely fought off a single handed drive by Horton Smith on the northern professional championship and an American today gained a tie in the St. George's Stern medal play quest.

FINISH WELL UP

The four players from the United States entering the play today for the 42-year-old cup all finished the first round among the half dozen leaders, but Don Moe and George Voigt were later betrayed by the treacherous weather.

The Channel sun smiled on Moe as he returned a sparkling 71 for the first 18 holes to tie the Hon. Michael Scott, scion of a famous British golfing family for first place, then the weather gods stirred the gales and the youth who shot a 71 a few hours before needed 87 to negotiate the course in the afternoon and probably he learned more of the vagaries of British golf today than he dreamed could be learned.

STEADY GOLF.

Willing followed a safe 75 in the morning with a good 73 in the afternoon, while Hartley shot 75 in the first round and 73 in the second.

Voigt returned a 72 in the first round but his putter failed him in the second and his best was 78 for a total of 150.

Von Elm finished with a score of 153, taking 75 in the morning and 78 in the afternoon. The Detroiter required 25 strokes for the last five holes, including the short 16th in his string of five straight fives.

Moe had a tragic experience in the gale, taking an eight at the fourth, where he used four shots in a bunker.

Dr. Willing brought his great experience into play in the wind and his only serious error of the afternoon was a pushed shot at the short 16th, which caused him to take a four for the par hole.

WOMEN ARE READY.

In northern England, where American girls are awaiting Monday morning, they practice a little today and plan to rest tomorrow. Glenna Collett, runner-up in the British championship last year, was modest as usual in discussing her play. Mrs. Stewart Hanley, however, declared that the American champion is completely on her game. Should she fail, the Americans believe they have others in their party able to step into the breach. The women players have a great inspiration for the championship at stake never has been carried to the United States.

Bobby Jones remained in London today and did not hit a golf ball. With Roland MacKenzie, Francis Ouimet and Jimmy Johnston, he will motor to Sandwich tomorrow and the Walker cup forces will start practice in a body Monday over the layout where the international classic will be fought out later in the week.

Garden's Agents Turn on the Heat

It was a long cold winter and a long cold spell with predictions for a rather cool summer. But the press agents of Manhattan do not believe in predictions.

First heat waves for the Sharkey-Schmeling fight are loose.

Jack Dempsey is commuting to the Mayo's clinic. He, too, will defend the honor of the U. S. A. should Max win.

Hoey and lots of it. Tunney won't fight the German, or any other nationality. Dempsey may fight Max or Primo or someone else if there is a million in it. But Dempsey doesn't mind the publicity so long as he is on the stage or promoting fights or writing for the papers. It's good stuff.

Davis Cup Team Is on Its Way

The Davis cup team may not startle the world this year, or even next, but it is on its way.

John Doeg, George Lott, Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn and Berkeley Bell are quite youthful. They're all under 25 years of age and great improvement can be hoped for.

Bill Tilden and Francis Hunter are old men of the game. They are still brilliant in spots but they certainly are not getting any better. They're not likely to figure this year. Both say they are through.

The youngsters should restore tennis prestige to America in a very short time and keep it here.

Young fellows are coming up in all sports. The stars of the various sports are youthful. The last two or three years has witnessed the passing of many great performers. The youngsters hold the stage on all fronts.

DECKS CLEARED FOR U. S. OPEN GOLF TOURNEY

Qualifying Rounds Start on June 16 in 20 Sections.

By Harland Rohm.

CHICAGO, May 10.—Though the national open championship is nearly two months away, the United States Golf Association has completed its arrangements for all the preliminaries necessary to the biggest of major tournaments. This thirty-fourth annual championship will be held at the Interlachen Country Club at Minneapolis, July 10, 11 and 12.

The qualifying rounds will be played in 20 sections on June 16, the number of qualifiers in each section to be determined by the size of the entry lists. Entries must be received at the U. S. G. A. office, 110 West Forty-second street, New York city, by May 27. Every golfer, whether exempt from qualifying or not, must send in his entry along with the $5 fee. Amateur entries are limited to those with a handicap rating of three or less. Entrants must specify in which sectional rounds they will compete.

FINALS LIMITED.

Only 150 players will be eligible for the championship rounds, the number including the 31 who finished in the van in last year's championship. Members of both the American and British Walker cup teams are exempt from qualifying, and ten places will be held open for visiting foreign professionals, also exempt from qualifying.

Ga.-Ala. League

CEDARS WIN, 7-6.

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., May 10.—The Huntsville Springers lost a heart-breaking game this afternoon to the Cedartown club of the Georgia-Alabama league. The final score was 7 to 6.

The game was marked by the fighting spirit of the Huntsville boys and the home run by Hammond, of Huntsville, and Kelley, Cedartown first sacker, who connected for the circuit with one man on.

Higinbotham, of Huntsville, was again a hitting star, securing three hits and two runs out of five trips to the plate.

Huntsville had three men on and two out in the ninth when Barnes grounded out.

Cedartown	102	210	100	7	7	7
Huntsville	122	000	100	6	12	1

Seagraves, Kitrell, Smith and Clark; Frazer, Gray and Patterson.

CLOSE ONE.

ANNISTON, Ala., May 10.—Country Hand stepped into the breach left open when Ledbetter weakened and held the Talladega Indians to one hit and no runs after they had knotted the count at five all in the eighth. His mates then produced the winning run in Anniston's half of the frame and thus a ball game was won, 6 to 5.

Pickelsimer, who broke up Friday's game with a home run, tied the count today with one man on base. The Indians were unable to touch Hand in the ninth, however, and the Nobles took the series, two to one.

Talladega	100	000	220	5
Anniston	032	000	010	6

CHAMPS WIN.

LINDALE, Ga., May 10.—Carrollton made it two straight by defeating the Pepperells here Saturday, 8-6, in the opening game of the season before a thousand spectators.

Lott, on the mound for the Pepperells, was no mystery to the champs and they combed him for 13 hits and seven runs in eight innings. They got one more run in the eighth on two errors. Lindale took an early lead but the champs counted three times to tie the score in the fourth and were never headed after that stage. East, Carrollton manager, led the hitting with three for five while West duplicated this feat for Lindale.

Carrollton	600	310	301	8
Lindale	210	010	020	6

Bainbridge Meets Thomasville Nine

BAINBRIDGE, Ga., May 10.—Thomasville will play Bainbridge in a Georgia-Florida league game here Tuesday afternoon, May 13, at Centennial Park. Bainbridge lost her second game with Tallahassee, Fla., here Thursday, 11-5, as well as the first. Tuesday afternoon in the capital city. A big crowd was on hand.

J. M. Simmons pitched the first ball while James, Lane and Alverson opposed Langston and Miles for Tallahassee.

Farrell Says Bob Has No Weakness

Johnny Farrell, former open champion, has looked Bobby Jones over and says:

"Bobby is hitting his mashie niblick shot surer than I have ever seen him. If there has been a weakness in his game it was with this club but he seems to have it under perfect control now."

Cadets Behind Cagle

Announcement That Army's Football Star Will Resign Brings No Censure From Men or Officers.

By Jane Dixon.

WEST POINT, N. Y., May 9.—Christian K. Cagle, the young man who so often beat his own shadow across football fields for the Army and brought thousands of fans to their feet with admiration of his skill, will not exchange the cadet gray for the khaki of the service. He has officially declared his wish to resign immediately following his graduation.

Cadets and officers at West Point understand Cadet Cagle's problem and do not resent his move. They agree it takes considerable courage, despite the alluring offers Mr. Cagle has to enter civil life, to break the ties that bind him to the service. He feels deeply the obligation he owes the nation for the splendid education it has enabled him to obtain.

"Why pick on Chris?" one cadet, who must remain unnamed, observed.

"In the last five years approximately 50 cadets have resigned soon after graduation. Five resigned last year. It would be rank discrimination to hold up Cagle's resignation just because he is an outstanding football player. Chris has more than paid his way in the academy. He has given unsparingly of his loyalty and his genius as a tactician and an actual combatant.

"What an officer he would make! He can deliver a better decision, snap judgment on the field than a majority of us can make by working an operation from formula. I haven't been in the army myself, just a student, but I feel sure the service is losing as much if Cagle resigns as the academy loses this year when he is graduated."

REAL OFFICER.

Major General William R. Smith, superintendent of the military academy, in commenting on Cadet Cagle's announced intention to resign after graduation said:

"If the war department accepts Mr. Cagle's resignation, the army will lose a young man who has all the potential qualities of a military leader. The aggressiveness, determination and initiative he has displayed on the football field is the best evidence of that statement. As captain of last year's Army team he showed great ability as an organizer and his sportsmanship was an inspiration to his teammates.

LOSE MANY.

"After his graduation from the military academy he leaves the jurisdiction of my headquarters and I have no information as to what action the war department will take when his resignation is received. The early resignations of young graduates means that the nation loses for many reasons a number of officers of great value, even though most of them now hold commissions in the organized reserve or the national guard.

"While it may be considered premature to have permitted Mr. Cagle to announce his plans of resigning a commission he has not yet received, I authorized it because of the public's interest in this young man.

"If he leaves the service he will go with the best wishes of the officers and the corps of cadets for his welfare."

Major Phillip B. Fleming, graduate manager of athletics at the United States Military Academy, has watched the meteoric flight of the young Louisianian into the heights of gridiron fame since Cagle's plebe days. Major Fleming, too, regrets that the Army star has found it expedient to resign.

$125 PER MONTH.

"Cadets come to the military academy from good homes," Major Fleming says. "We educate and train them to live on a plane which is at least equal to the one they left. When a cadet enters West Point he knows that when he is graduated and commissioned into the army his pay will be $125 a month as a second lieutenant, and he is satisfied with that amount.

"Then, as young men have done since time began, he finds the right girl and thinks of marriage. This is precisely what happened to Mr. Cagle. His engagement to a young woman in his home town was announced a year ago last December. Undoubtedly in weighing $125 a month, which he would be paid when commissioned, against the salary he would receive as a coach, which is equal to that of a major general, he has considered his obligations to his future home."

Major Ralph I. Sasse, new head coach of the army football team, admits a dual reason for his disappointment in Cagle's resignation.

"I had made all plans for Red Cagle to coach the army backfield this fall and instruct his successors how to carry the ball as expertly as he did. However, I feel that Red is carrying the ball in the best way possible under the circumstances."

Captain Laurence (Biff) Jones, who developed Cagle into the high powered football star he is, holds the same opinion as his fellow officers at West Point. Captain Jones says:

SQUARE SHOOTER.

"Cagle is a square shooter and he never could be any other kind. He received an offer within the last month to coach Mississippi A. & M. He refused the offer. Back came a letter raising the offer. Again he declined. The third time he was asked to name his own figures. To end the correspondence he opened a telephone book and picked out a number which he thought was so high it would never be touched. In doing so he named his own salary, for the number was immediately accepted.

"It is probable that the sane financial problems that have caused Cagle's resignation are confronting other cadets, as resignations for similar reasons have been accepted in the past."

While the nation's press is discussing this young red-headed menace of many a football field, he is calmly reposing on a cot in the cadet hospital, alongside of George Perry, his teammate who played right tackle on the army team, still playing the game together. Both had their tonsils removed on Thursday and are under the care of Colonel Shockley, post surgeon.

Coach Kid Clay, of the Yellow Jackets, took advantage of the lull in activities to send Lefty Powell, his left-handed ace, onto the mound to relieve Brosnan, who was in a deep hole. Powell took the regular three up throws and Tubby Walton yelled, "Play ball." They did. McGaughey took one hitch in his trousers and pulled on his Red and Black cap. Powell threw one right down the alley to the Bulldog shortstop and McGaughey hit a scorcher that passed just over second base and ended up in center field. Harry Gorman streaked for home with Jimmie Murdock running him a close second. Both halves of the Bulldog battery crossed home plate. The ball game ended with a mob of Georgia students swarming on to the diamond.

TECH STARTS.

Tech started right off with a bang in the first inning and sent in two runs before Red Terrell grounded out to shortstop to retire the side. "Leg" Pullen singled into center field. Duck McKee went Pullen two bases better and tripled along the first base line, to send home the first run of the game. Tom Jones, playing in center field for Tech, grounded out to Murdock. McKee was safe at third. Harper lifted a long sacrifice fly to right field and McKee scored. Terrell went out, McGaughey to Rothstein. Day opened Georgia's offense with a single, the first of three by the little Georgia third sacker. But his efforts went for naught when McGaughey, Downes and Rothstein went out in order.

Tech went in for their second inning at bat with the determination to put over some more runs. Hank Preston started off with a single, and the Tech supporters in the stands yelled. Ike Farmer grounded out to Roy Day. Lew Frink strolled down to first base a few seconds later when one of Murdock's offerings grazed his uniform. Brosnan grounded out to Davenport, as Georgia missed an easy chance for a double play. But it didn't matter anyway, for Catfish Smith backed up to the fence to snag Pullen, on a fly ball, for the third out.

Georgia failed to score in their half of the second, although Catfish Smith hit a double. Tech went up in three up, three down style to open the third.

GEORGIA'S FIRST.

Jimmy Murdock tallied Georgia's first run. Murdock led off the third and took first on an error by Preston, Tech first sacker. Murdock came to bat four times in the game, and got on base every time, although he made only one hit. He walked twice. Day singled, making two on base for the Bulldogs. Cliff McGaughey sacrificed and Murdock went to third while Day was taking over second. Austie Downes grounded out. Bennie (the Great) Rothstein walked. Ike Farmer allowed one of Brosnan's throws to get past him and Murdock scored. Brick Davenport struck out and retired the side with Day and Rothstein still on base.

Tech failed to score in the fourth. Red Terrell flied out to Downes. Hank Preston struck out and Ike Farmer walked, but was caught off first by Murdock's throw to Rothstein for the third out.

Harry Gorman and Jimmy Murdock got on base for Georgia in the fourth after Smith and Hamilton had grounded out. Jimmy Murdock walked. But it all went for naught when Roy Day flied out to Lew Frink to retire the side.

ANOTHER RALLY.

Frink started off the fifth for Tech with a single and was sacrificed to second by Brosnan. Leg Pullen got his second single of the game to score Frink. McKee skied out to Hamilton and Tom Jones grounded out to Day. Tech was unable to get another run over for the remainder of the game. Captain Terrell threatened in the sixth when he took first on an error by Davenport and went to second when Catfish Smith fumbled the grounder that had passed through Davenport's legs. Terrell went to third as Preston went out to Day. The Tech captain was left standing on third when Farmer flied out to Smith.

Frink again singled for Tech in the seventh, but went out, Davenport to McGaughey, as Brosnan was safe on a fielder's choice. Pullen flied out to Davenport, and Duck McKee hit a grounder to McGaughey who touched second for the third out. Only three Tech players faced Murdock in the eighth. Tom Jones opened with a single. Jones was out at second, Smith to Davenport, when he tried to stretch his single into a double. Harper and Sewell grounded out.

TECH MISSES.

Tech missed a chance to score in the ninth when Frink singled after two were down. Brosnan hit to Day, who threw to second to catch Frink for the third out.

Georgia went scoreless in the fifth inning, when McGaughey, Downes and Rothstein went out in order. The Bulldogs, however, brought the crowd that filled the stands to their feet when they tallied one run in the sixth and just failed to tie the score. Brick Davenport walked, and Catfish Smith joined him on the bases when Pullen dropped Smith's grounder while trying for a double play. Ed Hamilton hit to Brosnan, who threw to Frink to catch Davenport at third. Brosnan caught Catfish Smith off second base for the second out. Harry Gorman took first on an error by Hank Preston, as Ed Hamilton took over third. Jimmy Murdock then singled to left field to score Hamilton. Roy Day grounded out to Brosnan, for the third out.

Only six Bulldogs faced Brosnan in the seventh and eighth innings and matters looked bad for the Bulldogs' cause. That is they looked bad until the ninth innings.

PARADE STAGED.

Prior to the beginning of activities this afternoon the annual senior parade an event which always occurs before the last Tech game in Athens was held. The Georgia band headed the parade and when the Red and Black harmonizers marched past the Tech bench playing "Rambling Wreck," the crowd applauded. The crowd yelled madly when the band played "Glory" as it marched up to the Georgia bench.

One of the floats "pulled one" on Tech, however. A cot on a one-horse wagon was occupied by a golden-bedecked figure in Tech uniform, while a Red and Black dressed player stood over the reclining form of the "Tech Man." The Georgia player was bedecked with footballs, basketballs, golf clubs, track shoes and baseball bat, representing the victories Georgia has won over Tech this year.

Georgia fans saw the last of five great Georgia players this afternoon. Captain Harry Gorman, Jimmy Murdock, Roy Day, Brick Davenport and Bennie (The Great) Rothstein will pass into their niche in Georgia's hall of fame after the Tech games in Atlanta next week. All five have been consistent players throughout the three years they have played on Georgia's baseball teams. Murdock has been one of the greatest pitchers ever to hurl for Georgia. Captain Gorman has been an outstanding catcher. All three of the graduating infielders were among the best ever to see service in Georgia uniforms.

TRAINING GRIND FOR SCHMELING BEGINS TODAY

Twenty Sparring Partners Will Be Lined Up for German.

By Benny Leonard.
Retired Undefeated Lightweight Champion of the World.

ENDICOTT, N. Y., May 10.—The real training grind for Max Schmeling will be under way Sunday. The German's period of relaxation and recreation is over and, beginning with Sunday afternoon, his regular routine of boxing, bag punching, shadow boxing and other forms of exercise will start.

Joe Jacobs made a wise move, in many ways, when he cancelled that proposed trip to Hartford. The first one to uphold his decision was Tom Donohue, boxing commissioner of Connecticut, in whose honor the dinner which Schmeling was to attend was given on Friday night.

The trip to Hartford entailed a seven-hour journey there and another seven back, and this would have thrown Schmeling back at least a couple of days in starting his training. As a matter of fact, it would have put him farther back than that for, as I remarked in my first article, Schmeling was pretty well fagged out, physically and mentally from the strain of the strenuous week here and he has just about recovered from the effects of this strain.

SHOWED STRAIN.

This was noticeable in his game over the Enjoie golf course. Whenever Max happened to miss the ball which he did on one or two occasions, the big German grinned good naturedly and became not in the least bit flustered. He simply and calmly took another swipe at the pill, and invariably made an excellent shot on the second occasion. Perhaps the fact that Eddie Murray, the pro at Enjoie gave him a few pointers may have had much to do with it, but Max made a much better showing on his second attack on par than he did last Thursday.

I already have told you about the general aspect of Schmeling's camp here. Now, how well is he equipped with that very important factor of his training, the sparring partners? Let's see.

When he begins his workout on Sunday afternoon he will have four pretty husky chaps on the ground, fellows who have been here several days and who have been gradually fitting themselves for the work they will be called upon to do.

SPARRING PARTNERS.

There is Andy Wallace, a sturdy, well-muscled battler, who has worked with Jack Sharkey, and there is George Neron, who in a remote way resembles Schmeling. George has worked with Max before, and only recently he gained a sort of distinction by flattening the melancholy Dane, Knute Hansen. Two others, Sylvan Anderlite, an army fighter, and Vincent Babin, complete the quartet with whom Max opens his sparring routine.

Joe Jacobs tells me he has at least 20 sparring partners lined up, and he expects Max to use all of them at one time or another during the training period. Joe appears to think the men will not be able to withstand the grind with Max. That speaks pretty highly for Joe's opinion of his fighter.

Now, as for Schmeling's own views:

NEEDS 10 DAYS.

"Benny," he said to me in that surprisingly good English of his, "I need only 10 days to get into real fighting condition. I believe with you that plenty of boxing is the thing a man who is going into a fight needs.

"There is nothing better than boxing for a boxer. Still, I do not make sparring bouts fights. No, they are for me the practice. I spar not to beat my men, but to get myself into fighting condition.

"If they can stand what you call the gaff, all well and good. If not, I change them. It is not the aim to defeat the sparring partner—it is the aim to attain skill, sharpness of eye, accuracy of punch, nimbleness of foot, ability in evasion of attack, timing and all that.

WILL CUT LOOSE.

"Some days, yes, I will need to cut loose. But not every day. Not that I shall hold back, but when the time approaches for the real fight, I will need, perhaps, tougher opposition. I get it then. You know, I only practice in training. I fight in the ring with Sharkey. I train for one night—I do not fight many to prepare for one. Verstehen sie?"

I think that tells the story. Schmeling is right. He has had his rest; he has "loosened up," and accustomed himself to the new ring in which he will work. He has his entire being "training minded," and now he is ready to begin real work. I am eager to see him with the gloves on. Unless there is a last-minute switch in plans, which is not expected, I will get this glimpse of Max in action tomorrow. Then I can tell you what I see.

"I have played for the last ten years and need no other training to keep in good trim. The walking is just the thing," he said.

AUBURN BEATS TECH TRACKMEN AT FLATS, 80-46

By Herb Clark.

Ed Hamm, whose collection of medals emblematic of his prowess as a runner and jumper is fast approaching the "boundless" stag, added to his laurels Saturday afternoon as Georgia Tech fell before the concerted attack by Auburn. The Tigers won the dual meet at 80-46.

Taking off in the broad jump Hamm leaped 25 feet and 6 inches. That leap is his best since he set a world's mark of 25 feet 11 7-8 inches in Olympic competition in 1928. It surpasses by an inch and a quarter his performance in the Penn relays a short time ago when he shattered a record of 39 years' standing.

In addition Hamm won the 100-yard dash with little difficulty. His support, however, was not enough to carry the Jacket colors through the jungle of ambitious Tigers. Read, stepping home first in the two-mile run, was the only other Jacket to stage a five-point spurt.

BROTHER BEARD.

Jeff Beard, brother of the famed Perry, led the Tigers in scoring. He carried on the family tradition by winning both hurdle races handily and went a step further to take third places in the shot put and the discus throw. The resultant 12 points gave him the day's high point crown.

Hamm, with his 10 points, and Coleman, of Auburn, with a like number, shared honors. Coleman captured the shot put and the discus throw.

Aside from Hamm's leap, the best event of the day—from the gallery's standpoint—was the 220-yard dash, in which Graydon, of Tech, and O'Hara, of Auburn, staged a duel which lasted from gun to tape. O'Hara showed the way by a slim margin in a final spurt.

Tech gained some small measure of revenge as the Jacket frosh almost reversed the varsity count in trimming the Auburn yearlings, 77-55. Williams led the Jacket attack with first places in the 100 and 220-yard dashes and in the broad jump. Cain, winning the javelin an dthe shot, followed closely.

HAMM IMPROVES.

Hamm's performance further stamps him as the class of the country and brings new visions of his attainment to the coveted 26-foot mark in later meets this year. His distance has increased steadily since the first meet of the year, and with a number of other engagements on his slate he still has hopes for a college mark of 26 feet.

But one more southern meet is on the program, that being the Southern conference meet at Birmingham this week. Hamm will enter several of the major carnivals of the east during the early summer, however.

SUMMARY.

Score: Auburn 80; Tech 46.

RELL'S GANG LIKES SCORES

when a flurry of Nashville base hits destroyed his lead and sent the Vols into a lead.

They greeted Nick Dumovich, who relieved him, just as generously, just as free-heartedly.

Jimmy Johnston is a great favorite. Jimmy runs those bases and takes those chances. The boys in the knothole gang don't care for your careful man. They gave Jimmy Johnston a greater cheer when he was thrown out trying to make home on a play than they did a succeeding batter who beat out a close one at first.

YELL CRAZILY.

At each infield play they yelled crazily, beating the planks on which they sit with empty bottles. There are boys there in overalls, freckled kids, tanned kids, young kids barely able to sit on the planks who ask their older brothers what happened.

Rell J. Spiller calls them his "knothole gang" because the boys have a quaint habit of making their knotholes. The fence around Spiller field had no knotholes. So the boys used to make them. They'd get a hole in the fence somehow.

Sweating policemen watch them. Some of the boys slip around and get grandstand seats the better to ply their enthusiasm. "They're a great bunch," said one of the officers. "Believe me, they root for the team." He wiped the perspiration from his brow and chased back three who were almost in the stands.

DOBBS HERO.

There isn't a hero on the Cracker club such as Nick Cullop was.

In fact, Johnny Dobbs seems to be the greatest hero. Youngsters making their first visit to the free seats have him pointed out. Each time Johnny pops out of the dugout to coach at third or first they give him a yell.

It's a great move—this knothole gang. Baseball seems to be pulling the boys as much as ever. As soon as the word spreads about the free seats the boys will be there in such numbers that Rell J. Spiller will have to put up some more seats. And he will. They don't seem to be about the golf courses so much. They still go to ball games.

But for an old-fashioned chap—ah, me, "I like Blethen best. He's on third ain't he?" Ho, hum. Such materialism.

Made Manager.

Russell (Jing) Johnson, former A's pitcher, has been made graduate manager of athletics at Ursinus college.

Races Here Today

Jimmy "Red" Patterson, of Atlanta, and his Junior Special racer which is entered in the automobile racing program scheduled for 3 o'clock this afternoon on the Atlanta speedway on Pace's Ferry road. Time trials will start at 2 o'clock and the 116 laps of competitive racing will start one hour later.

14 Drivers Entered In Auto Races Today

Eight Events on Program Starting at Atlanta Speedway This Afternoon at 3 O'Clock.

With 14 drivers definitely entered and three others likely to start, all is set for the eight-event automobile racing program at 3 o'clock this afternoon on the Atlanta speedway on Pace's Ferry road. The preliminary time trials will start at 2 o'clock, after which the competitive racing program will begin.

There will be 116 laps of racing with the 20-mile event as a feature on the afternoon card. Two added attractions, a "straw hat derby" and a special match race between Glenn Roberts, Atlanta boy, and Herman Schurch, of Hollywood, Cal., holder of seven world's dirt track records, have been placed on the card.

Two silver trophies will be given to the afternoon winners in addition to the prize awards. George Hamilton, promoter of the races, will present a trophy to the winner of the match race between Roberts and Schurch. Don Kinne, an official timer for the contest board of the American Automobile Association, will give a trophy to the winner of the time trials.

An official sanction for the races has been received by Hamilton and any record made on the track today will be forwarded to Washington, D. C., to the contest board. All the 1930 rules and regulations of the American Automobile Association will be in effect for each event and only drivers who have been recognized by the A. A. A. will be permitted to drive today.

Ample free parking space has been provided for hundreds of automobiles in a field adjoining the race track and officials will direct the parking.

SCHURCH FAVORITE.

One of the favorites in the races is Herman Schurch, of Hollywood, Cal., who recently set seven dirt track records on the Atlanta Speedway. Those records were forwarded to the contest board of the A. A. A. by Charles Cook, secretary of the Atlanta Motor Club, and have been recognized as world's records. Schurch recently received notice that he is being mailed a gold certificate as a reward for his setting the new records on a half-mile dirt track. His record is 22 3-5 seconds for the circular track, made on April 12. He also holds records for 1 mile, 2, 3, 5, 10, 15 and 25 miles.

Five Atlanta boys have been entered in the races. Glenn Roberts, Whaley Argoe, Billy Winn, Jimmy Patterson and John Shockley will represent Atlanta.

Argoe will drive a Frontenac Special. Winn will drive his Junior Special. Shockley has not announced a driver for his car. Roberts will drive a Frontenac Special and Patterson will drive a new racing car which arrived in the city Friday afternoon

OTHER ENTRIES.

Other entries include, Bob Robinson, of Benson Springs, Fla., a teammate of the late Ray Keech. Robinson will drive a big Deusenberg which was designed and built for Keech, especially for dirt tracks. It is the first racer to appear on a local track with a super charger on it and the motor can be heard to hum for several blocks away.

Doug Wallace, of Chattanooga Tenn., another former teammate of the late Keech; Bob Saul, and Fred Hudson, both of Charlotte, N. C.; Bruce Thompson, of Indian Trail, N. C.; Charley Cyr, of Boston, Mass., and Shorty Ginrich, of Tampa, Fla., are others entered.

The list of events follow:

Time trials at 2 o'clock, with every car entered.

7—40 laps, 10 cars.

MERCER BEATS AUBURN, 7 TO 5

Bears Split Series; Riley Is Star at Second Base.

AUBURN, Ala., May 10.—Showing a reversal of form over their performance of Friday afternoon, Mercer won the second game of the series with Auburn here today, 7 to 5. Stovall was on the mound for the Bears and was nicked for 11 hits, one more than his mates made, but was pretty stingy with base knocks with Tigers on the paths, 11 Auburn runners retiring on the bases.

The game was featured by the sensational playing at second and heavy hitting of Duck Riley, Auburn keystoner. Riley got two singles and a triple in four tries and handled 11 difficult chances perfectly. Mallard and Marion were the big hitters with the hickory for Mercer.

Hughes Captures Medalist Honors

Julius Hughes, with a 73, was low Saturday afternoon in the Druid Hills one-day medal play tournament. Second place honors were divided between J. B. Martin, Joe Willis and J. R. Patillo, with 81 each. Third prize winner was Grover Middlebrooks, with an 86. J. T. Clark, A. C. Newell and A. C. Brombey tied for fourth prize with 91. The next fifth score and fifth prize winners were W. C. Spiker and Ed Barnes, with 96. Bayne Gibson was alone in the next fifth score and won the sixth prize with 109.

Second place was divided between T. J. Lewis, M. Broyles, E. R. Black, Jr. and R. H. White, Jr., with 72 each. Third prize went to J. P. Garlington and M. B. Crosby with 74 each.

Kid Gleason Knew Earnshaw's Father

When George Earnshaw, A's pitcher, was a wee bit of a lad his father, John Earnshaw, played amateur baseball at Rivertown, N. J., and had for a teammate Kid Gleason, now Athletic coach. George's father also was a golf champion.

GEORGIA SCORES SECOND VICTORY IN STATE MEET

Emory Second and Oglethorpe Third; Young Sets Dash Mark.

For the second consecutive year, track and field athletes from the University of Georgia romped off with the state collegiate championships in the annual meet held at Emory University Saturday.

The Red and Black performers scored 93 points against 55 for Emory and 13 for Oglethorpe, the only other teams entered.

Rain which fell in torrents shortly after the 100-yard dash—opening event of the program—had been run off left the track filled with puddles of water and turned the field into a mud puddle. The slowness of the track and the bad condition of the field hampered the performances of the athletes and only one mark went by the boards in this year's attack on existing records.

YOUNG SETS MARK.

Bob Young, captain of the Georgia team, and representing the Red and Black in a state meet for the last time, jumped away to an early lead, enlarged it, at every stride, and broke the tape nearly 100 yards ahead of his team mate, Bernhardt, to break his own record and set a new mark of 4 minutes 30.7 seconds for the mile run. The previous figure, set last year by Young, was 4:34.5.

Georgia representatives captured first places in 11 of the 15 events, while Emory won three. Top honors in the pole vault were divided as vaulters from the two schools tied at 12 feet. Oglethorpe failed to win a single first place and only annexed one second.

LOGAN HIGH MAN.

Alan Logan, Emory's all-round athletic star, took high point honors for the second successive year with 17 points. Anderson and Maddox, of Georgia, were tied for second with 15 each.

Logan won the high jump, defeating Georgia's Southern conference champion, Sandy Sanford, and the broad jump, placed second in the shot put and tied for first in the pole vault. Maddox copped both hurdle events and the century dash, while Anderson swept aside all comers in the shot put, the javelin, and the discus throw.

Logan's mark of 6 feet, 1 inch, in the high jump and his 12 feet in the pole vault were considered good in view of the mushy ground from which he had to jump.

Tech had a dual meet with Auburn and could not enter the meet. Neither Mercer nor North Georgia A. and M. College sent representatives.

SUMMARY.

100-Yard Dash—Won by Maddox, Georgia; second, Vogel, Emory; third, Groves, Georgia; fourth, Biting, Oglethorpe. Time, 10.4 seconds.

220-Yard Dash—Won by Vogel, Emory. Second, Biting, Oglethorpe; third, Grove, Georgia; fourth, Blackwelder, Emory. Time 23.4 seconds.

Brown Holdout Reports for Work

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 10.—(AP)—George Blaeholder, who recently accepted a contract calling for $6,000 after holding out for $7,500 to pitch for the St. Louis Browns, arrived here today and reported to Business Manager Bill Friel. Blaeholder, suspended for refusing to report, today applied to Commissioner Landis for reinstatement.

Schoolboy Hurls 5 Games in Row; Wins First Four

ORLANDO, Fla., May 10.—(AP)—What is believed to be a pitching endurance record was established here today when Pitcher James Varne, 19, of Brooksville, Fla., completed five baseball games in as many days. He won the first four and lost the last one today to Lakeland in the state championship series, won by Lakeland by the score of 5 to 2.

Starting last Tuesday, Varne pitched his team to victory on that day over Ocala and then came back the next day to beat the same team to win the district title and the right to have Brooksville enter the state tournament.

Thursday Varne defeated Tallahassee and came back on Friday to defeat last year's state champions, Palatka, by the score of 6 to 5. Today he was called upon to pitch his fifth straight game, and but for an error in the seventh inning, Brooksville probably would have won the state championship. His team was leading, 2 to 1, when Brooksville's right fielder, Ghiotto, dropped a double play ball. After this error Lakeland scored four runs.

The Brooksville boy is a southpaw and during the entire series he walked only one. He allowed 16 hits during the three tournament games.

Atlanta Pros Meet Monday

A regular monthly meeting of the Atlanta Professional Golfers' Association will be held at 9:30 o'clock Monday morning at the Druid Hills Golf Club. Harry Stephens, president of the association and professional at Druid Hills, will be host.

Plans for summer golf tournaments will be discussed at the meeting.

STATE SHOOT OPENS MONDAY

Marksmen From Over South Gather at Radium Springs for Event.

ALBANY, Ga., May 10.—(AP)—Advance predictions point to a field of more than 200 marksmen for the annual shoot of the Georgia State Trapshooting Association which starts at Radium Springs, near here, Monday and continues through Thursday.

Last year's championship meet, also held here, proved such a success that practically all of the entrants in that event are expected back, together with other good state and southern gunners.

Shooters attending this year's contest will compete for $2,000 in cash prizes and $500 in trophies, awarded by the Albany Chamber of Commerce and wealthy trapshoot enthusiasts.

Monday—the opening day—will be devoted principally to practice shoots, although two events are listed on the program. The first will be 100 singles at 16 yards for $100 added money and a trophy to the winner and the second will be a 50-yard handicap event, 16 to 25 yards, for $50 added money and trophy.

"UNCLE ANDY DAY."

Tuesday will be known as "Uncle Andy" Hill Day, in honor of Andrew Hill, of Dawson, the grand old man of Georgia trapshooting. The Georgia state championship at 200 singles for $400 added money and other prizes will open the day's events. The second event is the 50 practice doubles shoot.

The Georgia state championship at single targets heads the program for Wednesday shooters will be divided into five classes and the high gun in each class will receive $20 in gold. The Amateur Trapshooting Association trophy will be awarded the winner of the state championship. Trophies will also be given to the winner of the women's division, the professional division and the members of the winning team, which will consist of the five high state amateurs. Another 50 practice doubles is also scheduled.

The doubles championship will feature the closing day's program on Thursday. An A. T. A. trophy will be given the winner in addition to $200 added money. Trophies also will be given to the runner-up and the high non-resident of Georgia.

FINAL EVENT.

The final event will be the Georgia state handicap, 100 targets at 16 to 25 yards, with $300 added money and the A. T. A. trophy to the winner.

The shoot is held under the authorization of the Amateur Trapshooting Association and the scores will be included in the official records.

The championships in the various events are held by the following shooters:

Men's doubles, W. H. Lanier, Augusta.

Men's singles, H. C. McKenzie, Atlanta.

Women's championship, Mrs. W. P. Andrews, Atlanta.

Professional title, Jimmy Hawks, Macon.

Handicap champion, Dr. J. H. McDuffie, Columbus.

Atlantans Prep For State Meet.

Atlanta trapshooters took advantage of the last opportunity Saturday afternoon of practicing before the annual Georgia state shoot Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday in Albany and turned in some good scores.

The best score of the afternoon in the singles was turned in by H. J. Foster at the Atlanta Gun Club. He scored a 49. He is a former state champion and will go to Albany in an attempt to win back the title next week.

H. D. Freeman, the "shooting" policeman, was scored with 48 at the Atlanta Gun Club. Freeman created a sensation in the trapshoot last winter with a straight run of 152 clay targets.

At the regular weekly Saturday shoot at the Peachtree Gun Club Dr. C. C. Howard, Harold McKenzie, state champion, and J. H. Hightower were tied for high honors in the singles with 48 out of the 50. In addition to Atlanta teams, Savannah High, Monroe Aggies and Riverside Military Academy, from Gainesville, will send track stars here Monday.

Coach C. S. Ward at Boys' High, has another strong team and one that is making every effort to go to Chicago to the international high school meet during the latter part of May.

The Hurricane cindermen have won all of their meets this year, including three meets with the Georgia Tech freshmen and another where Tech freshmen, Tech High, Marietta High and G. M. A. were entered.

Boys' High will depend largely upon the work of Elliott and Gatlin in the field events and Howard, Kelly and Ward in the dashes and distance.

Pie Traynor Must Undergo Treatment

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 10.—(AP) Captain Pie Traynor, Pittsburgh Pirate third baseman, who is suffering from iritis, today was ordered to a Baltimore hospital for treatment.

He is the second Pirate regular on the hospital lists. Lloyd Waner, youthful and efficient outfielder, is under observation at Baltimore after failing to recover his normal strength following an operation for appendicitis last winter.

Traynor has played but few games so far this season, and while a local specialist appeared to be meeting with success in treating the captain's eye, club officials asked that he go to Baltimore for further examination.

George Detore Continues To Lead Southern Batters Despite Slump

POOLE DRIVES IN MOST RUNS; GAINS 1 POINT

Chattanooga Tops Circuit in Team Batting With .321 Mark.

Despite the fact that he slumped 69 points during last week, George Detore, young third-base sensation of New Orleans, continues this week to lord it over the sluggers in the Southern association. Detore's mark is .422. Daughtry, of Memphis, is batting .424 for 16 games, while Bolton, of Chattanooga, is doing a .439 for 13 games.

Sunny Jim Poole, Nashville's slugging first baseman, gained one point during the week, his average being .382. Poole's bat has driven in more runs than any other in the league, 27. Strohm, Little Rock, is the leading two-base hitter, 10. Detore has hit most triples, 5. Jim Poole holds the home run lead by a lone point, his total being 5, with several other batsmen having 4 to their credit.

Chattanooga continues to top the circuit in team batting, .321, with Memphis second, .309. The Memphis Chicks hold the fielding lead by three points, .966, Little Rock coming second in for second.

Pitcher Kelly has hurled the Chickasaws to four victories without a defeat. Thirteen other hurlers have perfect records at this point.

VOLS DIVIDE DOUBLE BILL

who have not had a great deal of that this spring.

GRIMES STAR HITTER.

Roy Grimes has been putting more and more power into his hitting as the campaign developed and yesterday he came to a peak. After belting two very hard balls in the first game, one of which was a double, he exploded a home run clear over the left field bleachers in the second game. It was a poke that Ben Paschal or Nick Cullop would have admired.

The first game was as exciting as a ball game can be when the home club loses. Grimes batted Sheehan home in the first inning and Wingo drove Johnston home in the second. Langford hit Blethen across in the fifth and the Crackers had the enemy 3 to 0. Rosenthal, Jones and Sheehan were supplying sensational, exciting defensive work and a fine time was being had by one and all.

WEAK OPENING.

The eighth opened innocently enough. Jay Partridge, the old Oglethorpe star, beat out a punk infield hit. The next hitter popped out. Moore singled accidentally by reaching out for a waste ball.

Manager Rowland then dispatched Simmons to bat for Pitcher Bohler. Blethen tried to bear down hard but walked him, filling the bases. Then the dike gave way. Horn and Marquardt singled before a relief pitcher could get warmed up and three Vols had scored. Two were on base when Dumovich walked out to take over the mound, and the first hitter he faced singled to score the winning run. Dumovich set the others down on pop flies but the damage was done.

George Milstead, the ancient left-hander, was sent out to finish the game for the Vols—and he finished it for the Crackers as well. For he fanned Walker in the eighth with a man in scoring position and fanned Langford in the ninth with two men on the sacks. Milstead's good work went for Bohler, however, who was credited with the victory by the rules.

CRACKERS RALLY.

Added interest was given in the Crackers' ninth inning rally. It was started with two down when Milt Stock, pinch hitting for Dumovich, demanded and obtained his base because Catcher Moore interfered with him. The decision of Umpire Quinn brought a noisy protest from Manager Rowland.

The Crackers took the lead in the third game with two runs that were scored on doubles by Sheehan and Rosenthal and Carlyle's single. Three singles gave the Vols one in the fourth. Grimes' homer, an error by Marquardt and Barrett's double gave the Crackers two more in the sixth.

But the Vols kept fighting and started banging Meadows in the seventh after two were out. Two men scored on two hits and an error. Johnny Jones retired the side with a nice play.

"PANTS" AND THE UMPS.

Manager Rowland continued his feud with the umpires, contending that Meadows was balking every time he threw to first base. Old Lee caught two of Manager Rowland's best Vols off first by a great motion and the manager just couldn't believe it.

Manager Rowland earned the manfor that Johnny Dobbs wore for several years when coaching for the Barons. As Rowland clapped his hands for action the fans imitated him and had a great afternoon with their little by-play. Rowland has not yet learned to kid with them and fake his handclaps. He'll get to that on his next visit.

Marion Institute Defeats Clanton

MARION, Ala., May 10.—Marion institute cadets made a clean sweep of a three game series here by winning this afternoon from Clanton Athletic Club, 4 to 2.

The cadets' four runs came from heads-up base running and Clanton's miscues.

Robison featured at the plate with three hits out of four appearances. Clanton started a rally in the ninth that fell short two runs. Singles by Simms, Glascock, Brown and Nivens netted the two runs.

College Park Holds Piedmont Lead Despite 5-5 Tie With Oakhurst

COKER'S HOMER GIVES CALVARY WIN BY 16-14

Ten Innings Required To Settle Piedmont League Slugfest.

College Park still holds the leading position in the Piedmont league, although Oakhurst played them to an 11-inning draw. Oakhurst outhit College Park and should have won the game, but lost it due to poor base running.

Whitehead and Rountree were the heavy hitters for College Park, with Rickett best for Oakhurst. Bell, of the College Park team, got three hits out of six tries. Batting honors were about even between the two teams; but the feature catch was contributed by Roberts, of College Park.

HOME RUN WINS.

"Casey at the Bat" had a rival in Coker, of the Calvary team. Orchard Knob and Calvary were tied at 14-all at the end of the ninth inning, and a tenth was necessary for Coker to do his work. With one man on base, Coker knocked the ball out of the lot, giving his team a two-point lead. Calvary should have won the game before the ninth inning, for they had 25 hits to the 16 hits of Orchard Knob.

HAYGOOD SWAMPED.

Mt. View had a track meet at the expense of Haygood. Mount View got 28 hits for a total of 23 runs, while Haygood only made two runs on five. The two McLeod boys, Forrester and Brown, all made four hits out of six times up. Miller, Stanford and Thompson made three safeties. The winners made plenty of extra base hits, but the two home runs, double and single by J. N. McLeod carried off the hitting features.

PEPS LOSE ANOTHER.

The hitting and fielding of Kirkwood was too much for the Pep Class, so the Peps came out on the short end of an 8-to-4 score. The fielding of Harden at short for the winners was a feature.

RECORD SMASHED.

A late rally by Peachtree Christian smashed the perfect record of Northwest Atlanta. Peachtree scored two runs in the eighth and three more in the ninth and came out a 7-to-6 winner. A home run by Tinsley and the catching of Jim Garner was the features for Peachtree. Landrum with three singles and a double captured the hitting honors. The losers made 12 hits to only seven for the winners.

NORTH ATLANTA LEADS.

North Atlanta by defeating the Twentieth Century class, 6 to 2, remains the only undefeated team in the Dixie league. Butler, of North Atlanta, only gave up three hits and permitted one run in the opening stanza and one more in the final frame. North Atlanta continued to hit as often as ever and collected 13 hits. Harris with two doubles and a single was the big swatter. A double by Hudgens, of the losers, was the other extra base hit.

Romance Needs Horses

Trumbull Says Paul Revere Would Have Been a Flop Shifting Gears and Tooting Horn.

By Walter Trumbull.

The city horse has disappeared
In boneyard and in glue;
But farm and race tracks still retain
The blueblood, sweet and true.
What other animal on earth
So many pages fills,
In all the story of the world,
With service and with thrills.

What would John Gilpin's ride have been,
Or that of Lochinvar,
Or the brave ride from Ghent to Aix,
If taken in a car?
And where would be the old romance,
If, through the early morn,
Young Paul Revere had shifted gears
And tooted on the horn?

A splendid, honest thoroughbred,
Which gives the best he can—
No race horse ever threw a race,
That was reserved for man.
So, travel when and where you choose
On rails, or keels, or wings—
But honor still the noble steed
Which makes the sport of kings.

THE DERBY.

The Kentucky Derby will be a tremendous sporting event this year, with that fine and gracious gentleman and nobleman, Lord Derby, sitting in the special stand they have built for him. The earl was frankly jubilant, last Friday morning, when he got a cable telling him his filly had won the 1,000 guineas in England.

Joseph E. Widener said to me that he wished the earl might have seen a Kentucky classic with a bit better horses in it. He doesn't regard the present entry list as quite up to some of those in the past.

A GREAT RACE.

But Lord Derby may see a great race. In the first place, he may see a fine field, and a Kentucky Derby never is won until the finish line is past. With perhaps 25 horses leaving the barrier and the sharp turn of that track, anything can happen.

Gallant Fox, hope of the east; High Foot, hope of the west; Bradley's Breezing Thru and Buckeye Poet, Tannery, Desert Light, Gallant Knight, Kilkerry, Broadway Limited, that son of Man o' War; Michigan Boy, Crack Brigade and Sarazen II—will be in the race, so the earl may get a first-class thrill yet

FAMOUS HORSES.

Since Aristides first won it in 1875, the Kentucky Derby has shown some great horses coming home in front. There was Hindoo, Elwood, Old Rosebud, Rgret, Omar Khayyam, Exterminator, Sir Barton, Paul Jones, Behave Yourself, Morvich, Zev, Black Gold, Flying Ebony, Reigh Count and many another good one. Old Rosebud ran the mile and a quarter in the fastest time, 2:03 2-5.

There is one thing Lord Derby would like to have understood: He is not the earl for whom the Epsom Derby was named. That was a quite distant ancestor, as the race was originated in 1780. Lord Derby denies emphatically that he goes that far back. That first race was won by Diomed, with S. Arnull up.

The Arnulls must have been a family of good jockeys. S. Arnull rode four Derby winners; J. Arnull rode five winners and W. Arnull rode three winners. Steve Donoghue has ridden six winners.

Other noted jockeys who rode horses to victory in the Derby were Goodison, Robinson, Templeman, Wells, Archer, Watts, Maher, Childs and Reiff.

WON TWICE.

Horses owned by the Derby family have only finished in front twice at Epsom. Sir Peter Teazle won in 1787, and Sansovino, owned by the present earl, won in 1924. That was the race Lord Derby claims he most enjoyed.

Three times a Prince of Wales has won at Epsom, the last time in 1900, with Diamond Jubilee. Once King Edward won—in 1909, with Minoru.

Derby winners have been owned by the Dukes of Bedford, Grafton, York, Portland, Rutland and Westminster. Lords without number have won it; among them, aside from the Derbys themselves, being Egremont, Clermont, Grosvenor, Foley, Stawell, Jersey, Lowther, Berner, Clifden, Eglinton, Zetland, Falmouth, Hastings, Bradford, Rosebery and Glanely.

Gully, the fighter, won a Derby; as did Richard Croker and Squire Abington. Baron Rothschild won with Favonius. W. C. Whitney and H. B. Duryea are listed among the winning owners. Lady J. Douglas won in 1918 with Gainsborough.

AT EPSOM.

Among the great horses finishing first at Epsom were Ormonde, Flying Fox, Isinglass, Rock Sand and Papyrus. In 1884 Harvester and St. Gatien ran a dead heat. That was the first race the present Lord Derby ever saw. He says he is going to get back to England to see the Derby run this year, but he will see the one at Lexington first—and strive with the southern pronunciation of his family name.

BLUE STOCKINGS WIN TRACK MEET

CLINTON, S. C., May 10.—(AP)—The limber-legged and stout-muscled athletes of Presbyterian college staged a sensational finish to their remarkable track season today by winning the S. I. A. A. meet here in easy fashion.

Victors in 1927 and again in 1929, Coach Lonnie McMillan's speedy youngsters came back with an irresistible force today to win their third crown in four years. They more than doubled the score of their nearest competitors.

Team scores were: Presbyterian college 66 1-2; Louisville 24; Georgetown of Kentucky 23; Southwestern 17 1-2; Union 13; Erskine 8; Citadel 6; Mississippi 5.

Notwithstanding the snappy manner with which the Blue Stockings ran away with the meet, individual honors went to Louisville University, Taylor winning first in the low hurdles, first in the 440-yard dash, second in the 220-yard dash and fourth in the broad jump for a total of 14 points.

Jimmy Green, Presbyterian college sprint and jump star, was second in individual scoring with ten points, taking first in the 100-yard dash and first in the broad jump.

No records fell today, the nearest approach to breaking top marks coming in the two mile run and in the high jump.

Johnson, of Mississippi college, brought the spectators to their feet when he sprinted on the last lap of the two mile, barely missing breaking the record.

Brady, who last year broke the high-jump record, was back today to try to topple his own mark, but was not successful, missing it by an inch.

Coach McMillan's charges tallied in every event, taking first and second in the 100-yard dash; first, second and fourth in the javelin, and first and third in the 880-yard run.

In the relay, the Blue Stockings litterally run away with their competitors and Ritchie, their fourth man, was a quarter of a lap ahead of the next man at the finish.

SOUTHERN NINE SWAMPS FULTON BY 10-3 SCORE

Pugh Hurls Fine Game, Hits Four Out of Five Times.

Southern Railway went on a batting rampage and defeated Fulton Bag and Cotton Mills by 10 to 3. Dallas Pugh was the chief factor in Fulton Bag's downfall, allowing them seven hits and also hitting safely four times out of five trips to the plate. Jack Carter hit four out of five. Austin got three hits, one of them a triple, in four tries. Fowler hit two doubles for Southern's first four runs in four attempts.

For Fulton Bag Brown did the hitting, with a triple and single for their three runs.

WHITTIER WINS.

Whittier Mills won from Exposition Mills on the Exposition diamond Saturday, 5 to 1. It was a tight game until the eighth inning when Whittier scored one unnecessary run and in the ninth added two more for good luck. The rain gave a very insecure footing in the field and there were plenty of errors. Dowda and Pierce hit doubles and Sammons and Ray hit triples, Sammons getting two.

OWENS FANS 9.

Pullman Company won from Fisher Body in a hard contest Saturday, 3 to 2. Owens held the Fishers well in hand until the sixth inning, when they began to hit him, but good support kept the Fishers from scoring enough to win. Owens fanned nine men. The fine hitting of Dollars, with a single, a double and a home run out of four attempts, was the best performance vith the bat. His home run was the winning score. Baldwin and Willis pulled off a double play that looked good from the sidelines.

PRESS STOPPED.

Ruralist Press was swamped by Company "B" Saturday at Maddox park, 17 to 4. The Soldiers touched Russell and Sumner for plenty of hits, and errors helped to push them around for counters. Ball had a perfect record with four hits out of four, all of them singles. There were seven extra base hits in all, and 23 in the game counting both sides. Wilkie was best for the losers with two out of four.

Chambers pitched a wonderful game, with 17 strikeouts, and he helped it along with his bat, hitting three times out of five.

VARSITY WINS.

Southern Spring Bed Company defeated Spring Bed Yannigans in a 10-inning game won by McEachern's home run. P. Mize knocked his fourth home run of the season. Camp hit best for the winners while Robertson and Hull hit well for the losers. Patterson made a nice shoestring catch which brought forth applause.

This leaves the Spring Bed team on top of the Atlanta league with five games won and none lost.

DIAMOND WET.

Clarkston won from Woodhaven, 6 to 2, in spite of a wet diamond. Ward pitching for the winners held the Brookhaven boys to six hits and struck out 13 of them. He had good control all the way. Cheek made a nice running catch of Fowler's long bingle robbing him of what loked like a sure hit. McDonald hit three times out of four trials for the best record of the day, one of them being a double. There were two fast double plays on the losing side and Hardin, their first baseman, figured in both of them.

HARD LUCK.

Norcross was leading the strong Chamblee team, 6 to 3, in the third inning when rain spoiled all of the fun, and allowed the Chamblee team to keep their perfect record. This is twice in the last week that Norcross has been ruined by an untimely rain.

Davenport and Rhodes were heroes with triples to left field while H. Martin had gotten two singles out of two trips to bat.

RAINED OUT.

REICHERT ENTRY RUNS ONE-TWO

COLLINSVILLE, Ill., May 10.—(AP)—Brown Wisdom and My Dandy, running in the colors of the Reichert brothers, of Belleville, Ill., had the Inaugural handicap, feature event of the opening card at Fairmount, to themselves today. They finished one-two.

Nellie Custis set the early pace, was passed at the stretch, and finished third.

The outcome was highly satisfactory to the crowd of 8,000 which had made the Reichert brothers entry an odds-on favorite with Nellie Custis a second choice. The winner paid $3.86 for a $2 mutuel ticket.

Although the track was fast, Brown Wisdom did not approach the track record for the six furlongs. He covered the distance in 1:13 3-5 as compared with My Dandy's record of 1:11 2-5.

The meet which opened today will continue for 49 days.

Golf Champion

Captain Benjamin W. Venable, infantry instructor at Fort Benning, Ga., won the Fort Benning golf title last week, defeating Lieutenant Colonel H. A. Wells, 4 and 2. Captain Venable is former champion of the department of Panama, a title he held for three years.

RIOS DEFIES TED GOODRICH

Chicago Battler Seeks Another Victory Over Atlanta Boy.

Tommy Rios has notified Eddie Hanlon, promoter, that he is coming to Atlanta to administer another beating to Ted Goodrich, Atlanta scrapper who lost a decision to him in Chicago some time ago.

"Rios was afraid that he wouldn't get a good deal down here," said Hanlon. "Those Chicago fighters have been afraid to come south because of all the scare stories they heard at the time Mike McTigue fought down here. I have assured Rios that he is coming to a city that is much better than his own home town and that he will get a good deal. He has written me that it will be just too bad for Atlantans, because he is sure he will whip Goodrich again."

All of which is something to make Goodrich a bit angry. He felt that if there was any talk about decisions any man from Chicago should be the last one to mention it. There was some talk of a "Chicago decision" in the fgiht Goodrich had there, but he never yelled about it. The decision came just after he had knocked out Joe Dundee and Farmer Joe Cooper. Rios never came near knocking out Goodrich, but was given the decision. It was the Atlanta boy's debut in the big city and he was a bit nervous.

Goodrich has pledged himself to knock out Rios before a home audience so that there will be no talk about a decision. Goodrich wants the count of ten to be the decision.

Hanlon has lined up a great card for the fight fans. His preliminary bouts will offer men who have appeared here as headliners in previous fights. The card will go on at the Auditorium on May 27.

GRACE WINS TO TAKE LEAD.

Grace Methodist won a close 6-to-5 victory over Gordon Street Baptist, at Piedmont park, in the ninth inning, when Martin, first man up, singled, and Urb Wilkerson, Grace shortstop, brought him home with a triple, to win the ball game. The victory put them in the lead.

McCreary, on the mound for Gordon Street, and Garlington, on the mound for Grace, pitched splendid ball, with Garlington having the edge. The ball game was played in fast time, and two double plays, one by each side, helped speed things up. Wilkerson, with three hits in five attempts was leading hitter, while Say, with two doubles in three trips, was best for Gordon Street.

CAGLE IS STILL IN ARMY, SAYS HIGH OFFICIAL

Acting Secretary Announces No Application Made for Resignation.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—"A cadet named Cagle" today drew the attention of T. Rubee Davison, acting secretary of war.

Davison, in a 200-word statement, said that the war department knew nothing about the desire of Christian Keener "Red" Cagle, West Point's football hero, to resign from the army to take up football coaching.

In a prepared statement, Mr. Davison said:

"Press reports have appeared to promulgate an erroneous impression that a cadet named Cagle at the United States Military academy would be allowed to resign from the army immediately after his graduation next June. There is no evidence in the war department that such action is contemplated."

Cagle announced yesterday that an offer of a coaching position at Mississippi A. & M. college, with a business opportunity in addition, would give him more remuneration immediately than is received by a major general.

Major generals receive $8,000 a year. Second lieutenants, on the other hand, which is what a West Point cadet becomes, are paid $1,500.

Cagle's resignation centers around the difficulty over promise of each man entering West Point that he will serve in the army at least eight years, that is, for four years after graduation.

Never Were Life, Property More Insecure in Georgia Than Today, Asserts Hines

INDIAN SPRINGS, Ga., May 10. Of unusual interest was the annual meeting here of the Flint Bar Association, the features of the day being addresses by Judge James K. Hines, of the Georgia supreme court, and Dr. Sam W. Small, of The Atlanta Constitution.

The officers of the Flint Bar Association include Colonel E. M. Smith, McDonough, president: Colonel Claude Christopher, Barnesville, vice president, and Colonel W. B. Freeman, Forsyth, secretary and treasurer. Among the invited guests were Judge Marcus W. Beck, of the state supreme court; Judge O. H. B. Bloodworth, of the court of appeals; Logan E. Bleckley, clerk of the court of appeals; Judge W. E. H. Searcy, Jr., of the Griffin circuit, and Colonel E. M. Owen, solicitor-general of the Griffin circuit. Judge Ogden Persons, of Forsyth, was host to the gathering at luncheon.

Dr. Small, who is the last surviving reporter who attended the constitutional convention in 1877, spoke interestingly and entertainingly of that historic meeting. His reminiscences were heartily enjoyed.

"Georgia could not duplicate that convention today," asserted Dr. Small. "We are not producing such fine broad timber in public life. There is too much sapling and second growth pine in our political products now."

Dr. Small is emphatic in his belief that the Georgia constitution should be rewritten by the best men available for the task, not only on account of the anomalous conditions created by the numerous amendments referred to by Justice Hines, but because of the change in conditions during the past fifty years.

Constitution Mutiliated By Amendments.

Judge Hines' subject also was the constitutional convention of 1877, but he spoke of it from a different angle. He asserted that the constitution of Georgia as ratified in 1877 was one of the most perfect organic governmental documents ever written. In it, said Judge Hines, the protection of life and property were basic fundamentals, but the multiplicity of amendments which have been tacked on to it has made it a legal conundrum.

Judge Hines then made the statement that "life and property never have been as insecure anywhere on the face of the earth as they are in Georgia today," commenting on the fact that, in the exercise of government, there has in late years been a growing disposition to create commissions and surveys of government, who make reports which, after they are made, "are eternally buried."

It were better, he said, if the state had adhered to the sound principles set up in the constitution of 1877, instead of permitting the commonwealth to suffer from "listening to the hobbies of too many people" who have sought to inject their pet "isms" into the constitution. That, he said, has been followed up with the practice of enacting criminal statutes for the enforcement of "isms" and ideas, resulting in the creation of "lawyers with an unconstitutional mania" who have flooded the appellate courts.

He dealt critically with the fact that the state of Georgia is taking from its people today more than $27,000,000 in taxes, which, added to the millions and millions which the federal government takes constitutes 33 1-3 per cent of the entire annual wealth of the state. This trouble has been brought about, he said, largely through the constitution of the state having been amended so as to levy taxes on anything and everything.

Describing one of the purposes of Toombs, in writing the constitution, he said a prime purpose was to prevent the creation and setting up of monopolies, while today the business program of moderns is to consolidate everything and monopolize through combined strength of "gigantic consolidations" which he does not believe is the best interest of the masses. But, he added, it is a truism in Georgia that the people, through misinformation or lack of information, "will ratify any amendment to the constitution submitted to them." He could recall in his lifetime, he said, but one constitutional amendment proposed by the legislature which the people have ever rejected, and through this course they have permitted the building of a mystic maze.

Amendment That Nullified Itself.

"The one and only trouble with our constitution, as it was written in 1877, is in the fact that it has been regardlessly mutiliated by these amendments," he declared. He illustrated the manner of haphazard amendment by the condition now confronting the state in the matter of allotment of representation in the lower house, which he said was proposed and ratified by the people in such a manner as to completely destroy its own purpose and to nullify the very thing they were amending the constitution to do. "That is but one; when in fact there has not been a single amendment put on the constitution but has weakened and injured it."

Judge Hines took the position, in a very pointed way, that "there is more money wasted educating people in Georgia than in any other way." He adheres to the original principle, he said, of the rudiments of an English education, and is opposed to higher education at the expense of the state without regard to fitness and qualification of the subject to be educated. The original plan, he said, was to afford all children the rudiments in common schools; to make selection of the brighest and fittest for the academy to carry on and it then became the duty of the parents or the student himself to provide the college education.

It is the school's twenty-first anniversary year and Dr. Pound's address carries considerable historical interest since, as state superintendent of schools in 1909, he assisted in the dedication of the small building with which Tallulah Falls school began and accepted it from the Federated Clubwomen of Georgia as a part of the school system of Georgia.

By a further coincidence the school began 21 years ago with 21 students and has a senior class of 21 in this anniversary year.

The twenty-first anniversary exercises will begin on Sunday, May 18, at 11 a. m., with a commencement sermon by Rev. A. T. CorraHarris, World-Famed Georgia Writer Praises Genial, Friendly Funeral of Father And Pays Him Tribute Illumined by Truth

ELBERTON, Ga., May 10.—In the ancient cemetery of historic Van's Creek church at Ruckersville, Elbert county, was laid to rest the war-scarred body of a gallant and temperamental gentleman and courageous Confederate soldier, Tinsley Rucker White, the father of Corra Harris, Georgia's noted woman writer.

Tinsley Rucker White's last days were spent in the Confederate Soldiers' Home in Atlanta, where, as Corra Harris wrote in her bewilderingly frank and touchingly tender tribute to his gaiety and gallantry and incurable irresponsibility, "he was the very bishop of sinners as long as he lived." Refusing to live with any one of his children, the joyous, brave old soldier "enlisted" in the ranks of the Confederate Soldiers' Home very much in the spirit in which he entered the ranks of the Confederate army, where he received three wounds, yet lived to the fine old age of 86, always uncomplaining and unafraid.

It is to be doubted if any other southerner—if any person in any section—could have paid to a beloved parent a tribute so laden with love, yet so honest in its characterization, so keen in its analysis, as that bestowed by Corra Harris on her father. And as remarkable as its setting was unique is the statement which Mrs. Harris made after her father's simple funeral among homefolks in the quaint old churchyard which was established by early Georgia Baptists 150 years ago—a statement in which she describes the scene at the grave. To the editor of a little weekly newspaper—the Elberton (Ga.) Star—Mrs. Harris feelingly confessed that the funeral of her father measured up fully to her ideal of what a funeral should be.

Corra Harris' Ideal of Funeral.

Here are her words, spoken last week while flowers gathered in neighborhood gardens were being laid by friendly hands on the clayey mound where now was sepulchered, beside his long-dead dear ones, the mortal self of Tinsley Rucker White:

"I always wanted to have a natural, kindly, human funeral—not so solemn as we are sometimes when we lay away our dead, but a sort of genial, friendly funeral—now I have had it. My father, who longed for his old home, passed away on the 28th of April, and, remembering the cry of his heart, I brought him back and laid him to rest between his father and mother at the old churchyard at Ruckersville. (No more than the mere scar of that old town remains, and it is generally known that the first state bank in Georgia was located there. My grandfather, Senator William Bowling White, was the cashier when he was a young man. Years later, when he was a member of the Georgia senate, he traveled in his carriage from Milledgeville to Ruckersville with $100,000 of the state's funds rolled up in a bundle in the bottom of his carriage with other baggage, for his bank). My father's mother died when he was six months old, and from the time I can remember until a few days ago, when I heard him talking about her again, he would wish and cry for his mother. So now he is beside her, shriven of all his weariness, pains, and sins, clean and good as any little child lying beside his mother.

"I only hoped that some of the old neighbors who used to know him would come to help me bear him and lay him softly in his long cradle of the earth, and that somebody would say about his dust: 'I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth on me though he were dead, yet shall he live; and he that liveth and believeth on me shall never die.' . . . I only hoped they would come, but I didn't know. What a joy then it was to be met by so many whose faces I had known long ago, grown dim and kinder now, but sweetened by all the memories of my childhood, and they did help me to lay him away, and his funeral was like the happy ending to so much sorrow and grief.

"We sat around on the old disheveled gravestones while the covers of earth and flowers were being laid upon him, laughed and talked of other days, and sang a song, and prayed a prayer for our own soul's sake. Altogether it has been for me a happy day. The long, long past of my childhood has run through my heart light a song, and I was in love again with my old home and the people I used to know, his friends and neighbors who so tenderly and kindly helped me to lay him away. I am going away, strangely lonesome for my father, but blest and comforted by the love and friendliness of mankind, as I have been so many times in my life after some grief or great anxiety had laid me low.

Her Remarkable Tribute.

It would be an ill-service to lovers of literature or future historians to confine to Georgians the opportunity to read in full Corra Harris' tribute to her father. For it is not merely the full-length portrait of a lovable transgressor, but equally it reveals the greatness of soul of Corra Harris. In none of her stories or her novels has she granted to the world a clearer glimpse of her inner self, and if this tribute to her father is not the very essence of literature, then it is because the modern thumb-rule of literary production takes no account of truth illumined by tenderness, of a fine detachment unwarped by the depth of a daughter's love and devotion.

It is in this wise, freed from falsity of pride, that Corra Harris, writing in the guise of "the one who knew and understood him best," makes her father live again even more faithfully than when in lighter vein she pictured him in a short story called "The Colonel's Last Campaign."

He was the son of Honorable William White, who was for many years state senator when Milledgeville was the capital of Georgia. His mother was Mildred Rucker White. He was the direct descendant of Colonel Stark, a member of George Washington's staff, who wrote the first biography ever published of Washington. He was descended from that line of Prussian Roukers whose ancestor was knighted for bravery in battle in the tenth century. During the next 200 years the men of this line were distinguished for their learning and were among the first scholars to publish their books in Germany. In the fourteenth century the two brothers fled to England to escape religious persecutions and became "Ruckers." Again in the sixteenth century they fled from England to escape religious persecution and founded vast land estates in Virginia.

Example of Background.

Mr. White during the whole of his life was a living example of this historical background. He believed in war, wit and scholarship. He was without formal education, but knew his Shakespeare from cover to cover. He had a noble taste for classical poetry, and some kind of humorous genius for politics. He is said to have controlled the political fortunes of Elbert county for many years. Being a man of intemperate habits but of gallant disposition, he carried Elbert county for local option before this experiment in sobriety had been made anywhere else in Georgia—to please his wife, a lady whom he greatly admired and who had asked this boon of him.

The performance was attended by an astonishing revelry, and Mr. White was brought home upon his shield. The story of his methods and triumph on this occasion was so remarkable as to merit a place in the literature of Georgia, and may be found in Corra Harris' "My Book and Heart." An account of it first appeared many years ago in Harper's magazine under the title of "The Colonel's Last Campaign."

"A Very Bishop of Sinners."

In the summer of 1860 before he was 17 years old, the following November, Tinsley Rucker White enlisted in the Confederate army. He was wounded three times in battle and arrived at Appomattox Courthouse in time to help Lee surrender. He walked from that place to his home in Elbert county, went to work and spent the first five dollars he earned to bury the old negro mammy who had brought him up after the death of his mother when he was six months old. Presently he came into possession of the famous Rucker plantation, Farm Hill, and was for the next quarter of a century one of the most brilliantly unsuccessful planters in that section, always carried his mortgage with a dash and paid the interest on it when he could. When he could not, he surrendered the land, which was worth something like ten times as much as the amount of the debt he owed.

He was a brave soldier and an honest man—and the very bishop of sinners so long as he lived. That is to say he managed his transgressions with artless assurance as if these were the doctrines of his human nature, not to be trifled with. But he had a fine way of honoring saints. He believed in God and in the remission of sins, and looked forward confidently to the latter with the passing of his mortal body. He sustained to the last an austere and formal relation to the Almighty. His spiritual diplomacy was appalling and partook of the nature of one god treating with another God, fearlessly and without the vulgarity of egotism or blasphemy.

Proud and Grateful Patriot.

He never complained of himself nor repented, but took his frailties and sins along with him, wrapped in the mantle of his invincible courage. Few saints ever showed a sublimer confidence in the wisdom and goodness of God. If faith makes a man whole he cannot have been mistaken.

He was a proud and grateful patriot. He was among the first veterans to enter the Confederate Soldiers' Home. He enlisted in it much as he had enlisted in the regiment that carried him into so many battlefields of Virginia—and he refused to come out. On those occasions when he was urged to make his home with one of his children his reply was: "This state has provided me with a fine mansion, beautiful gardens, servants, comforts and friends. Why should I leave all these things suited exactly to me and my needs to live in the background of some other person's house?" He refused to rest even his dust in anybody's family lot in a civilian cemetery, but desired to be buried with his comrades in a place set aside for them.

He belonged to that breed of men who lack the dreary patience necessary for the long siege of dutiful living, but who can always lead the forlorn hope of themselves over the top of the darkest disaster to some kind of victory. And they do get promoted at last.

One may well feel sorrow at the death of one to whom life was always a quest. To this sentiment may also be added the paradoxic regret that Tinsley Rucker White did not live to read the tribute paid him by his brilliant daughter.

Van's Church Named After Indian Chief

RUCKERSVILLE, Ga., May 10.—The quaint old cemetery in which the body of Tinsley Rucker White now rests, is at the back of Van's Creek church. This church, named after an Indian chief, was founded here in 1785 by a group of Baptists.

The Rev. Dozier Thornton, of Virginia, was the first pastor. He served in this capacity 40 years. Many restrictions were put on its members. Women were not allowed to wear trimmed hats, and one gay sister was brought before the church for displaying a lone feather in the back of her otherwise chicless chapeau. Two others of the feminine sex were dismissed from the church for indulging in sharp words at a conference meeting. If a woman owned a parasol, she could not sit comfortably in the presence of the Rev. Mr. Thornton, and she was scorned if her petticoat showed an inch of crochet trimming. More than once he assailed ministers for having their coats made with lapels.

The original minutes of this old church are intact. Extracts from them show that a member once brought an accusation against himself for heavy drinking and using language unbecoming a Christian. There are many notables laid to rest in the old churchyard, and it is no unusual thing to note historians collecting data from the moss-covered tombs, enclosed behind this "Little Brown Church in the Dale."

JUDGE J. H. WIKLE, 83, DIES IN CARTERSVILLE

North Georgian Passes After Long Illness; Funeral To Be Held Sunday.

It will be a one-story building where the old building was two-story with the auditorium on the second floor. It is believed the insurance money, $60,000, with an added $6,000 on equipment, will be ample to build and equip the school with no public cost entailed.

W. J. FOLSOM HEADS D. A. V. OF GEORGIA

AUGUSTA, Ga., May 1.—(AP)—The Georgia division of the Disabled American Veterans today elected William J. Folsom, of Atlanta, as state commander and adopted resolutions urging Georgia senators to support proposed legislation for relief of veterans.

Commander Folsom has been a member of the Atlanta Chapter Disabled Veterans for many years and is at present junior vice commander of the national organization. He served in the Second division during the World War.

The resolutions, adopted following an address by William J. Murphy, national commander of the veterans, asked that Senators Walter George and William Harris, of Georgia, support proposed legislation designed to give protection and hospitalization to those who have become disabled as a result of service in the World War.

Commander Murphy declared that "it is time that veterans' affairs are taken out of politics." He said that "there is not a vacant bed left in a veterans' hospital, except a few used for emergency purposes, but there are 70 veterans dying daily who cannot get proper care in government hospitals." He said that veterans were dying for lack of proper hospitalization while congressional "politics" delayed legislation for their relief.

The commander's address and the election of officers and selection of Atlanta as the next convention city were the final business of the convention.

C. B. McCullar, of Milledgeville, who will retire July 1 as state commander, was elected a delegate to the national convention of the veterans to meet in New Orleans July 22.

Athens Man Found Serving Illegally on Education Board

ATHENS, Ga., May 10.—His candidacy for one office revealed the fact that Vincent Matthews, former councilman in Athens, is serving illegally in another office.

He resigned the council post after being elected to the board when the quo warranto proceedings were filed and Judge Blanton Fortson, sustained by the supreme court, ordered him ousted from the board. This week, when he became a candidate for judge of the Athens recorder's court, it was revealed that, according to a decision by Judge Andrew J. Cobb several years ago in another Athens case, which was upheld by the supreme court, he is an illegal member of the board of education and also ineligible to be judge of the recorder's court.

Council cast five ballots in the election for recorder, the candidates being Mr. Matthews and former Recorder Joseph H. Lumpkin. The election was finally postponed until June.

Mr. Matthews has not yet resigned from the board of education, but since it is evidence that he is not a legal member of that body, his resignation is expected. It is not known who will be a candidate for recorder, since he is not legally qualified to run.

WAYNESBORO SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT QUITS

Supt. T. J. Lance Resigns To Accept Presidency of Young Harris College.

WAYNESBORO, Ga., May 10.—T. J. Lance, who completes his thirteenth year as superintendent of the Waynesboro public schools, has tendered his resignation to the Waynesboro board of trustees to take effect June 2.

Superintendent Lance was recently elected president of Young Harris College and will take up the duties of this office the first of June.

The Waynesboro schools have grown in recent years, and now have a total enrollment of 700. Two years ago the Burke county board of education decided to establish a junior college as a part of the public school system and locate it in Waynesboro in connection with the Waynesboro High school. There are two fine junior college classes in the junior college. The first class will graduate June 2.

Superintendent Lance is an A.B. and A.M. graduate of the University of Georgia. He taught for six years in Young Harris College and in the English department of Richmond Academy. He has been instructor in the Georgia State College for Teachers at Statesboro for the past several summers and has been actively identified with community and county interests in Waynesboro.

The vacancy in the Young Harris institution was caused by the death of Dr. J. A. Sharp. It is a denominational junior college owned and controlled by the North Georgia Methodist conference.

COMMENCEMENT AT YOUNG HARRIS.

YOUNG HARRIS, Ga., May 10.—(AP)—Commencement exercises at Young Harris college here will begin on Thursday evening, May 15, with the senior play, and end on Monday when Dr. W. T. Watkins, of Emory University, speaks to the graduates in the morning and Dr. G. F. Venable, of East Point, delivers the annual baccalaureate address in the evening.

Announcement of the plans were made by Mrs. J. A. Sharp, president of the college since the death of her husband in March. It is the forty-third annual commencement, and will include, besides the events mentioned, the junior play on Friday evening, to be followed by a literary address by Dr. T. W. Reed, of the University of Georgia. On Saturday evening the annual debate between Phi Chi and Young Harris Societies will be held. The Sunday morning commencement sermon will be preached by Dr. L. J. Ballard, business manager of Wesleyan Christian Advocate, Atlanta, and Dr. Felton Williams, pastor of St. Paul's church, Atlanta, will preach Sunday evening.

Five hundred students were enrolled at Young Harris this year and several hundred turned away for lack of space and facilities, authorities of the school said.

Unprecedented Enthusiasm Abounds in Prize Campaign

Final Club Offer in Constitution Contest Will Close in Two Weeks.

An unprecedented enthusiasm and activity has taken hold of candidates in The Atlanta Constitution's $25,000 prize campaign as a result of the last $30 club offer of $80,000 and 40,000 extra credits for groups of new subscriptions and the $1,075 Graham sedan.

Only two weeks remain of the last club offer and Graham sedan offer. For every $30 worth of new prepaid subscriptions turned in during the three weeks' period ending May 24 candidates will be given 80,000 extra credits and for every $30 worth of new contract subscriptions they will receive 40,000 extra credits. These credits are given in addition to the regular credits and this is the greatest extra credit offer during the remainder of the campaign.

The $1,075 Graham sedan will be awarded as a special prize to the candidate turning in the highest amount of new subscription business during the five weeks ending May 24.

It is not a very long time before the campaign itself will come to an end. It closes May 31. The 18 automobiles and other awards will then be turned over to the candidates who have earned them by right of credit accumulations. The $30 club offer now on provides the way to easy victory.

This is the time to make the big drive to victory for there is the added special prize, a Graham sedan, and the 80,000-40,000 extra credits to get now, and the standing of the candidates at the close of this special offer period will have a great bearing on the final winners in the campaign.

After Prize

Mrs. C. A. Hynson, 1321 Iverson street, Atlanta, the proud mother of 11 children, is an enthusiastic and active candidate in The Atlanta Constitution's $25,000 prize campaign and is seeking subscriptions in order to get credits to win one of the fine awards.

All Except One Ramblin' Wreck Chugs to Athens

The Ramblin' Wrecks rambled right along from the Tech campus to Athens Saturday and eight of the nine starters were registered in by the chief of police, hometown firemen and general observers at the university city, with the question much mooted as to whether H. D. Doyle, in a Yellow Jacket Ford, or J. E. Pruitt, in an energetic Essex, was the winner.

Doyle arrived in town first but reported to the police chief as having negotiated the 70-odd miles in one hour and 21 minutes. The Technique staffers, under auspices of whom the race was run, said the fire station was the goal. Doyle whizzed by the station far in the van of Pruitt, but Pruitt drew up to a dead stop first at the station house.

Nine speed demons lined up at the campus Saturday morning, laughed gaily at all instructions of the starter and started right out, unofficially started.

N. C. Cummings in a 'hoopin' Hup, starting five minutes behind the rest, passed them all but Doyle up to Winder, when Cummings went crashing into a bank to avoid a common ordinary civilian driver. The back wheel broke, but Cummings fixed it up and limped into port in eighth position. Time—four hours and four minutes.

Jack Lanum, with a Ford, was third, all agreed; T. C. Beggs claimed fourth position and R. K. Whitehead fifth. It cost Whitehead a $10 fine at Lawrenceville for traffic violation besides gas, oil and incidentals to run the race.

Clement Le Hardy's entry, a white creation of beauty, flirted frequently with the filling stations en route and wound up in seventh place. Tires, tubes, accessories and smokes were the prizes. The boys all said they were going to enter the Lakewood ancient auto congress next Saturday.

Fraternity to Present Mother'sDayProgram

A Mother's Day program unique in its presentation of a special ritual before the public by a college fraternity will be observed this afternoon at 4 o'clock by the Georgia Alpha chapter of Phi Delta fraternity which will stage the exercises in the auditorium of the Atlanta Woman's Club.

Members of the Tau Beta Phi sorority and a delegation from the Faicom Club, local young men's social order, will support the presentation of the program, while Roy LeCraw, Atlanta civic leader, will deliver the principal Mother's Day address. Mrs. Howard McCutcheon is co-operating in sponsoring the presentation.

The program will be amply interspersed with musical numbers, with Miss Grace Dodd, local pianist, accompanying a quartet and several soloists in appropriate selections. One of the features of the ritual will be that part of the program which honors the mothers-to-be, in a colorful "tribute to life that has yet to seek and find its tenderest glories."

The public is invited to attend the ceremonies.

Building Hardware Exhibit Shows Change

Long, graceful hinges in brass and wrought iron, depicting leaping dolphins, ships under full sail, and even the delicate tracery of nasturtiums, with knockers and latches to harmonize, on exhibit at 193 Peachtree street, are attracting the attention of architects and home builders.

The new forms in the ornamentation of entrance doors are the work of one of America's most widely-known artists and sculptors, Garret Chew, who accepted a commission from the manufacturers to submit designs after he had expressed the opinion that hardware manufacturers have turned out for years "marvels of ugliness" in fittings for doors.

The exhibit is sponsored by the Russell & Erwin Company, manufacturers, and the Campbell Coal Company, distributors of Russwin hardware for buildings. It will be continued all this week.

Plan Elimination Of 'Smoke Chasm'

Elimination of the present "smoke chasm" through improvement of the area occupied by the railroad tracks in the center of the city will be pushed by the Central Improvement Association, W. Brown Hayes, president, said Saturday.

Encouragement of the erection of buildings on air rights, after the fashion planned by the United States Cold Storage Company, or roofing over the span area between the Spring and Pryor street viaducts are outstanding alternative suggestions for bringing about the improvement, Mr. Hayes explained.

Speakers To Tell Local Civic Clubs Of Jaycee Drive

Co-operation of every civic club in Atlanta in the progress and prosperity campaign of the Junior Chamber of Commerce will be sought this week when members of the organization will address the regular weekly luncheons of business groups.

Several speakers, selected from the junior chamber, will appear on the program of civic clubs at weekly luncheons during the next few days. They will explain the purposes of the campaign of the junior chamber and give facts gathered in the survey undertaken in connection with the move. Businessmen will be urged to assist by making the facts known to their friends and particularly to their employes.

The purpose of the campaign is to create a better feeling toward business and industrial conditions here. This is being done by making public facts about the solid foundation on which business here is based.

The list of speakers and the clubs which they will address follows: Duncan Peek, American Business Club and Atlanta Real Estate Board; Dick Reynolds, City Club and Exchange Club; Ed Roberts, Civitan Club; Dr. Herbert Kennedy, Kiwanis Club, and Frank Shaw, Lions Club. Other speakers will be announced later.

Exhibit of Negro Art To Close After Today

Today will be the Atlanta public's last opportunity to view the Harmon collection of negro paintings which has been on exhibit at Spelman college during the past week. Monday the pictures will be taken down and started again upon an extensive tour of American cities, after being viewed here by hundreds of visitors.

This afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock a committee from Agnes Scott college and Emory University will be on hand to welcome the public, and from 5 to 7 o'clock a group from the Studio Club.

The pictures comprising the exhibit were submitted in the annual Harmon competition and many of the 70 canvases are said to be of a high order. The collection was brought to Atlanta by Spelman college and the commission on interracial co-operation and its showing has been sponsored by the Y. W. C. A., the Ministerial Alliance, the interracial committee and other local groups.

Fine Record Is Made By 'Crescent Limited'

The "Crescent Limited," leader of the Southern Railway system's fleet of fine trains between New York, Washington and the south, has just completed a remarkable five-year record for punctuality.

During the five years since April 26, 1925, when the "Crescent Limited" was placed on its present schedule, it reached Atlanta on time southbound on 1,793 days, being late only 33 times, and reached Washington on time northbound on 1,751 days, being late only 75 times.

During the five-year period just closed, the "Crescent Limited" maintained schedule on the Southern between Washington and Atlanta 1,820 times out of 1,826 trips southbound, an average of 99.6 per cent, and 1,808 times northbound, an average of 99 per cent.

Sears, Roebuck Force To Hear L. E. Hooker

L. E. Hooker, nationally known speaker on economic subjects and a member of the merchandising staff of Burroughs Adding Machine Company, will address the employes of Sears, Roebuck & Co., here Monday. His subject will be "Modern Distribution and its Challenge to the Independent Retailer."

Mr. Hooker says that the big problem of the business world today is the economical distribution of goods. The problem of production he says has been fairly well established. Producing costs are low and the problems of mass production have been met. Business now is working to cut the costs of distribution, to get their products to the ultimate consumer more economically.

Seek Rolling Chair for 10-Year-Old Cripple

A rolling chair or hand-propelled tricycle is being sought by Robert B. McCord, executive director of the Children's Aid Society of Georgia, for a 10-year-old girl who has never been able to walk because of an early case of infantile paralysis. The child is a total orphan and is ambitious to get up off the floor and start school, Mr. McCord stated. Anyone who can supply the required item is requested to call Jackson 0977 and ask for Mr. McCord or Mrs. Hunt.

Bee Brand Adopts New Trade Figure

A new animated figure, the "Bee Imp," is soon to take its place beside other personified trade marks, in the consciousness of the buying public. From now on all advertising for Bee Brand insect powder will carry this lively Bee Imp together with his can and gun.

The campaign will appear in The Constitution in Atlanta. Experts who have seen this advertising are loud in their praise of the interesting way in which it shows the Bee Imp as he goes about his busy task of exterminating flies, mosquitoes, cockroaches, bedbugs and pests of all kinds.

New Sunshine Colors Urged for Curtains

Colors like French ecru or gold are recommended to give warm sunshine effects to casement and glass curtains, by leading Chicago interior decorators. The reason for the popularity of these colors is said to be due to the pleasingly soft effect of light as it falls through gauzes of these shades, and to the fact that such tints are in harmony with almost any color scheme.

To meet this season's demand for fashionable "sunshine colors" in curtains, the Rit Products Corporation, manufacturers of instant Rit tints and dyes, have recently put two special colors on the market, French ecru and gold, according to officials of the company. It is said to be a simple matter to restore curtains that have been faded by the sun with these fashionable new tints.

Reds Call Protest Meeting for Today

Powers and Joe Carr, young communist organizers facing capital charges in Fulton superior court, is scheduled to be held at 346 Fair street, S. E., at 3 o'clock this afternoon, according to announcement made by Paul Pullman, representative of the International Labor Defense.

Commercial Alumni Will Gather May 29

Alumni members and 1930 seniors of Commercial High school will gather Thursday night, May 29, at the Shrine mosque on Peachtree street for their annual meeting and dance, it was announced at a recent meeting of the alumni association.

Each year the Annie T. Wise foundation fund aids worthy girls in completing their high school education and proceeds from the dance will go into that fund.

In addition to the dancing program, members of the entertainment committee have planned a number of novelty features and every former student of Commercial High is invited to be present.

Tickets to the dance have been placed on sale at Nunnally's on Peachtree street and with members of the Commercial High alumni council. Sidney Saul is president of the association and is in charge of arrangements.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

Sunday, May 18th

Derby Day at Louisville! One hundred thousand people there to see the greatest sport drama of the Blue Grass. Thousands more waiting for the news of one of the world's most colorful events.

Only a Kentuckian who has known the lore of the turf from childhood, who has listened to the handlers and the jockeys talk over their races, who knows the argot of the clockers, who senses the drama and the color in a crowd, can accurately tell the story of the Kentucky Derby.

Ed Danforth, sports editor of The Constitution, Kentucky born and reared, writes of turf events as few men can. He has been selected this year, as before, as one of the 14 turf writers who will write stories for the Derby edition of the Courier-Journal. Constitution readers will be able to obtain pre-Derby stories from Danforth. They will be followed by his Derby Story, written as only a man who knows his subject and has a command of words can write it.

The Derby will be run May 17. Danforth's stories will begin Derby week.

EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS DIVIDES INTO GROUPS

CARTHAGE, Tunisia, May 10.—(AP)—American and other English-speaking pilgrims to the 30th eucharistic congress of the Roman Catholic church held their first separate meeting this afternoon.

On the eve of the closing of the congress they listened to an address on the "Mystery of the Eucharist" by Cardinal Macrory, archbishop of Armagh and primate of Ireland.

The cardinal expressed the confident hope that the next congress would be held in Dublin. He paid tribute to the intensity of the faith in Ireland.

"Ireland came to the faith late. It is in Carthage that one realizes that. The vandals were persecuting the Christians here two years before Saint Patrick visited Ireland.

"But if Ireland came into the faith late, it has never wavered since, and faith was never stronger than today."

After the meeting, Cardinal Macrory consented to be photographed by a talking picture camera with the crowd. Though he had never seen or heard a talking picture before, he willingly spoke for one.

Owing to the small size of the room where the meeting was held, the attendance was only about 350. Most of those present were Americans.

Course To Be Given For Piano Teachers

Elizette Reed Barlow, teacher of piano, harmony, composition, and history of music at Washington Seminary, will conduct a five-week class for teachers in the Dunning system of improvised music, starting June 25. The course will be held at the seminary, and arrangements have been made for out-of-town teachers to live there.

Last summer Mrs. Barlow conducted a similar class here. She is considered one of Mrs. Dunning's greatest exponents and for the past eight years has conducted normal classes in various cities of North Carolina and Florida. At the completion of the class here she will go to Indianapolis to live the course.

Mrs. Barlow was graduated from a Dallas (Texas) conservatory. Later she took teacher's courses in Chicago, New York, and Paris. She has studied under Madame Stepanoff, Isadore Phillippe, Marie Vidor, Joseph Lhevinne, Harold Von Mickwitz, Heniot Levy, Wilhelm Middelschulte, Wilbur MacDonald, Dr. W. J. Baeltzell, Nadia Boulanger and Carre Louise Dunning.

On July 4 and 5 the district meeting of the National Association of Dunning Teachers will be held in Atlanta with headquarters at the Biltmore hotel. National officers attending the meeting will be the guests of honor at a banquet on July 5.

Fashion Revue Billed For Fort McPherson

Atlanta Population To Surpass Columbus

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

ENTRY OF CANDLER CAPITAL AIDS REAL ESTATE MARKET

Investments Are Continued With Peachtree Purchases

Leadership of Candlers Expected To Be Followed by Other Investors; Values Cited.

BY ERNEST RUBIN,
Real Estate Editor.

Investment on a large scale in Atlanta real estate was continued last week by the Candler interests, following up the large hotel purchase made the preceding week with acquisition of Peachtree street and West Peachtree street commercial properties.

The recent Candler purchases involved the three-story structure at 547-549-551, bought from the Massell Realty Company through J. H. Ewing & Sons and J. H. Taylor, and a two-story building at the corner of West Peachtree and Pine streets, bought from J. H. Ewing. The considerations totaled approximately $170,000.

Uncertainty Dispelled.

While entry of the Candler capital into the local real estate market in substantial amounts was pointed to by property experts as revealing conditions definitely as a buyer's market, the action was heralded with wide approval, partly because it served to clear away the uncertainty that hovered over the real estate market and occasioned unfounded fear and hesitancy on the part of would-be investors who kept on the sidelines with their capital in spite of tempting safe offers in the property arena.

The condition has been likened to the stock exchange, with the exception that the values of the Atlanta real estate were more clearly defined in point of income yield and historically established value, and old-time property accumulators showed no tendency to sacrifice their holdings.

Candler Leadership.

Although another phase of the movement finding favor in the eyes of professionals along real estate row was the bolstering of commercial property demand by the cash purchasing power of the Candlers, a still more significant aspect was interpreted from the assumption of leadership by the important capitalists. It is felt in many quarters that the investment leadership undertaken by the Candler interests would be followed by the sideline contingent, creating a heavy flow of investment purchase and establishing an upward trend in local values.

While the main transaction of the recent plunge into Atlanta property waters by the Candlers centered around buying of the $800,000 Robert Fulton hotel leasehold, the initial $1,450,000 offer by Candler interests for eight large apartment structures and the purchase of smaller commercially improved parcels last week were viewed as highly important factors in the latest market movement.

The Candler apartment house offer was regarded by many as being directly responsible for sale of five of the structures at $770,000 in cash considerations, as well as influencing the subsequent purchase of three more of the apartment buildings for $450,000.

In last week's purchase by the Candlers of the north side parcels was the three-unit, three-story commercial structure fronting 92 feet on Peachtree street, just south of Linden. It was bought by Asa G. Candler, Jr., for a consideration of $125,000, from Mussell Realty Company. The purchaser gave as part payment the Candler home at 1641 Ponce de Leon avenue, valued at $40,000. Tenants of the Peachtree property include the Ajax Rubber Company, Calhoun antique shop and Woodward antique shop.

$1,900,000 Month.

The building at West Peachtree and Pine streets was bought by Walter T. Candler from J. H. Ewing. The consideration was $46,000 cash. Tenants of the structure include a school of pharmacy on the upper floor and a restaurant on the bottom floor.

Serving with J. H. Taylor as agents in sale of the Robert Fulton hotel leasehold from the Massells to the Candlers, and as sole agents in sale of a number of the large apartment structures mentioned above, as well as being instrumental in negotiation of other recent property deals, the Ewing agency announced a total of $1,900,000 in April sales. The large volume is regarded as revealing the undertone of activity created by investors taking advantage of a buyer's market.

The same agency reported a list of recent commercial leases aggregating $62,000. The following were given out by Moe Goldman, vice president of J. H. Ewing & Sons, in charge of leases:

Commercial Leases.

To Piggly-Wiggly, storeroom at 123 South Main street, East Point.

To Chain Oil Company, a filling station at 1365-75 Spring street, N. W., to be built; 150 feet of frontage.

To Georgia Radio Sales Corporation, a storeroom at 142 Spring street, N. W., in the Allen building. This concern is state distributor for Stewart-Warner radios.

To Auto Parts Warehousing Company, storeroom at northeast corner of Ivy and Baker streets, to be used for offices and warehouse.

To Max Morris, storeroom at 207 Peters street, S. W.

New Home of Storage Company Figures in Leases

Attractive Peachtree street new home of the Walker Storage and Van Company, which figured in recent leases of the commercial property market. It is located at the Merritts avenue intersection in the fast growing commercial district radiating from Peachtree to North avenue. The structure is a modern building and has been renovated to suit the special needs of the storage concern and equipped with the latest devices for storing and packing. George Sebold, vice president, treasurer and manager of the Walker Storage and Van Company, which has offices in many cities and is one of the nation's largest, is in charge of the local headquarters.

Alpha Tau Omega Frat House

Architect's drawing of Alpha Tau Omega proposed fraternity house, which will be built by the old Greek-letter chapter at Emory University. It is an adaptation of Georgian colonial style and is to cost $31,000 with furnishings. The plans and specifications are being completed by Edwards & Sayward, architects.

Frat at Emory Plans $31,000 House for Men

Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, of Emory University, will erect a beautiful and well-typified fraternity home on new fraternity row at the university in the near future, it was announced Saturday. The home as estimated by the architects will cost approximately $29,000 with about $2,000 additional for furniture and interior fixtures. Actual erection of the home will begin by the first of October, 1930.

The new home carries a distinct and interesting note of Georgian architecture, as influenced by southern traditions with columns of curved portico and an open terrace of eight feet in the front of the house. On the extreme left side there is an open porch leading out from the living room by two large French doors and joining the terrace.

Eleven Bed Rooms.

On the first floor is housed the large and spacious living room over the entire left wing, from front to rear. In the entrance hall is found an object of much beauty in the line of home-building—the curved stairway. The dining room is located in the rear center of the house and the guest room and house-mother's room are found on the left front of the house, with a pantry, bath and side stairway on the left rear. The basement is taken up with the kitchen, servant's quarters and furnace room.

Eleven sleeping rooms with dormitory effect will be located on the second floor of the house, with a large bath at one end. The rooms will comfortably hold two boys with the end rooms capable of holding four. On the third floor will be found the large chapter hall, with paraphernalia closet and chapter office room adjoining. There will also be one bed room and a shower. Most distinct of all there will be a large chapter library room and lounge room on this floor. This was so arranged in order to keep order and quietness on the second floor for those who wished to study.

By Edwards & Sayward.

Edwards and Sayward, of Atlanta, are the architects of the proposed fraternity house, and it is expected the work will be one of the most beautiful fraternity homes on Emory's new fraternity row.

It is the object of the chapter to celebrate the golden anniversary of its founding at old Emory in the new home on April 26, 1931. Plans now are that the grounds shall be broken October 1, 1930 and completion effected within five months.

APRIL CONSTRUCTION GAINS ARE REPORTED

F. W. Dodge Survey Discloses Large Increases.

Building gains in the southeast during April were disclosed Saturday in the monthly review of F. W. Dodge Corporation, showing an increase of 23 per cent over the previous month and a gain of 16 per cent over April of last year. The statistics cover construction and engineering activities.

Building and engineering contracts during the month totaled $33,465,800. During March the amount was $27,288,700. In April of 1929 the total was $28,938,000.

Construction awards for the first four months have reached $102,927,800 in the southeastern states, as compared with $102,901,500 for the corresponding period of last year.

Industrial buildings made up 30 per cent of the April contracts. Public works and utilities came second with 25 per cent. Residential buildings totaled 24 per cent, and educational buildings 11 per cent, and miscellaneous construction and engineering work the rest.

Altered Perspective on Marietta Street

A block of solid office building improvement, which soon will be completed on Marietta street, between Peachtree and Broad streets. The view reproduced above gives a good indication of the altered perspective of the block as it will look from the Marietta and Broad corner. The white dotted area outlines the 25-foot frontage on Marietta that will be utilized for the 14-story annex to the Atlanta Trust Company building, soon to be the new home of the Citizens & Southern National bank. Revised plans for the annex are nearing completion and actual construction is expected to start before long. To the right, above, the William-Oliver is seen in one of its rapidly changing stages of construction, with steel frame completed, concrete poured for nine of the 17 stories and brick work started on the lower floors.

Professor Says Child Genius Often Leads Lonely Life

:: OVERDEVELOPED CHILD IS PECULIAR PROBLEM ::

BY THOMAS R. HENRY.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The child genius is apt to lead a lonely life.

While society spends millions on feeble-minded children, gifted youngsters, who are likely to contribute much to the progress of the world, are neglected, Professor Leta S. Hollingsworth, of Columbia University, told the first international congress on mental hygiene meeting here.

The gifted boy, she said, often "drifts in school unrecognized, his abilities never genuinely challenged, and receives daily practice in habits of idleness and day-dreaming. On the other hand, if he is accelerated in grade so that he is able to function intelligently with real interest, he will be misplaced. A child of eight graded with 12-year-olds may be able to do intellectual work as well as they can but is out of his depth socially and physically.

"Gifted children by the time they are eight or nine years old will appear as the youngest in a class in which the oldest are retardates, 13 or 14 years old. These young children have valiantly suffered gross indignities and tortures at the hands of dull, bullying classmates. It is hard for such a child to find playmates who are congenial both in size and mental interests. Many are thrown back on themselves and tend to work out forms of solitary intellectual play.

Special Problem.

"Gifted girls are a special problem because they have a strong preference for activities that are hard to follow on account of their sex. They are less interested in traditional girl's play. From a thousand tiny cues they learn that they are not expected to entertain the same ambitions as their brothers. The problem is to adjust to a sense of sex inferiority without losing self-respect or becoming morbidly aggressive.

"To have the intelligence of an adult and the emotions of a child combined in a childish body is to encounter certain difficulties and the years between four and nine probably are the most likely to be beset with problems."

The American college is a fruitful field for the psychiatrist, Dr. Arthur H. Ruggles, of Yale University, told the congress. Stressing the number of breakdowns and suicides among college students and the number who fail to amount to anything after graduation.

"When we read in our daily paper," he said, "of three suicides among college men in one day we must realize that either our college material is not well selected, or that some of the well-selected material is put under too much stress and strain.

"It would seem to be a much more constructive policy not to deal with failures from a disciplinary point of view but to search for the causes most carefully and when these are definitely related to nervous illness to deal with them directly on that basis. Adding disgrace to a pathological depression creates a very serious situation."

Harder Today.

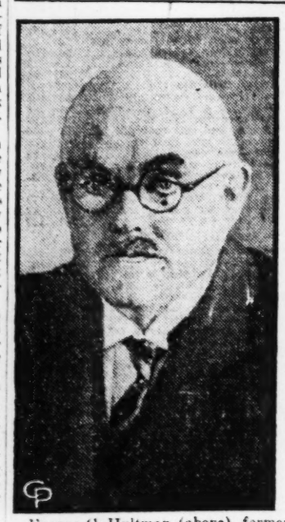

Working one's way through college today, he said, is harder than for the generations that went before because of heavier schedules of studies and greater urge on students to take part in extra-curricular activities.

Prolonged childhood and adolescence, together with changing conditions in the American home, are bringing many new problems in the training of the younger generation, said Mrs. Sidonie M. Gruenberg, director of the Child Study Association of America.

"The modern home," she declared, "has lost certain educational and disciplinary opportunities which existed before the introduction of labor-saving improvements—the discipline of disagreeable but indispensable service, the challenge to ingenuity and invention, and the daily exercise in adaptability. Although the home has delegated much of formal education to other agencies, still the child's receptivity to new ideas will be determined largely by the attitudes of the parents.

"The maturing process of the modern child is apt to be delayed by the lengthening of the period of schooling and the consequent freedom from economic obligation. The very unreality of high school and college life artificially prolongs childhood. Both conscious and unconscious resentment against the control implied by economic dependence are unavoidable. The opportunity to earn should be a part of every child's experience."

Mr. Moor is regarded as one of the city's most fascinating speakers. The message will bear directly on the important phase of real estate handling—that of selling the commodity—it was pointed out by A. B. Cates, president of the realtor organization.

The meeting is open to all realtors and is one of the principal activities on the summer program of the board.

Future To Bring New Type Of City Block Development

:: ADVANTAGES OF MULTIPLE-USE BUILDING CITED ::

The multiple-use building, covering one or more entire city blocks and performing numerous building or housing functions, perhaps even to supplying all the wants of its tenants, is the next step in building development, according to Colonel William A. Starrett, prominent builder and president of the Starrett Corporation, who visualizes the new era of the multiple-use building in the May issue of World's Work.

This treatment of the whole city block as a single working area results in a unity of design, economy of operation and financing hitherto thought impossible, declares Colonel Starrett. Telling why we need this type of structure, he describes the situation typical of a business block in one of our large cities, and says:

Unit Economy Lost.

"Ownership is split up among 20 different firms, individuals and corporations, each of whom owns a small portion of the block, and each of these plots has been built up with a different type or kind of building—a collection of 20 different architectural structures, all along the sides of the block. Each owner has treated his holding as a peculiar and separate building problem and because the plots are small each has necessarily been compelled to work out the solution along very restricted lines.

"Each of these 20 biuldings is now receiving separate management and maintenance, which is really absurd when you consider that the unified development of the block would wipe out 19 of these management and maintenance set-ups. While it is true that a single organization would be considerably larger than any of the present 20, nevertheless enormous savings would accrue. As a rule it isn't sensible to build a tall building on a small plot. So a small-plot owner must content himself with a building of moderate height and this, of course, limits his profits."

Pointing out why structures of this type have not been developed before, Colonel Starrett says:

"We haven't been viewing the possibilities of our city building in a very broad and statesmanlike way. This is not surprising when one recalls that the steel office structure is less than 50 years old and the modern city in its extreme form has come into being only in the past 10 years or so.

Cincinnati Example.

"One of the hardest jobs in the world is to persuade owners of adjoining plots to subordinate their several interests to a unified building project. Few men possess a sufficiently adept promotional technique to accomplish this."

This type of structure is not only possible, according to Colonel Starrett, but is immensely practical as shown by the new Carew Tower which his company is building in Cincinnati. This building, occupying an entire city block, houses a large office building, a 732-room hotel, two large department stores, a car-parking garage and a number of shops, promises to solve parking problems and traffic snarls, and besides being a distinct asset to the civic beauty of Cincinnati, to insure sound returns on the owners' investments.

School Teacher Describes Death-Dealing Texas Wind

:: RESCUE OF CHILDREN IN TORNADO REVEALED ::

BY LOIS ROGERS,
Teacher in the Frost Public School.

FROST, Texas, May 10.—Howling, black funnels, streaking and churning over the countryside, and tearing everything before them with the force of a thousand demons, passed over our schoolhouse Wednesday and reduced it to debris. But thanks to the foresight of our principal, Bryant Merrill, we lost no lives and suffered only a few injuries.

The three of us who were responsible for the prompt action that saved the lives of the children in our care feel that we deserve no special credit. Mr. Merrill, Lillie Yarborough and myself think we did nothing other than our duty and certainly not any more than any other teachers would have done under the same circumstances. We are so thankful that the children were all saved and we just feel lucky compared to others in Texas who were caught unawares by the tornado.

Our school is located about three miles southwest of Frost in Navarro county. The sky had been gloomy and threatening all day. We all knew some trouble was brewing but we didn't know exactly what.

When it was time for the dismissal of the children it had become quite dark. Far off we could see a funnel-shaped cloud that told of a twister raging somewhere. We would not let any of the children go except those who lived right close by and in sight of the school.

Our chief concern was to prevent a panic among the youngsters. If they had become fear-stricken and had lost their heads there would have been no saving them. We herded them all into a single room where they couldn't see the cloud and kept them as quiet as possible.

Mr. Merrill stood in the doorway and watched the course of the storm. A tornado cloud is shaped just like a cone, with the small end closest to the ground. It is very large, black and fuzzy looking, and it tears along with a horrible shrieking, groaning sound, calculated to strike terror into the hearts of the bravest. It is quite easy to tell in advance just where it is going to hit, because the cloud stands out very plainly against any landscape.

When Mr. Merrill saw the cloud approaching and knew that inevitably it would pass over us, he came to us, and suggested that we take the children to some small ditches on the other side of the road, about 15 or 20 steps from the school building.

We hurried the pupils into the ditches and then ordered them to lie down flat and keep their heads covered with their arms. Then we did likewise, that is all of us except Mr. Merrill, who stood erect to see that the children did not get up.

We heard the sound of the twister for many minutes before it struck. It was agonizing waiting there and it must have been terrible for the children. But our youngsters were very obedient and only one made an effort to get out of the ditch. Mr. Merrill immediately jerked him back to safety.

When the tornado finally struck our school building it levelled it. The building broke as though a bomb had struck it and timber rained for many feet around us. One of the flying objects hit Mr. Merrill in the back and knocked him off his feet. He received several rather nasty bruises about the body and a dislocated shoulder.

Miss Yarborough was knocked unconscious by a piece of flying wood. She received a scalp wound and a badly bruised right arm and side. I also have a scalp wound and bruises about the shoulders, neck and arms.

It seemed less than a minute and the tornado had passed us by. We routed the children out of the ditches and sent them on to the home of Grover Smith, who lives only a short distance from the school.

Miss Yarborough and I were taken to the Hillsboro sanitarium for treatment and then sent home. Mr. Merrill was carried to a local physician's home and treated there.

So many people have asked how we felt. None of us was excited. We couldn't afford to be, because any fear on our part would have been instantly communicated to the children. Because we were not excited, when the time came for action the children did exactly as they were told and escaped scot free.

BY JOHN P. BOUGHAN,
Associated Press Market Editor.

CHICAGO, May 10.—(AP)—Forced upward by surprising reduction in official estimates of expected yields of domestic winter wheat this season, wheat prices today finished at substantial gains. Besides the bullish effect of the government crop report, private crop advices from all parts of the southwest indicated that not only has wheat growth failed to improve since recent rains but instead has suffered deterioration. Prospects of a notable falling-off in the United States wheat visible supply total on Monday tended also to lift values.

Closing quotations on wheat were firm, 1 3-8@2c a bushel higher than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 3-8c off to 1-2@5-8c up, oats 3-8@7-8c advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 2c.

Highest prices of the day in the wheat pit were reached just before trading ended. This circumstance was due largely to the fact that the greater part of the government's 18,000,000 bushels curtailment of crop estimates applies to Oklahoma, Texas and Kansas, and that today's late unofficial advices apparently showed that unfavorable conditions in the southwest have persisted since the government data was gathered. Late developments today indicated also that there had been fair-sized export purchasing of domestic winter wheat cleaning up seaboard stocks owned by private interests as well as wheat there controlled by government sponsored bodies.

A serious drag at times on the general upward course of the wheat market resulted from selling based on unofficial opinions that the government computation of the May crop report was unintentionally misleading. It was asserted in some quarters that a lower par yield than usual must have been taken in making the government estimates, and that the official forecast ought to approximate 570,000,000 bushels rather than 525,000,000 bushels, a total ascribed to a seasonal and vacillating par. Bears made much also of an explanation that the Washington May official crop figures relate to the condition of wheat remaining for harvest, and are not strictly comparable with the April report which is related to the entire sown acreage. On the other hand, considerable late buying today was done on account of announcement that two vessels have been chartered to move wheat out of Chicago for farm board allies.

Corn rallied at the last with wheat, but not until September delivery of corn had touched a new low-price record for the season. Oats swayed with corn.

Provisions were firm, owing to poise shown by the hog market.

Associated Press Financial Writer.

NEW YORK, May 10.—(AP)—Stock privilege issues made a good showing in the listed bond market as prices eased in a dull session today.

There was a fair demand for railroad bonds, particularly among the issues legal for savings banks, which turned slightly downward at the close under the absence of buying support. The general averages, however, showed the market slightly above the level attained last Saturday.

The improved trend in stocks pushed upward the convertible bonds, in which interest was largely concentrated today. American Telephone 4 1-2s were up 1 3-4 and International Telephone 4 1-2s, Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron 6s and Warner Brothers 6s ended the day on higher ground.

In the foreign group Japanese obligations sagged under the depressing influence of the forthcoming new government loan of which the American market is to absorb $50,000,000. Japan 6 1-2s lost more than a point, and Tokio 5 1-2s, Tokio Electric 6s lost fractionally. European governments were firm on light trading.

In an unusually small turnover, United States governments sagged from 1-32 to 3-32s.

NEW YORK, May 10.—(AP)—An early decline in cotton promoted by relatively easy Liverpool cables was followed by rallies today on covering for the week-end which may have been initiated by the early steadiness of grains and stocks and apprehensions that the central belt was getting too much rain. Rallies were not fully maintained, however, and after selling up from 16.30 to 16.44, May closed at 16.35 while the new October which had advanced from 14.58 to 14.72 closed at 14.64. The general market closed steady, net 3 points higher to 4 points lower.

The opening was steady at a decline of 5 to 10 points under liquidation and scattered selling inspired by the easy showing of Liverpool, offerings were light and quite readily absorbed around the initial figures by week-end covering, and the market developed a decidedly steadier tone during the middle of the morning on reports of excess rain in the central belt. July sold up from 16.31 to 16.50 and the new December contract from 14.68 to 14.80, with the general list showing net gains of about 3 to 9 points at the high point of the morning. There seemed to be a little more cotton for sale at 16.50 for July, however, and closing quotations showed reactions of 5 to 9 points from the best. At the close May was 10 points under the price of July and showed a premium of 171 points over the new October.

Liverpool cables reported scattering liquidation together with continental and Bombay selling in the market there and said that sales of cotton cloths and yarns were small, with stocks accumulating. Week-end reviews of the domestic goods markets came in for no particular comment. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 68,000 bales, against 82,000 last year.

SPOTS INACTIVE AT NEW ORLEANS.

NEW ORLEANS, May 10.—(AP)—The short session of the cotton market today was very quiet with price fluctuations narrow. The market was influenced to some extent by the weather but was mainly influenced by the week-end evening up and the straddle operations between July and the new crop months.

With Liverpool cables considerably lower than due, the opening here was lower, down 5 to 6 points, and as New York made a greater response to the cables than the market here prices eased off further in the early trading, showing losses of about half a dollar a bale.

Prices rallied in the morning on buying induced by a storm warning for the Texas coast and fears of too much rain in that state, gaining 14 points from the lows on the two most active months. Prices eased off near the end 2 to 5 points on realizing and the market closed steady at a small net advance. July, after trading to 15.97, down 10 points, rallied to 16.11, up 14 points, and closed at 16.09, up 2 points net for the day. The general market closed steady at net gains of 1 to 2 points.

Liverpool came in 6 to 10 points worse than due and first trades here showed losses of 5 to 6 points. The market eased off further in the early trading on good weather in the eastern belt, July trading as low as 15.97, and October at 14.58, down 8 to 10 points from the previous close. At one time during the first hour the difference between July and October narrowed to 138 points.

In the storm warning rally July advanced to 16.11 and October to 14.72, up 14 points on both months. There was a slight reaction from the best in the late trading on realizing and July closed at 16.09 and October at 14.67, or 1 to 2 points net higher for the day.

NEW YORK, May 10.—Cotton goods were quiet in primary markets as most of the large houses were closed on account of the funeral of W. H. Baldwin, senior member of the dry goods commission house of Woodward, Baldwin & Co. The week's sales were below production. Southern manufacturers were in the markets holding conferences with selling agents to readjust contract deliveries and arrange for the 50 per cent curtailment of production planned for the next two months. Raw silk was unchanged. Moderate gains are reported in the sales of wool goods for fall. Burlaps were a shade easier.

NEW YORK, May 10.—(AP)—The stock market nimbly surmounted the obstacle of week-end profit-taking today and closed with a sprint that brought net gains of 2 to 7 points to many of the prominent shares.

The session, of course, contrasted with last Saturday, both in the direction of the movement and in the volume of trading. Today's sales were 1,850,450 shares, against 4,867,530 a week ago and when the recent decline was speeding under full sail.

Speculative activity for the advance began in the utility shares, but soon overflowed into the industrials and specialties. Bulls took the view that the dullness of the market yesterday meant the completion of forced liquidation and they pushed ahead their favorites with the best show of confidence seen this week. Aided by rather extensive short coverings, they had little difficulty in moving up virtually the entire list.

The decrease of 216,433 tons in the Steel corporation's backlog was somewhat larger than had been predicted, but the drop had been well discounted by the stock, which gained 3 points, closing at the top price of 172 3-4. The April decline in unfilled orders compares with an increase of 90,905 tons during March and a rise of 16,045 tons in April, 1929. April shipments this year exceeded those of March by nearly 50,000 tons. New business in April was reported at 1,000,000 tons, a drop of 250,000 tons over the March total.

Copper shares acted well on reports of increased buying of the metal. Anaconda and Kennecott rallied about 2 points each and Chile gained 4.

The spurt in the utilities, which responded readily to pool operations, was marked up by a 6-point rise in Electric Power and Light. Buying of the stock was accompanied by reports that the plan for the United Gas Company merger would become effective next week. Columbia Gas, Consolidated Gas, American Telephone, American and Foreign Power, United Gas Improvement, and Stone & Webster participated in the advance to the extent of 2 to 5 points.

The large short interest in United Aircraft was severely squeezed. Under pressure yesterday in anticipation of an unfavorable earnings report, the stock dropped more than a point below Friday's close but rebounded nearly 8 and closed with a gain of 5 1-2. The earnings statement showed 39 cents a share for the first quarter against $1.05 on a smaller capitalization in the same period of 1929.

New highs for the year were made by Borden and the American Tobacco stocks, the latter rising 3 and 4 points. Johns-Manville, which is expected to benefit from improvement in new construction, rose 3.

Aside from the United States Steel tonnage statement the day's news was dull. Stock exchange member borrowings disclosed a gain of 6-10 of one per cent in the ratio of loans to market value of shares on May 1, or before the break in prices reached its peak. Figures on the quoted value of all listed shares, as of the same date, revealed a decrease of $770,839,647 during April.

Commodity prices made some improvement. Wheat rose about a cent and a half on the strength of the government crop report. Corn and cotton were generally steady.

Foreign exchanges eased. Sterling cables sagged to a new low for the year at 84.85 13-16.

POTATOES, OTHER PRODUCE SEE WHOLESALE PRICE FALL

SHIPMENTS STILL SHOW INCREASE

Wholesale prices of potatoes, cabbage, onions and strawberries tended downward during early May. Onion markets were very weak. Apples held about steady at shipping points but advanced a little in Chicago. Markets were firm to higher for celery, lettuce and tomatoes. The immediate supply of tomatoes is lighter than a year ago, at least until Rio Grande valley shipments of Texas stock become more active. Texas expects a heavy crop and movement is now under way.

Unless yields are greatly increased, plantings of summer cabbage indicate a crop about the same size as last year. Receipts of strawberries by train and by truck were becoming heavy. Carlot shipments averaged 240 cars daily last week. The season has been rather disappointing in some of the southern states. May is the biggest month for strawberries. Movement of new potatoes will soon exceed that of old stock. The Carolinas will soon begin shipping potatoes. Supplies of celery were rather limited, but movement of lettuce from California was averaging 175 cars each day. A wide range of prices prevailed on asparagus; most of the supply was from eastern producing sections.

Imperial valley cantaloupe shipments totaled 30 cars for the week. Standard crates were jobbing at $10-13 in the east. At this time last year, no California cantaloupes had yet been shipped. Movement of Texas carrots increased to 140 cars, and a similar number came from California. The supply of cucumbers increased sharply, when Texas forwardings jumped to 185 cars. Though only 30 carloads came from Florida, bushel hampers declined at Florida points to $3-3.60. California was the leading source of green peas, with 280 cars last week. Mississippi decreased to 65, but South Carolina increased to 90 cars of peas. A sudden decrease occurred in shipments of spinach, only 265 cars were reported, as against 490 the preceding week. Virginia was down to 200 cars, and only 20 or 30 each came from Maryland and Arkansas. Movement of Florida string beans increased sharply to 330 cars; Texas dropped to a total of 20, but the bean season opened in Louisiana. Sweet potato shipments required only 165 cars.

Cherries were beginning to arrive rather freely from California. About 30 cars were forwarded during the week. The season is earlier than last year. Movement of only 30 cars of grapefruit was in decided contrast to the heavy output of 635 cars during this same period last season. Arrivals from Porto Rico also decreased to 92 cars. Orange shipments totaled 1,060 cars, all but seven of which came from California. A year ago, about 2,750 cars of oranges moved. Combined forwardings of 26 leading fruits and vegetables increased last week to 15,275 cars, compared with 20,980 during early May of 1929.

Tomato Supply Falls.

Tomato production in southern Florida is somewhat lighter than that of last year. Rains reduced the crop in the Manatee district. Total production in portions of the state outside the southern part may be only about half what it was in 1929. The lower valley of Texas has a heavy crop, chiefly because of increased acreage. The Florida and southern Texas producing areas together expect 2,930,000 bushels, as against 3,481,000 last season. Acreage in Mississippi increased slightly and that in eastern Texas is greatly increased over last year's figure. South Carolina has more than twice as many acres in tomatoes as last season. Six second-early states together have 38,610 acres, or 28 per cent more than in 1929. Total intended acreage of tomatoes for manufacture is one-fourth greater than last year.

Opening f. o. b. prices of lug boxes of green wrapped stock in the Rio Grande valley of Texas were around $3.50. The Manate district of Florida reported a strong market at $4-4.25 per lug box, but stock of only fair quality returned $2.25-2.75 on the east coast. Florida output was heavier than the week before at 530 cars, while imports from Mexico were rather limited. The Mexican total of 220 cars, however, was 50 per cent more than was shipped from that region during the same week last season. City prices were firm for good stock. Original six-basket crates of fancy-count stock from Florida jobbed at $3.50-7, with repacks as high as $9. Original lugs of Mexican tomatoes sold at $3.50-5.50, but some fair quality stock brought only $2.

Cabbage Declines Further.

Cabbage markets were weak, as the total movement for early May reached 1,100 cars, or 65 per cent more than the preceding seven-day period. South Carolina, Alabama, Texas and Mississippi were all active. South Carolina alone shipped 640 cars. The f. o. b. level in Texas was $40 per ton, or $2 to $2.25 per lettuce crate. Terminal markets were lower on practically all cabbage except that the 1 1-2-bushel hampers from South Carolina held firmly at $1.25 to $2.25. Barrel crates from Alabama jobbed at $4.50 to $5.25. Texas arrivals sold mostly at $75 to $100 a ton, or $2.25 to $5 per crate. The New Orleans market quoted bulk Louisiana cabbage lower at $2.75 to $3 per 100 pounds. Baskets of imported Holland cabbage, holding about 100 pounds, sold generally at $1.75 to $3.

Preliminary estimates of acreage in 14 intermediate states show a total about the same as last year, but 11 per cent above the five-year average figure. Southwestern Virginia shows a 14 per cent increase over 1929. Other important sections in this group are New Jersey, Long Island and Tennessee.

Heavy Berry Movement.

Strawberry shipments were rapidly increasing, and heaviest movement of the season is expected during May. Output of 1,650 cars last week was more than double that of the week before, and was almost up to the corresponding total for the 1929 season. All important states showed gains, but biggest increases were reported in Louisiana, Arkansas, Tennessee and North Carolina. Louisiana shipped 620 and Arkansas and Tennessee 230 cars each. North Carolina started 280 cars. The f. o. b. auction average of 24-pint crates in the Hammond district declined to $1.60. Growers in North Carolina received mostly $3.75 to $5.50 per crate of 32 quarts. The Alabama season was waning and Oklahoma was beginning.

City quotations were still fairly satisfactory. The 24-pint crates from Louisiana jobbed at $2 to $3, with sales on a pint basis at 11c to 14c. Klondikes from Arkansas, Tennessee and Mississippi, packed in 24-quart crates, ruled generally $3.50 to $4.50. North Carolina berries sold mostly at 85 to $7.50 per crate of 32 quarts, or at 14c to 27c per quart. Many Carolina shipments were being made by motor truck to eastern markets. The Louisiana season so far has been somewhat disappointing, because all shipments are not carrying as well as was expected. Dry weather seriously damaged the Alabama and Mississippi crops. The strawberry season on the peninsula of Virginia, Maryland and Delaware will be characterized by reduced acreage and later maturity this year. Decreases of acreage in various counties range from 10 per cent to 25 per cent. Dry weather last summer retarded the growth of new beds. A cool spring hindered development of the berries. Virginia shipments should begin next week. Condition of the New Jersey crop is below average.

Potatoes Decline.

Potato markets were distinctly lower this past week. F. o. b. quotations on both old and new stock had declined considerably. Bliss Triumphs in the Lower Rio Grande valley of Texas were down to $3-3.50 per 100 pounds, and best Spaulding Rose in the Hastings district of Florida returned $6 per barrel, with haulings heavy. The Chicago carlot market declined about 15 cents per 100 pounds on old stock. Shipments of old potatoes decreased rapidly to about 2,500 cars, while new stock increased to 1,535 cars for the week. Florida and Texas each shipping about 700 and Alabama 105 cars. During the same period last season about 4,350 cars of old stock were shipped and 1,300 cars of new potatoes. The 1930 season has opened in Louisiana, Mississippi and Southern California. South Carolina should begin by May 10 and North Carolina by May 25. Virginia will be somewhat delayed. Terminal markets reported Florida barrels generally at $7-8.25 and Texas sacks at $4.25-5.15. Forwardings from Maine decreased to 1,315 cars and only 555 came from the north central region. Idaho shipped about 250 and Colorado 130 cars. The f. o. b. market for sacked Green Mountains in northern Maine was weak at $2.20-2.25 per 100 pounds. Western New York round whites also were lower at $2.75 and the range at north central shipping points was $2.65-2.85. Practically no sales were reported in Minnesota. Northern round whites in the Chicago carlot market ruled lower at $2.70-3, compared with Idaho Russets at $3.50-3.65. New Orleans dealers were getting $3.85 on Colorado Brown Beautys. A few jobbing sales of round whites from New York were reported in the east at $3.25-3.65 per 100 pounds, and Maine Green Mountains sold mostly at $2.60-3.65. The 90-pound sacks of Green Mountains from Prince Edward Island were quoted at $2.75-3.30.

Onion Prices Low.

Onion prices were still at a very low mark, ranging 70-85 cents per crate of best yellow Bermudas in southern Texas, and mostly 85-95 cents per crate of Crystal Wax stock, with some sales in the Raymondville district as high as $1.15. Terminal market sales were generally within a range of $1.25-1.90 per crate. Old stock was very scarce, but prices on the remaining supplies were rather low at $1-1.75 per 100-pound sack of New York yellows, or 75c-$1 per 50-pound sack from the middle west. The 110-pound sacks of yellows from Egypt sold mostly at $3 in Boston.

About 21 carloads arrived from Egypt and 7 from Chile, in addition to the 695 cars of onions from Texas and a beginning of 10 cars from Southern California. During the same week last season Texas shipped 1,090 cars. Acreage of onions in nine intermediate states is estimated at 8,000, an increase of 8 per cent over their combined 1929 plantings. The 16 important late-onion states may have 56,610 acres, compared with 54,310 last season, but this would be 15 per cent more than their five-year average plantings.

Celery Markets Firm.

Celery was in a rather strong position, with considerable advance in the f. o. b. price in the Manatee district of Florida and with a firm market in Southern California. California shipments increased to 210 cars, and Florida dropped to 350. About 25 carloads arrived also from Bermuda. The 10-inch crates in Florida returned mostly $3.25-3.75, as against large crates of 4 to 5 dozen stalks in California at $3-3.50. In consuming centers, Florida celery jobbed at a wide range of $2.50-3.25, depending partly on quality and condition.

MRS. S. V. SANFORD IS STATE FEDERATION PRESIDENT

Mrs. S. V. Sanford Elected Head Of Georgia Federation of Clubs

By Bessie S. Stafford, Editor of Woman's Department of The Constitution.

Mrs. S. V. Sanford, of Athens, was elected president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs at the morning's session of that body, which was held in the Hotel Dempsey auditorium in Macon, May 7. Mrs. Sanford will serve a two-year term, as will other officers, including first vice president, Mrs. M. E. Judd, of Dalton; second vice president, Mrs. W. B. Smith, of Tennille; recording secretary, Mrs. E. L. Coleman, of Barnesville; treasurer, Mrs. G. V. Cate, of Brunswick; parliamentarian, Miss Rosa Woodberry, of Atlanta; editor, Mrs. Rix Stafford, of Atlanta. Mrs. Robert K. Rambo, of Atlanta, was elected director for Georgia in the general federation.

The officers comprised the ticket presented by the nominating committee, which included Mrs. Samuel N. Inman, of Atlanta; Mrs. J. W. Gholston, of Comer, Mrs. A. P. Brantley, of Blackshear, chairman, and a representative of each of the 12 congressional districts, who are: First, Mrs. R. S. Youmans, Metter; second, Mrs. A. B. Conger, Bainbridge; third, Mrs. R. E. Lee, Fitzgerald; fourth, Mrs. Henry M. Bird, Bowden; fifth, Mrs. Kate Green Hess, Atlanta; sixth, Mrs. L. C. Tyrus, Barnesville; seventh, Mrs. Orlando Awtrey, Acworth; eighth, Mrs. A. C. Skelton, Hartwell; ninth, Mrs. O. G. Glover, Canton; tenth, Mrs. J. W. Hooks, Gordon; eleventh, Mrs. Rod Davis, of Douglas, and twelfth, Mrs. Fred Brown, Dublin.

Important Work.

One of Mrs. Sanford's most important work for Georgia federation was her splendid service as program chairman, giving to this assignment her best talent, the chairmanship extending over a period of many years, while second vice president of the state organization. Mrs. Sanford visited every district convention while first vice president, save only one, when she was prevented from attending by the opening of Sanford stadium, at the University of Georgia, named for her distinguished husband, Dr. S. V. Sanford, the notable occasion being marked by the Yale-Georgia football game played in the stadium. She was recording secretary and president of the Athens Woman's Club; second vice president and first vice president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. For seven years she held these two positions and never missed an annual meeting and was absent only one time from the meetings of the executive board. Likewise, Mrs. Sanford never missed being present at the dinner given to the trustees of the Tallulah Falls Industrial school.

Mrs. Sanford is a member of the Laura Rutherford chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy; treasurer of the Elijah Clarke chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution; vice chairman of the Athens chapter of Colonial Dames; a member of the Allen R. Flemming chapter of the American Legion Auxiliary; a member of the Service Star Legion of Atlanta; a member of the University Woman's Club; a member of the Oscar Brown chapter of the Spanish-American War Auxiliary. During the World War she was co-chairman of the Athens canteen and chairman of the committee on hospital garments and supplies.

For years she was a teacher in the Sunday school of the Athens Methodist-Episcopal church, south, and at present is a member of the Woman's Missionary Society. Mrs. Sanford is at present a member of the national democratic congressional committee from Georgia, an appointment recently received by Congressman Charles H. Brand, of Georgia.

Mrs. Sippel's Talk.

Mrs. John F. Sippel, of Baltimore, Md., president of General Federation of Women's Clubs, in her address to the Tuesday session of the fourth biennial held in Wesleyan College Conservatory chapel, gave the genesis and development of women's clubs in the United States, stating that the first woman's club organized in this country was in Illinois, the second in Georgia and the third in the state of Washington. She compared the early leaders of the federation to the heroine of "A Lantern in Her Hand," the Bess Streeter Aldrich much-discussed novel. Mrs. Sippel gave the keynote of each administration from that of Mrs. Moore until the present.

That of Mrs. Moore was organization; of Mrs. Pennypacker, citizenship. Mrs. Cowles, the war president, with her poise and calm, kept the members of the federation through that trying period of history. Mrs. Winter guided the international viewpoint which the war had developed in the women of the federation and Mrs. Sherman "swung us back to what is woman's real mission in life—the home." The goal of the present administration is the enrichment and betterment of community life and peace, through understanding, through like-minded women—the home makers of the world.

T. J. Avery Scholarship.

The Thomas J. Avery perpetual scholarship at Tallulah Falls school established by Mrs. Thomas J. Avery, of Atlanta, in memory of her late husband, and accompanied by the full payment of $2,000, was a highlight announcement of the Tallulah hour at the Macon convention. The scholarship came through Mrs. Bolling H. Jones, trustee chairman of memorials, and name gifts. The sum of $2,000 will be invested and its interest will maintain for all time a boy of the mountains at the school in memory of the late Thomas J. Avery. Mrs. Avery and her daughter, Mrs. Edna Avery Jones, are old and loyal friends of Tallulah Falls school, to which they have contributed liberally for many years. Mrs. Jones frequently assisted Mrs. Hugh M. Willet, director, in her work for and visits to the school.

DeLaperriere Gift.

An annual scholarship in memory of Mrs. Bertice Phillipy DeLaperriere was donated by her husband, A. L. DeLaperriere, of Hoschton. This was reported by Mrs. A. D. McCurry, president of the ninth district.

Vehicle Code.

The uniform vehicle code was indorsed by the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs in convention assembled here in the convention hall of Hotel Dempsey and the body authorized and directed the co-operation of its chairman of division of good roads and its legislative chairman to assist in conforming terms of said bill to the interests and needs of the state of Georgia, and to lend efforts through the organization of the state federation in procuring its passage.

The resolution provided, however, that nothing herein authorizes, or shall be considered as authorizing, the alignment of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs to any political group, or placing the federation in politics. The sole purpose of this resolution is to lend assistance of the federation in performing the public service of passing an efficient motor vehicle law for the state of Georgia. It is and has been the purpose of state clubwomen to assist in every way possible in matters of public welfare and as the safety of highways and the operation of vehicles thereon affects the interests of a vast majority of citizens.

Realizing that measures should be taken for the preservation of the national bird, the bald eagle, Georgia federation went on record as approving senate bill 2908, by Senator Peter S. Norbeck, and house bill 7994, by Augustus H. Anderson. Mrs. L. C. Waldrop, of Tallapoosa, chairman of conservation of national resources, signed the above.

Georgia clubwomen ratified the action of the executive board taken last October in Atlanta, which indorsed the original proposal of President Harding on February 24, 1923, for accession of the United States to the World Court, now urgent, the senate to ratify without delay the new protocol when presented, in order to bring to a just conclusion the six-year-long movement so widely indorsed by American people. Mrs. David Noehman, of Augusta, international relations chairman, presented the resolution.

Ella White Foundation.

Mrs. M. E. Judd, of Dalton, state treasurer; Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, of Madison, chairman of Ella F. White endowment; Mrs. A. H. Brenner, of Augusta, introduced the resolution which was adopted, that clubs of Georgia federation concentrate upon an effort to complete the 75 cent per capita endowment gift plan of Ella F. White Foundation, which now lacks about $2,500, and that the interest of the Ella F. White Foundation, to the amount of $400 per year for four years, be paid to General Federation of Women's Clubs, or Georgia's gift to the General Federation endowment. Provided further, that if the interest of Ella F. White endowment does not supply $1,600 in four years.

Mrs. A. P. Brantley, retiring director for Georgia in general federation, made the presentation speech and praised the work of Mrs. Brenner in the highest terms. Georgia federation has completed another successful administration and welcomed the incoming officers after speeding the parting of those serving with satisfaction through an inspiring period two terms, when the new officers were installed as follows: Mrs. S. V. Sanford, of Athens, president; Mrs. M. E. Judd, of Dalton, first vice president; Mrs. W. B. Smith, of Tennille, second vice president; Mrs. R. K. Rambo, Atlanta, director of the General federation for Georgia; Mrs. E. L. Coleman, Barnesville, recording secretary; Mrs. G. V. Cate, Brunswick, treasurer; Miss Rosa Woodberry, of Atlanta, is parliamentarian for life, and Mrs. Lamar Rucker, of Athens, was appointed corresponding secretary by Mrs. Sanford. The retiring officers include: President, Mrs. A. H. Brenner, of Augusta; vice president at large, Mrs. S. V. Sanford, Athens; second vice president, Mrs. R. K. Rambo, of Atlanta; recording secretary, Mrs. Olaf Otto, of Savannah; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. C. Kellogg, of Augusta; treasurer, Mrs. M. E. Judd, of Dalton; general federation director in Georgia, Mrs. A. P. Brantley, of Blackshear. Interesting to note that among the characters appearing in the realistic book week pageant put on by 50 LaGrange children, was the appearance of Miss Larose Wagner, granddaughter of the late Joel Chandler Harris, who represented the character of Uncle Remus, made famous in literature by the beloved author. The part of Sambo was taken by little Jackie Wilson. Mrs. H. C. Ryals, of McRae, treasurer of eleventh district, won the gold vase, offered by Mrs. M. E. Judd, of Dalton, retiring treasurer, for the best report in which every district treasurer entered.

District Winners.

Eighth district, of which Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, of Athens, is president, won the gavel for federating the largest number of junior clubs. This gavel is made from the wood of the famous Robert Toombs oak, which stood on the University of Georgia campus.

Fifth district, of which Mrs. L. O. Freeman, of College Park, is president, won the Dora Hill Smith loving cup, offered yearly, for the largest number of junior clubs organized during the past year. Mrs. J. A. Horn, of Boston, is state chairman of juniors, and awarded the cup to Mrs. Freeman, who received it in the name of the junior chairman for the district. Mrs. Josephus Camp, of Atlanta, whose illness prevented her attending the biennial.

Tallulah Playlet.

The usual routine of reports on the education foundations were varied by the presentation of an original playlet, in costume, illustrative of the human interest of the work of the Tallulah Falls school and the students' aid foundation, which are the twin educational enterprises of the Georgia Federation. "The Light in the Mountains and the Wey Out" was presented by Mrs. E. M. Bailey, of Acworth, president of the seventh district clubs, and six other members of the Acworth club, who drove from Acworth to Macon for the dramatic presentation. Mrs. E. M. Bailey is the author of the little skit and the dramatis personae was as follows: "Grandmother," Mrs. W. M. Webb; "Mother," Mrs. E. L. Collins; "Mary Ann," Mrs. E. W. Ray; "Myrtle," Mrs. C. C. Butler; "Mrs. Otley," Mrs. Frank Mills; "Miss Anne Carrington Davis," Miss Mattie Mitchell. The entire cast includes members of the Carrie Dyar Reading Club of Acworth, and are all prominent in the social and civic life of their community. Mrs. Bailey is president of the federated clubs of the seventh district; Mrs. Collins is president of the Acworth club; Mrs. Webb is president of Acworth W. C. T. U.; Mrs. Butler is a trustee of the public school system of Acworth, while Miss Mattie Mitchell is distinguished as a leader of Sunday school work. Mrs. Mills, who acted the part of Mrs. Otley, is a comparatively recent citizen of Acworth and is known especially to federated clubwomen as the sister of Mrs. Susong, president of Tennessee Federation of Women's Clubs and one of the south's most brilliant writers and speakers.

Dramatic Story.

Under the title, "The Light in the Mountains and the Wey Out," the little skit in three scenes carried very dramatically the story of the two foundations, beginning in the mountain cabin, with little Mary Ann puzzling hopelessly over the "sum" on her slate which neither "Maw" nor "Grandmaw" can help her solve. To her comes the chance to go to Tallulah Falls school on a gift scholarship of $150. In a later scene Mary Ann was shown triumphant as an honor member of the 21st anniversary graduating class of 1930 but anxious to go on to college and then back to Pilot Knob to teach her own people, but is again without money. Georgia federation, through Mrs. Woodward and Mrs. Large, had an answer to her problem and the students' aid foundation promises to lend her enough to carry Mary Ann through her college course. The play closes with the Tallulah song and "The Wey Out" song which points to the Frances Liggett Wey memorial as giving a "wey out" of her difficulties to the young Georgia girl ambitious for a college education. This memorial to the late Mrs. H. B. Wey, for 20 years head of students' aid foundation, is reporting the conclusion of the first $5,000 unit of a $10,000 memorial to Mrs. Wey.

Mrs. Walker's Talk.

At the district president's luncheon held at Christ church parish house, Mrs. Clifford Walker, of Atlanta, wife of former Governor Walker, talked on "Community Awareness," which she said "carries with it community alertness, and community alertness carries with it community progress." She urged that community leaders use their sense of taste and experiment first before adopting some plan with which they are not entirely familiar. "Taste, test, use the most careful discrimination before bringing any project into your community life, for by it men or women may live or die." Mrs. Walker mapped out before her hearers a program for community progress in which she urged that the clubwomen with businessmen of each town visit the different sections of the town and confer as to what is best for the improvement of the town.

An address was made by Henry T. McIntosh, editor of the Albany Herald, on "Club Publicity from the Editor's Standpoint." He told of the growing sympathy between those who direct activities of women and those who direct newspapers. He said he liked to think of Georgia clubwomen and Georgia newspapers touching elbows and together facing the grave problems with which the state is confronted. He entered into a discussion of these problems—public education, the malaria situation, the mud slinging style of the race for political office, etc.

Tallulah Handcraft.

Beyond question the most elaborate and interesting exhibit of handcrafts ever sent to a convention of Georgia Federation, made by Tallulah Falls Industrial schoöl pupils, is displayed on the mezzanine floor of the Hotel Dempsey. It embraces rugs, towels, fans, baskets, lamp shades, chair seats, and other articles too numerous to mention. Mrs. George Blossom, chairman of exhibits for Macon Woman's Club, is in charge of all the exhibits, and Mesdames John Lester and Willard Patterson, representing Tallulah school trustees, are assisting the chairman in featuring the remarkable work done by underprivileged mountain children, who are being taught handcrafts at the school. Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, vice president of the board of trustees, presented Mrs. John F. Sippel, of Baltimore, Md., General Federation president, a feather fan, in orchid shades. The Georgia library commission also has a splendid exhibit on the mezzanine floor, Mrs. J. W. Gholston, of Comer, being chairman of library extension for Georgia Federation, and Miss Beverly Wheatcroft is secretary for the commission.

Mrs. Woodward Presides.

Mrs. David Woodward, of Atlanta, chairman, presided over the student aid foundation hour, assisted by Mrs. E. K. Lodge, secretary. An outstanding feature was the announcement of the conclusion of the first $5,000 unit of the $10,000 memorial to the late Mrs. Henry B. Wey, of Atlanta, for 20 years head of student aid foundation. This memorial known as the Frances Liggett Wey fund of student aid foundation, was launched at the Georgia Federation convention held a year ago in Gainesville. Much pleasure is expressed in conclusion of the first $5,000 unit within the year.

Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, of Madison, made the interesting announcement that the 75 cents per capita plan adopted by the federated clubs of Georgia at the Columbus convention in 1919 will be entirely completed by the addition of $2,500 from state clubs. Approximately $10,000 has already been collected, and Mrs. Fitzpatrick will urge redoubled efforts be put in motion so as to complete the small amount.

County problems were discussed by Mrs. G. V. Cate, of Brunswick, who stated that the county as a unit in education has great possibilities for the improvement of Georgia schools. A county-wide tax administered by a county board of education can give the poorer communities better schools than such community would otherwise enjoy, thus equalizing the educational opportunity of every child in the county, she pointed out. "It has become the custom in Georgia," said Mrs. Cate, "for the towns and cities to set up independent school systems, and by so doing have built up a wall around themselves and shut out the rural child. With one administrative body for the entire county, the country schools may enjoy better supervision and may be consolidated when advisable, which would result in improved conditions. By requiring her county school superintendents to hold office, subject to the vote of the people, Georgia has crippled the efficiency of her schools."

Mrs. S. V. Sanford, of Athens, first vice president, reported 22 new clubs federated since the last convention held in Gainesville, and 41 clubs have federated during her two-year term of office.

American Home.

Mrs. Joseph Myers, of Athens, represented Mrs. Ira Farmer, of Atlanta, chairman of the department American home, who was unadvoidably detained at home, and read Mrs. Farmer's report on home demonstration, and her own on home economic teaching. Other reports were read by Mrs. Norman Sharp, on Georgia products; Mrs. E. D. Dimmock gave home making; and Mrs. Ober Warthen talked on family finance.

Mrs. Isidor Gelders, of Fitzgerald and past president of Fitzgerald Woman's Club, won the $10 gold piece offered in a statewide contest for the best essay written on "The Right Use of Leisure," a project of general federation and coming under the American home department of the national body. Mrs. C. R. Hawk, of Valdosta, chairman of division of service, under whose chairmanship the contest was conducted, and who offered the cash prize, announced the winner at Thursday's session. "We should think of all amusements and recreations and other uses of leisure as a means to an end to make us more fit for life here and hereafter," was the comprehensive paragraph of Mrs. Gelder's essay. She is the wife of Isidor Gelders, editor of the Fitzgerald Leader-Enterprise, of which she is news editor. W. T. Anderson, editor of the Macon Telegraph, delivered the prize to Mrs. Gelders, whose essay will be entered in the national essay contest to be decided upon at the general convention in June in Denver. Mrs. John Shorter Cowles, of Atlanta, member of Atlanta Pioneer Society, won second place in this contest, $5 in gold, and Mrs. L. O. Freeman, president of fifth district, received the award for Mrs. Cowles. W. T. Anderson, editor of the Macon Telegraph, one of the judges, delivered the prizes.

Mrs. Rucker Corresponding Secretary.

Mrs. Lamar Rucker, of Athens, accepted the office of corresponding secretary for Georgia federation, the appointment being made by Mrs. S. P. Sanford. Mrs. Rucker is a daughter of the late Mrs. Nellie Peters Black, who died while in office. From her distinguished mother Mrs. Rucker inherits her club ideals and standards. She is past president of Athens Woman's Club, a trustee of Tallulah Falls schools, and eighth district chairman for the school. Her sister is Mrs. John F. MacDougald, of Atlanta, scrapbook chairman for Georgia federation and a tireless worker.

Mrs. S. V. Sanford was honor guest at the breakfast given the eighth district in which the incoming state president is a resident, with Mrs. H. O. Ritchie, of Athens, eighth district president presiding. Seventh district clubwomen feel a pardonable pride in also laying claim to Mrs. Sanford, as she was born in the seventh district, being before her marriage to Dr. Sanford, dean of the University of Georgia, Miss Grace McClatchey, of Marietta. Athens Woman's Club, eighth district club women, Macon Woman's Club, and personal friends presented as tributes to the newly elected president, baskets, bouquets and vases of flowers, when she was inducted into office in historic Wesleyan college conservatory chapel Thursday evening, demonstrating the affection bestowed upon Mrs. Sanford by Georgia club women.

Mrs. A. H. Brenner and Mrs. A. P. Brantley, retiring president and director, respectively, were lauded for their dignity, breadth of understanding, energetic efforts, and spirit of friendliness always evidenced in the performance of their duties during their two-year term of office. As past presidents of the Georgia federation they automatically become life directors of the Georgia federation and pledged loyal support of every worthy movement launched, and to uphold every ideal of the state body. Mrs. W. C. Kellogg, of Augusta, returning corresponding secretary, was thanked for the punctilious performance of her duties. The executive board meeting was presided over by Mrs. S. V. Sanford following the adjournment of the open session held in the convention hall of the Hotel Dempsey.

255 Attend.

The last day of the four-day session brought forward the fact that 255 clubwomen attended the thirty-fourth annual meeting, the credentials report being read by Mrs. L. A. Collier, of Barnesville, chairman. Mrs. A. H. Brenner, of Augusta, retiring president; Mrs. S. V. Sanford, of Athens, newly elected president, and Mrs. W. B. Lamar, of Macon, presided over the concluding session.

Resolution of Thanks.

Resolutions of thanks were presented by Mrs. J. E. Hays, Montezuma, and adopted by the unanimous vote of the convention. Thanks to all who participated in the success of the convention were expressed, for the presence of the president of the General federation, the addresses of the speakers and the various persons and organizations and institutions which lent their efforts to the entertainment and comfort of the delegates, "and above all for continuous unselfish courtesies of Macon Woman's Club that have made the thirty-fourth annual meeting an experience to be remembered with joy and gratitude."

An invitation was extended by Waycross for the next convention to meet in that city. The offer was presented by Mrs. E. D. Dimmock, president of Waycross Woman's Club.

The above photograph presents the newly-elected officers of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs at the fourth biennial council held in Macon. Reading from left to right, front row: Mrs. W. E. Judd, of Dalton, first vice president; Mrs. S. V. Sanford, of Athens, president; Mrs. W. B. Smith, of Tennille, second vice president; Mrs. E. L. Coleman, of Barnesville, recording secretary; second row, Mrs. Robert K. Rambo, of Atlanta, director for Georgia in general federation; Mrs. Lamar Rucker, of Athens, corresponding secretary; Mrs. G. B. Brunswick, of Brunswick, treasurer. They will serve for two years and the 1931 biennial council will be held in Waycross, at invitation of Waycross Woman's Club, of which Mrs. E. D. Dimmock is president. Photo by Metro Studio, of Macon.

Mrs. Brenner's Final Report Interests Georgia Clubwomen

By Mrs. A. H. Brenner, retiring president of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Looking back over the past two years it would seem that the keynote of this administration has been "Lead Kindly Light," and the slogan "you can never tell what the day will bring forth." Somewhat overcome by the realization that the federation had become perfectly adjusted to certain administrative changes; that greater Tallulah had become an established fact; and, that there were no loose ends left to be picked up, my only appeal was for "a measure of growth commensurate to that of previous years." I called attention to the fact that our foundations will always offer ample opportunity for united work and local needs, for incentive efforts, are never lacking.

So with the thought in mind of a program that would begin at the bottom and work outward, before coming in San Antonio I decided to appeal to Mrs. Clifford Walker, chairman of co-operation with P.-T. A., to develop her outline, presented at the Albany biennial council in 1927. It will be recalled that by the use of a tri-colored map, Mrs. Walker showed that out of the 160 counties in Georgia only 33, colored white, had sufficient population and tax values to warrant the support of the many agencies, state and privately financed, that are seeking establishment. It showed conclusively that many counties were not large enough, or sufficiently populated, to warrant the establishment of such state work as the federation had been appealing for, namely, adequately financed schools, health and home demonstration agents, health officers, social welfare workers and free county libraries. Her study proposed two solutions and showed that our state departments were working hard for a combination of counties.

You will recall that the amendments to the Ellis health law, presented to the legislature last summer, provided for a grouping of counties. Its study revealed conclusively that co-operation would be necessary in order to bring about some system whereby it could be determined which services were most needed in the smaller counties and it was apparent that the clubs could render a tremendous service by teaming up with other organized groups of men and women for a statewide program. Realizing that this program would call for close co-operation with all state agencies, as well as organizations, the title of Mrs. Walker's chairmanship was changed to that of "co-operation." I then immediately wrote to our state agencies, expressing the hope that something definite might result. It has taken time and hard work, with many interruptions that could not be avoided, but our general policy has taken this ideal program into consideration and the state boards have had in mind when asking so freely for our help. Mrs. Walker's address, delivered at the club institute in the summer of 1926, entitled "Community Awareness," has been revised and printed for distribution as a foreword to the program she has arranged through co-operation with the state boards of education, health and public welfare. She has also kept in touch with the university, the college of agriculture, and the high school, which was her first vision along this line of work. It has, therefore, been most gratifying to find the general federation balanced community program entirely in accord.

The value of this chairman of co-operation has been amply proven on several occasions we have been able to turn over to her, for conference, requests for our opinion on many subjects, such as the advisability of certain national associations establishing headquarters in our state. A recent letter from her tells that one of these, the National Social Hygiene Association, has been able to make plans that will materially benefit state forces without establishing a state agency. We are grateful to our state boards for the contacts established and feel that in this way we have carried out the advice of Mrs. Sippel, our general federation president, given immediately after the conference with business executives, presided over by a representative of the United States Chamber of Commerce. Her instructions were that we use the memorandum of that conference as seemed best in our own state, but she urged that we not deviate from the course laid down for ourselves, but that we speed progress in our own line of endeavor.

Departments and Committees.

At the beginning of this year our departments and committees were again revised to conform to the changes made by the general federation. In appreciation the splendid way the districts and clubs have adapted themselves to these changes. By a series of readjustments the personnel of the executive board has been practically maintained with few gains and only a very few losses. The resignation of Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, who for so many years had done magnificent work as chairman of gift scholarships, was necessitated by ill health. This vacancy, as well as a few others, was filled by the appointment of district presidents who retired from office in October and November. Our chairmen have been vigilant in keeping up contacts established with their respective chairmen in the general federation, thereby report finding their work pleasant and profitable. The resourcefulness of our chairmen has been gratifying; many have arranged their own programs; had them printed and mailed at their own expense.

That our departments have been well organized has been proven by the fact that when the chairman of public welfare was elected president of the ninth district the retiring president of the eighth district took over the department, but due to illness in her family was forced to resign and the retiring president of the third district took over the work without interruption. The success of her efforts under such difficulty is proven by her ringing statement of April 24: "The public welfare department is 100 per cent. Every division reported and every district. Wonderful reports. It's overwhelming me. Can't digest it. Shall send on to Mrs. Dunbar soon. Hope to see you in Macon." (Signed, Mrs. R. E. Lee, chairman public welfare.) At the social workers' conference held in Albany in February we were represented by Mrs. Lee, her club and district being highly complimented for the public welfare work.

In January the federation was asked to assist the state board of education in putting over the 1930 campaign for adult education. The president of the National Educational Association appointed your president on the state committee and our department chairman and her division chairmen of literacy and adult education were added. Reports from clubs show great activity in the campaign, even raising money to match the appropriation available. Another fine piece of special work has been done at the request of the bureau of vital statistics of the state board of health. Although Georgia, in 1823, was the first state in the Union to pass a law requiring the registration of births and although our present vital statistics law was passed in 1914 and the bureau organized in 1919, it was found advisable this year to undertake an intensive educational campaign for birth registration. In order that our chairman might be in close touch with the state department Mrs. William Treanor, of Atlanta, was asked to take over the work under the department of public welfare.

Another division of that department has done valuable co-operative work. Our chairman of correction having through the assistance of the state board of public welfare, issued a splendid outline on "What Needs to be Done" and "What We Can Do," regarding the problems of crime and delinquency in Georgia. She also gives a list of books that can be obtained from the Georgia library commission and from the state board of public welfare. This valuable leaflet proved to be in line with the work of the general federation, though entirely adapted to our own needs. Your president has been frequently called on by Miss Jaffrey, chairman of correction for the general federation, to show our interest in the national program. Time forbids that I should speak of the outstanding work of every division and committee; their reports speak for them.

Child Health Council.

A definite step toward the co-ordination of organized state groups was accomplished on April 2 in the organization of the Georgia Child Health Council. The meeting was called by Governor Hardeman and was held at the State College of Agriculture with Dr. Andrew M. Soule as temporary chairman and Dr. Bowdoin, of the state board of health, as secretary. The federation was represented by its president, both vice presidents, the chairman of child welfare and a large number of club members. Your president was appointed a member of the committee on constitution and by-laws and was elected vice president. Dr. G. Y. Moore, of Cuthbert, was elected president.

Tallulah Maintenance.

Our ideal for Tallulah maintenance is that all clubs, especially all per capita clubs, contribute something to the support of the school. The goal set is one-third of the yearly expense, or $10,000; the remaining $20,000 to be derived from various incomes and through the personal efforts of the trustees. Last year's reports show that the clubs gave to maintenance $3,343.-39 and that annual scholarships from clubs and individuals created by districts totaled $5,816.00, a total from the districts of $9,159.30. Read with appreciation the other sources of income, the big things done by and through your trustees that make it possible for the Georgia federation to claim ownership of this magnificent piece of work: one of the finest in the entire general federation.

In the April issue of the General Federation News our school was featured as the outstanding work of the Georgia federation. This article was kindly prepared by Mrs. J. K. Ottley, president of the board of trustees. Through Mrs. William N. Harder, chairman of programs for the general federation, and Dr. Mary Burch, vice chairman of the department of education, a telegram was received in April inviting Mrs. Ottley to make a 45-minute address before the biennial convention in Denver. We regret exceedingly that it was not possible for her to accept for we realize fully what a brilliant contribution she would have made to the splendid program being arranged by Dr. Reinhardt and Dr. Burch.

Wey Memorial.

Complying with your action—taken at Gainesville—a committee was formed to raise a suitable fund in memory of our beloved Mrs. H. B. Wey, the same to be a part of the student aid foundation. This committee, consisting of the student aid committee, your president, two vice presidents, the district presidents and their student aid chairmen, has done all that seemed to be within its power to promote the movement. A beautiful booklet was compiled by Miss Emily Harrison, of the student aid committee, giving an outline of Mrs. Wey's life, and her work for the student aid foundation. Letters were mailed to all club presidents before the opening of the season in September, 1929. Our second vice president, Mrs. R. K. Rambo, was appointed by the committee to speak on the Wey memorial at all district conventions and on other occasions when requested to do so. No definite amount was decided on. The sum secured will be reported by the chairman. I trust that the clubs feel that they have done their best and that the committee has been faithful in the discharge of its duties. For the time being, the memorial has of necessity taken precedence over the district home economic scholarships, which are also a part of our student aid foundation. I would urge that these scholarships be kept in mind, but that the recommendations of the student aid foundation be adopted.

General Federation Foundation.

In 1928 we voted to express interest in a greatly needed foundation for the General Federation. In 1929 we voted to have our delegates take the question back to their clubs and be prepared to take final action at the district conventions to be held in October and November. Your president and director were instructed to report to the General Federation according to action reported by the districts. All, with the exception of one district, voted to "do their best." Our director has used every possible means to explain the need and the plan, also, to find some acceptable method to submit for your consideration. Two clubs have already contributed, though we had deferred active participation until next fall out of consideration for the Wey Memorial. Many states have sent in substantial sums.

Need of a Foundation.

I do not think we can afford to ignore this opportunity to discharge a sacred duty and to supply a pressing need. Our Ella F. White Fund should have been raised before now. But greater Tallulah could not wait, and was worth the time and effort devoted to it. It is now your prideful possession. This year has been devoted to student aid. What next? One step is enough, but we must be certain that one step is taken. Let me be very frank with you. Our budget, with all possible care and no extra expenditures, is running alarmingly close to the sum of our income from dues. We have not even made certain purchases recommended by the executive board. Our budget should, also, include something to meet the legitimate costs of statewide work our departments are being called on to do. Our chairmen must either finance these projects themselves, or lower our standards of pride and independence by seeking help in printing, letter writing and postage. Sometimes this is justifiable, sometimes it is unwise. We need additional funds which should be derived from the interest on our Ella F. White Fund.

Sufficient money in the treasury would enable us to print a year book without soliciting advertisements. No other state federation uses them as we do. Only one or two use them at all, and then very sparingly. It takes up time of our executive secretary that should be given to other things. It necessitates haste in issuing the year book which otherwise might be more carefully compiled and issued by September 1. I am exceedingly grateful to the officials of our foundations for their co-operation. The assurance that I have done all in my power is gratifying.

Club Institute.

Mrs. William N. Harder, president of the Ohio Federation and chairman of the program for the Denver Biennial, will conduct our club institute, July 9-11, as part of the University Summer school. The institute of public affairs will be held during that week and so we will hear speakers of international fame. Mrs. Harder is an expert on program and is building for us one based on our former studies the community outline of the "seeing eye and the hearing ear" as given in Mrs. Walker's pamphlet. Every district should have a club institute chairman who is pledged to attend and to put on similar institutes in the district. Put it in the budget, cut out something else, a year book, if necessary.

The Districts.

Never has the federation had a finer group of district presidents. The way in which their executive board meetings have been held and the publicity given them is ample evidence. But we should remember the high degree of efficiency to which the districts had been brought by the retiring presidents. This insured wisdom in the selection of their successors. The districts are mastering the intricacies of federation work, and appreciate the fine system obtained by years of care spent in building up our constitution and by-laws and the rules for districts. Our constitution is not out of date, but up to date, as I have found when requests have come from other states, asking about universal membership and other difficulties that we have long since overcome. We should rejoice that our districts have voluntarily assumed district dues to finance their work; this makes a splendid contribution to state finances.

Importance of Local Work.

I am fully convinced that to be successful a state federation cannot afford to minimize, or magnify, any one part of the work. We must, above all, keep in mind the fact that club work is primarily for the development of individual women and the betterment of conditions that relate to her personal life, in her home and in her community. When we ask her to forget these and give herself entirely to things beyond her sight, we lose our hold upon her. She must first feel the absolute importance of herself and her surroundings and these must still be kept uppermost when we show her the joy and desirability of having a part in the great whole. We must begin at Jerusalem; but we must not stop until the uttermost parts of the earth are reached. At one club I found them intensely interested in a study of South America. Two talented members took part in an Argentine play that gave food for thought and was a bright bit in the midst of an annual report that covered every activity conceivable in a progressive American town. That club appeared to give as much to Tallulah as any other club in the state, of like membership. They reported a good sum to Tallulah endowment, besides maintenance. I believe that we can honestly say that local work has been magnified this past year and that state and general federation have gained in appreciation.

Because of the many appeals that have come to me to furnish the names of active club women for those seeking to interest them in projects that appear worth while, or that promote business interests and schemes, I feel impelled to again warn our membership against the dangers of being exploited. Sometimes we hesitate to say "no," lest we subject our organization to criticism. Some even use clever methods to steal our names, which they know is not stealing trash." Individual clubs are free to do as they please, but I have no right to use the prominence and influence I have gained as your officer to further the business of any other organization or interest, not even my own. I simply use myself as an example.

Personal Reports.

Immediately after the Gainesville council, I prepared an article for the club page and wrote notes of appreciation to all who contributed to our entertainment, prepared publicity for the Wey memorial, rearranged our departments and committees and left for the general federation biennial council at Swampscott, Mass., on May 23. My impressions of the council appeared on the club page and later an appeal was made for subscriptions to the General Federation News. In June, I gave much care to reading proof of minutes, official directory and my report for year book, July 9, sent out general publicity and an article to the club page, urging attendance on the club institute. Attended the club institute, at State University, Athens, July 9-19, directed by Miss Emily Louise Plumley, president of the Connecticut Federation of Women's Clubs, taking parts assigned and assisting with the direction. Wrote the report for the club page before leaving for Atlanta, where I spent two mornings at headquarters and held conferences with student aid committee and the chairman of co-operation. I attended 11 of the 12 district conventions. Due to floods, which completely isolated Augusta during the first week in May, it was impossible for me to attend the meeting of the ninth district, held in Canton. I have presided over two regular executive board meetings, in October and February, and attended the meetings of the Tallulah Falls trustees on preceding dates. Performed the duties of a hostess state president at the annual meeting of he southeastern council, November 12-16, when the council was entertained by the Woman's Club of Brunswick, in honor of our director, M

Drama Workshop To Present Three Original One-Act Plays

The coming production of three original one-act plays by the Drama Workshop of Atlanta is arousing widespread interest. The work of this group of writers in the development of a local drama has attracted much attention in the past and is familiar to Atlanta theatergoers.

"Papa," a clever comedy, by Emily Vandiver Ramage, is the first play. Mary Ben Wright, the director, announced the cast, which includes: Papa, Harvey Camp; Mama, Mary King; Anne, Lillian Clement; Mary, Emily Warren; Jack, Willie Wilkerson.

Both Miss King and Mr. Camp, who will play the heaviest roles, have done exceptionally good work in the past and are admirably cast as "Mama" and "Papa."

"Wanted," by Mary Martin Ramage, is an interesting phase of New York life. This play also has an able cast, including: Miss Gale, Catherine Hertell Crawley; Miss Woodward, Lillian Clement; Miss Deith, Emily Warren; Miss Richardson, Sarah White; Miss Shepherd, Emily Stead; Mrs. McPherson, Jessie Reynolds Boyd; Mr. McPherson, Peter Marshall.

Mrs. Crawley will be remembered for her creation of several outstanding roles. The workshop takes pleasure in announcing the addition of Jessie Reynolds Boyd to its group of actors. Mrs. Boyd is well known as one of the most gifted actors in the city.

"Thinking Makes It So," by Carolyn Pierce Dillard, is a subtle comedy dealing with a phase of southern life. Frances K. Gooch, director of dramatics at Agnes Scott college and authority on the stage, will play the leading role in this play. Although Miss Gooch has been widely known to Atlanta audiences as a director and a reader, it was left for the workshop to discover her ability as an actor. Miss Gooch is supported by an exceptionally good cast, which includes: Mrs. Nellie Lee Pratt-Thomas, Frances K. Gooch; Mary Pratt Thomas, Ruth Pirkle; Daisy Thomas, Caroline McKinney; Cousin Pratt Martin, John Wesley Weekes; Pratt Van Buren, Herbert S. Alden; Little Pratt Jones, Polly Peters; Judge Park, Fielding Dillard.

Miss Nan Bagby Stephens, organizer and director of the Workshop, is doing constructive work with her group in playwriting. A dramatist of note herself, she is an inspiration and an able critic for the group. Mary Ben Wright is directing all three plays. Miss Wright has had wide experience in the theater, and is gifted both as an actress and as a director.

A "Beauty Shampoo" in 10 minutes

Quickly, Easily, at a few cents cost—you can have a Real "Beauty Shampoo" that will give Your Hair a Loveliness, quite unobtainable by Ordinary Washing.

YOU CAN SAVE TIME, expense and inconvenience, by adopting this simple method of "beauty shampooing" which gives truly professional results at home.

The beauty of your hair, its sparkle . . . its gloss and lustre . . . depends, almost entirely, upon the way you shampoo it.

A thin, oily film, or coating, is constantly forming on the hair. If allowed to remain, it catches the dust and dirt—hides the life and lustre—and the hair then becomes dull and unattractive.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a glass or pitcher with a little warm water added, makes an abundance of . . . soft, rich, creamy lather . . . which cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily, removing with it every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Only thorough shampooing will . . . remove this film . . . and let the sparkle, and rich, natural . . . color tones . . . of the hair show.

Ordinary washing fails to satisfactorily remove this film, because—it does not clean the hair properly.

Besides—the hair cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali, in ordinary soaps, soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why women, by the thousands, who value beautiful hair, are using Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo. It cleanses so thoroughly; is so mild and so pure, that it cannot possibly injure, no matter how often you use it.

You will notice the difference in the appearance of your hair the very first time you use Mulsified, for it will feel so delightfully clean, and be so soft, silky, and fresh-looking.

Try a Mulsified "Beauty Shampoo" and just see how quickly it is done. See how easy your hair is to manage, and how lovely and alluring it will look. See it sparkle—with new life, gloss and lustre.

You can get Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo at any drug store, or toilet goods counter, . . . anywhere in the world.

National Convention To Be Held Next Week in Denver, Colorado

Mrs. R. H. Hankinson, president of Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers, presents the following message: The absorbing subject of thought in P.-T. A. circles over the nation this week is the approaching national convention to be held in Denver, Col., May 18 to 24. Representatives from every state in the Union are scheduled to be present. Georgia's delegation will leave Thursday morning from Atlanta. The president has no way of knowing the women of the state who would be interested in joining the party, so she is asking, through this medium, that every woman who cares to join the party wire her at once that arrangements may be made for the comfort and convenience of all.

Need of Organization.

The vital need of the Parent-Teacher organization today is to know what should be done and how to do it. When an organization stumbles in the doing, the children are the victims and routine efficiency will not meet the demands of the day. Fresh viewpoints are a necessity. The national organization, better than any other medium, makes these viewpoints, information and methods available.

In line with this same thought, the University of Georgia is offering a Parent-Teacher course during the summer school term, and is offering credit for the course. Teachers are again urged to make use of this opportunity to be of greater service to the schools they serve. During this same period the three days' P.-T. A. institute will be held July 2, 3 and 4. Every effort will be made to have a large delegation of P.-T. A. leaders and members present. At a meeting of the I. N. Ragsdale P.-T. A., in Atlanta, Friday, the president, Mrs. L. C. Bowden, voiced the idea of taking a group from the association for at least one day's attendance at the institute. The state president commends this idea to other associations, and particularly to those within easy travel distance. She asks that any who will try this, or any similar plan, to gain advantage offered by that institute for the local association, will at once communicate the fact to her.

Music Week.

Music Week was evidenced at this same meeting in Atlanta by an orchestra composed of little children from a number of Atlanta schools. Scarcely any work that a school could do would be of greater service to a community than the organization and maintenance of a children's orchestra or band. The musical contribution, coupled with a gift from the vocational class—a wicker flower basket, and the presentation of one flower by each of the children of the school to be used in the decoration of the auditorium for the meeting were features that marked the occasion. A check for five food books added the final touch of loyalty to the meeting.

A recent incident worthy of note, and that commends itself to other counties, was the unusual "commencement" of the Butts county schools at Jackson. At a banquet held before the union exercises, Superintendent Jack Denpsey assembled the heads of all schools and civic organizations and the presidents of all Parent-Teacher Associations. The P.-T. A. banner won by Butts county at the recent Macon convention was the decorative feature of the occasion. This arrangement of a gathering of all parents of the county, all teachers, and all organizations backing the schools, spells something for the educational opportunities for future children of Butts county.

New Americus P.-T. A.

Americus, under the direction of Superintendent Ed Mathis, celebrated Health Week, and instituted new Parent-Teacher organizations. The state president attended the functions on Friday and visitors had been invited from all school communities in the county. The prediction is that the new Parent-Teacher Association in Americus will be a joy to the school and the county.

Fulton county, under the direction of Superintendent Jere Wells, held a county celebration at Lakewood, to which he invited the state president of Parents and Teachers.

"The Home" is the subject of Parent-Teacher attention for May. It is significant that Mother's Day falls in this month. The summer days give opportunity for home conditions as they affect the local P.-T. A. and the school and for preparation of the more formal activities in the fall.

Pre-School Circles.

But particularly it gives opportunity for the organization of pre-school associations. These are the foundation on which the whole structure rests. So much has been determined before the child reaches the age of six years, that if we could for one moment comprehend the enormity of it, we would center our strictest attention here. Half a dozen mothers organized into a reading circle, each studying some phase of parental education, would justify the existence of an organization in the community. Because this branch of the work is so vastly important, thinking leaders have preferred to call each separate organization a pre-school association, not a circle. Participation in these meetings, if it were to do nothing else, would turn the mind into channels in which it might not otherwise run. The training of children is the greatest job in the world and also the one for which we have sought the least specific training. Mothers, and fathers, too, are well meaning. Criticism directed at the young people today indicates that those parents, however well meaning, are not always wise. Mother's Day, particularly among young mothers, should be a day of dedication and rededication to pre-school study and pre-school duty.

Summertime is the ideal time for council meetings, particularly in the rural districts. Properly functioning councils can provide thoroughly informed associations standing on the steps of each schoolhouse, waiting for the doors to open in the fall. If you are the president of a council or of a pre-school association or circle, please mail to the state president without delay your name and the name of the organization you serve. And because this is Mother's Day we offer a tribute to mothers of the P.-T. A.

Lee Street Plans May Day Pageant

Instead of the regular May meeting of the Lee Street P.-T. A. there will be a May Day pageant Friday morning at 9 o'clock. The day has been set aside not only as the May Day and Patrons' Day, but Health Work, School Curriculum and Good-Will Day will be featured at this time. The entire school will take part, and no individual child or group of children have been given special places of distinction or honor.

The school curriculum is to be worked out in dances, the unit of work in social science for each particular grade being the center of interest in the dance for that grade. The kindergarten will give the "World of Play," using the seeds, the sleeping plants and the growing flowers. "Farm Life," showing the happy farmer and his friends, the sunbeams and raindrops, is from Low 1. A health project has been prepared by High 1 from their study of community life. The dance from Low 2 will be "The Cave Dwellers," since their history is primitive life. The firefly dance from Indian life will be put on by the High 2 children. The dance of herdsmen has been worked out by the Low 3 children from their study of pastoral life. High 3-I has prepared a Japanese dance, and High 3-II a Dutch dance. Low 4 chose the Klappdans and picture Mediterranean life, and High 4 the Norwegian mountain glide from Viking life. Colonial life is portrayed by Low 5 in a picture of life in the old south, while pioneer life in the south is represented by the cotton dance, in which the High 5 pupils take part. From medieval life Low 6 picked the Highland Scottish and from modern life High 6 a Spanish dance. The ungraded class will represent the Indian sun worshipers. Colorful costumes will be worn in every dance.

The health work will be carried out through games, since the use of games for both children and adults has a deep significance for the individual and the community through the conservation of physical, mental and moral vitality. A unique radio program will feature Good-Will Day.

The Meaning Of Motherhood.

It has lately come to pass that no day of the year is more universally celebrated than "Mother's Day," with the probable exception of Christmas Day. The second Sunday in the month of May has been chosen for this sacred celebration, when all nature seems to say all beauty is indissolubly associated with mother-love.

The greatest writers and poets of today are using their pens and talents to welcome the celebration of the day which must afford them a thrill of filial emotion beyond compare. Dr. M. Ashby Jones, of St. Louis, Mo., so lately of Atlanta, the brilliant writer of "Text and Pretext," in The Atlanta Constitution, wrote several years ago of "Mother's Day" and said in part: "No matter what one's view of the Christian religion may be, he is indeed dead to the highest and holiest appeal, who does not respond to the beauty of that scene at the Cross, when Jesus, turning to Mary, said: 'Woman behold thy son.' Then said He to the disciple, 'Behold thy mother.' The appeal is to that which is best in human life. Civilization will have lost its vitality when it ceases to respond to the sentiment of this scene. When Jesus also spoke to the mother, saying, 'Behold thy son,' upon her He placed the most tremendous of all human responsibilities.

"Motherhood means more than the bearing of a child. It also means the rearing of a child. She is to give to that boy the first definition of woman and will largely determine his obligation and attitude toward the motherhood of the world. A mother's religion which is to be the value must be one which her boy as he leaves home can take into the daily experiences of life. May the chivalry of Jesus possess the hearts of the sons of America on Mother's Day and may the loyalty of Mary be the inspiration of our mothers."

"The Georgia Baptist W. M. U. executive board met last Tuesday at the state headquarters, 320 Palmer building. The following members were present: Mrs. W. J. Neal, Miss Mary Christian, Mrs. A. F. McMahan, Mrs. Ben Thompson, of Madison; Mrs. F. D. Burge, Mrs. B. L. Bugg, Mrs. G. S. Bordus, Mrs. J. D. Rhodes, Mrs. E. G. Walton, Mrs. W. T. Martin, Mrs. Roger Howell, Mrs. J. H. Zachry, Miss Clara Stephenson, Mrs. W. T. Henry, Mrs. A. G. Sullivan, Mrs. Gordon Singleton, Mrs. Paul Ethridge, Mrs. Paul White, of Rome, and Mrs. J. C. Lanier, of West Point.

"Mrs. E. G. Walton opened the meeting with the question, 'Is Christianity Answering Today's Needs?' Mrs. W. J. Neel called for the reports of the state secretary and young people's leader. Miss Mary Christian as usual made a splendid showing. During the past month she spoke at eight association meetings in 13 churches and traveled 1,183 miles in the interest of W. M. U. work. Mrs. A. F. McMahan reported the following gifts from the W. M. U. workers of Georgia during the past three months: W. M. U., $33,668.77; Y. W. A., $1,761.97; G. A., $578.99; R. A., $319.95; Sunbeams, $575.93. The total is $36,905.61, showing that more has been given during the first three months of 1930 than was given the first quarter of 1929.

"Several vice presidents were present and not only made encouraging reports of their work but also of the splendid mission study work conducted by Mrs. J. D. Rhodes in the associations during April, and of the warm receptions given Miss Mary Christian, Mrs. A. P. McMahan and Dr. T. W. Ayers as they spoke at the different associations. Mrs. Paul White made an interesting report on what is new in mission study work. She wishes southern Baptists to feel that missions rightly studied unfolds God's pathway through the world luring His people with Him.

"Mrs. W. T. Henry reported on the Margaret fund, Mrs. Roger Howell on the results of the tithing story contest and Mrs. W. T. Martin on personal service. Mrs. J. C. Lanier made an interesting report on the W. M. U. training school, telling of the Georgia graduates and their work.

"Just before the meeting closed words of love and appreciation were spoken of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Sallee who are returning home from China in order that Dr. Sallee can accept the place of home secretary with the foreign mission board of the Southern Baptist convention."

KIRKWOOD W. M. S. HOLDS MEETING.

The Kirkwood Baptist Woman's Missionary Society met at the church last Monday afternoon with Circle No. 4, Mrs. W. D. Paden, chairman, in charge of the program.

The church was artistically decorated with spring flowers and special music was provided for the occasion by Mrs. Fred Boring, vocal soloist, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. J. L. Jackson.

Mrs. J. M. Haymore led the devotional. Miss Bonnie Jean Ray, missionary to China, delivered an entertaining and stirring address on her work in China. She described in detail the country, the food, the houses and modes of travel, carrying her audience, in imagination, right to the scene of her work. In discussing the medical, evangelistic and school work, Miss Ray said that their greatest difficulty at present was in the school work on account of the Chinese government's determination to keep the Bible out of the schools.

Feeling that a change of some kind in the schools is close at hand, she asked that the people of America pray that the Christian schools be maintained in China. Miss Ray described vividly the bandits' siege in 1928, saying that during that time the homes of many wealthy people were looted and burned and the people were forced to live for many days within the confines of the church. This association with the missionaries caused them to become more tolerant toward the Christian religion, and Miss Ray feels that the wars, famines and persecutions in China are helping the evangelistic cause and resulting in strengthened Christians. She closed her address by appealing for prayers for the protection of the missionaries and for prayers that the Chinese Christians may remain steadfast. A social period followed with members of Circle No. 4 as hostesses.

Heavyweight Figure in Test of Steering Wheel

Strains imposed by steering in sand, mud, snow and ruts are not the only factors taken into consideration by Dodge Brothers' metallurgists in testing the strength of steering wheels used in all Dodge cars. They must also be able to withstand the loads placed upon them by heavy drivers, tipping the scales at 250 pounds or more, who use them for lifting themselves into their cars. Interesting testing methods and devices have been developed to insure a generous factor of safety in steering wheels under all conditions of driving.

Wheels are taken at random from production and tested for strength and deflection under varying conditions of temperature, as it has been found that hard rubber moulded on steel spider inserts reacts differently to the changes of heat and cold. The testing device is used in connection with the cold room and the oven to give an accurate record of the behavior of the steering wheel at zero, normal room temperature and 120 degrees Fahrenheit. One of the important requirements is that the co-efficient of expansion of the rubber bear a certain relationship to that of the steel spiders to prevent any possibility of heavy strains under varying temperatures separating the two.

Plans for the first of what are to be annual picnics are being made by the Alpha class of Wesley Memorial church, to be held outside of the city on July 4. Aquatic and field day sports will feature the event, which will be climaxed by a baseball game. No site for the outing has yet been selected, it was said, but a special train will be chartered for transportation of the members and their friends when this question is decided. J. E. Parker, is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

40 New Durants for Atlanta's Black & White Cabs

Above are the 40 new Durant cars that have just been put into service by the Black and White Cab Company. These cabs were delivered to Al Belle Isle, president of the Black and White Company, by F. E. Maffett, Inc., local Durant distributor.

Nash Six, Four-Door Sedan Among Most Interesting in Line

KENOSHA, Wis., May 10.—Among the most interesting of the new Nash "400" models for 1930, featured by Nash dealers and distributors this spring and summer, is the handsome Nash single six four-door sedan—a car which promises to win even greater popularity among the discriminating motorists seeking fine car comfort, appearance and performance at moderate cost.

A car that will fittingly grace every occasion, and one in which every detail contributes something to its smartness, the single six sedan is longer in hood, in body and in wheelbase than former cars of this popular, moderate priced series. Its straight hood line suggests added power and speed—attainments which the car's performance amply proves. The new, high, narrow rimmed radiator is fitted with handsome, ebonized, built-in shutters, automatic in operation and indispensable for highest motor efficiency.

An automatic lubricating system which oils all vital bearing points on the chassis not only saves the owner's time and the expense of having his car greased or oiled, but also prolongs the life of the car as all friction of bearings is eliminated through constant lubrication.

Upholstery is done in becoming mohair, harmonized in tone with the body color. The handsome salon body, another example of the fine coachwork which features all Nash "400" cars, is unusually large and has ample room for five passengers. The new belt line contrasts body color with tones in the belt moulding and in window reveals, striking a refreshingly new note in body decoration.

From either front or rear a strikingly new Nash style is seen in the superstructure, which starts to arch at the lower line of the windows. The arch replaces the usual body bulkiness with grace and slenderness of line. The front seat is instantly adjustable, either forward or backward, affording added comfort and convenience for the car's driver.

Like other models of the popular single six series, the four-door sedan is considered a remarkable example of Nash leadership in automobile value and economy building.

See Any Pins Pick 'Em Up, Have Good Luck

"See a pin and pick it up; all the day you'll have good luck," is more than an adage with Studebaker, whose long-established policy of thrift includes the salvaging of every conceivable kind of waste material.

One of the outstanding examples of this policy is found in the huge Studebaker power house at South Bend, Ind., where 22 boilers aggregating 16,000 horsepower evaporate 13,000,000 pounds of steam daily to drive acres of humming machinery and operate powerful presses and heavy drop-forge hammers.

Six of these boilers are fueled with worthless factory refuse, according to J. E. Yarbrough, Studebaker dealer here. Sawdust and splinters from the woodworking departments, scraps of paper, discarded rags and strips of material, anything in the way of combustible sweepings is used, Mr. Yarbrough says.

"Every few days the boilers are raked out and metal, such as nails, bits of wire and tiny steel chips, is salvaged. Even cinders are not thrown away, but disposed of to railroads for track ballast.

"Trimmings from stamping mills, and 'flashings,' the unusued portions trimmed off drop forgings, are saved, baled and sold to steel mills. Flying scale which is seen as sparks as the great drop hammers pound out forgings, is collected and used to fill spots in plant driveways.

"In another department, new motors which are being broken in on dynamometers are made 'to earn their salt.' As soon as they run on their own power they are connected to dynamos and the generated electricity turned back into the factory power lines.

"The salvaging of waste material finds a counterpart in the saving of waste effort. In the upholstery department sixty layers of cloth are cut at once, so that two men in less than half a day can produce the required upholstery for sixty cars.

"Studebaker workmen are offered every inducement to suggest more efficient means and methods. Cash bonuses and promotion reward acceptable suggestions. Some time ago, for instance, one Studebaker workman discovered that broken drills could be remachined into chamfering cutters. This tool resembles a drill with a specially ground cutting face. Formerly, broken drills represented a net loss.

"Another employe suggested an improved method of tightening connecting rod cap nuts. Until then a hand wrench as used to start the nuts one at a time and an air wrench to tighten each down. This man advised a wrench which would not only turn down and tighten both nuts simultaneously, but do the job better.

"The above are just a few examples of the manner in which Studebaker holds itself to a strict course of thrift in manufacture. Some of the devices may seem insignificant, yet it is the aggregate saving effected by the system, in conjunction with one-profit manufacturing facilities, which permits Studebaker to build and sell cars at such remarkably low prices."

Baby Health Centers For Week Announced

Baby health centers for the coming week were announced Saturday by Dr. J. P. Kennedy, city health officer, as follows: Monday, Stewart Avenue nursery; Tuesday, Luckie Street school; Wednesday, Fair Street school; Thursday, Andrew Stewart nursery; Friday, Kirkwood school Mothers are invited to bring their children up to the age of four years. All centers will open promptly at 1:30 o'clock.

New Willys Six Driver Enjoys Utmost Freedom

A striking example of the refinements in motor car design introduced by Willys-Overland is found in the arrangement of the controls to provide added space and freedom for the driver of the new Willys Six.

This is in line with the remarkable speed development of the Willys Six which has a high performance of 72 miles an hour and a flashing acceleration that encourages rapid maneuvering in traffic and makes desirable the utmost simplicity and ease of operation.

The emergency or hand brake lever has been moved from the center and placed on the left of the driver, where it is completely out of the way and still easily available at all times.

The gear shift lever has been moved forward from the foot boards to the sloping toe board and is the only control, with the exception of the accelerator, remaining in the forward foot space. This leaves the driver free to manipulate the foot brake, clutch and accelerator without the slightest interference.

The advantages of this system can readily be understood when it is considered that the car has an acceleration of from 5 to 50 miles in 21 seconds and a speed of 48 miles an hour in second, as well as rapid deceration, due to the powerful four-wheel, internal acting brakes.

The De Luxe sedan and the Standard sedan are "fitted to measure" by means of the adjustable front seat.

"Finger-tip control," Monroe two-way hydraulic shock eliminators and other features show Willys-Overland's effort to make driving as trouble-free and as natural as possible and explain, in a large degree, the wide public reception accorded the new car.

Hudson's Great Eight Chassis Shows Engineering Advancements

The chassis of the Hudson Great Eight is not only totally new in design, but incorporates a large number of mechanical innovations and unusual features—many of the patented—that will interest the motorist no less than the engineer.

In the disposition of its various units the chassis shows a well ordered, "clean" arrangement that makes for accessibility and proves special regard to operating safety and convenience.

Aside from the new rubber-cushioned, 8-cylinder, 80-horsepower engine, which is said to have the highest standard compression used by any maker, the constructional details inviting particular attention include: Light 7 1-2-inch frame sills to which the strength of heavy 10-inch sills is given by an ingenious "lipping" or flanging of the lower edge; bridge and box type frame cross members, six in number; splayed rear springs, giving the car remarkable riding ease and freedom from sway; an anti-torsional ribbed front axle; a synchro-silenced rear axle with a final drive in which the ring gear is located in the center between the differential carrier bearings; adjustable spring shackles; double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers; universal-jointed steering tie rod; a balanced power line from motor to rear axle, and many others.

Tarheels Will Hear Speech by Dr. White

Dr. John E. White, former pastor of the Second Baptist church, of Atlanta, and now pastor of the First Baptist church, of Savannah, will be the principal speaker at the annual jubilee of the North Carolina Society, to be held on May 20, anniversary of the signing of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence.

All native North Carolinians, sometimes designated as Tarheels, and all wives, husbands and sweethearts of North Carolinians residing in Atlanta are invited to the jubilee banquet, which will be held at Rich's tea room at 7 o'clock. Reservations should be made promptly through Miss John Bowie, secretary of the society, who can be reached at Hemlock 3268. Dr. Joseph Broughton is president of the North Carolina Society of Atlanta.

Power Co. Band Plays At Battle Hill Today

A concert replete with old-time favorites will be given at the Battle Hill sanitarium, Anderson avenue, S. W., from 2:30 to 4:30 o'clock this afternoon by the Georgia Power Company band. The public is invited.

A Mother's Day musical program is given each year at Battle Hill by the Power Company band, as well as similar programs throughout the year for other charitable and philanthropic organizations. The band, composed of 22 pieces, is under the direction of M. A. Greenblatt.

A general invitation has been extended music lovers by Dr. J. H. Bradfield, director of the sanitarium.

The program will be as follows: Opening march, "Washington Greys"; overture, "My Old Kentucky Home," with symphonic variations; "Blue Danube Waltz"; fox trot, "Should I?"; march, "Officer of the Day"; "Woodland," a selection of themes from popular songs of 1890; "Manana," a medley of Spanish dance tunes; "Hungarian Rag," a novelty number for trombones; finale, closing with "The Star Spangled Banner."

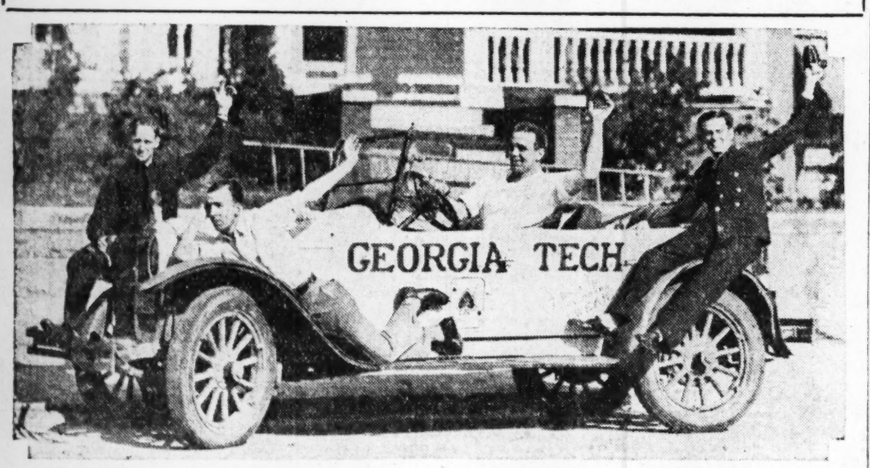

Jack Phinizy To Distribute Batam Austin

Jack Phinizy Motor Company, distributor here for Auburn and Cord automobiles, has been selected as the Georgia representative for the Batam Austin car, the latest enry in the moderate price field in America, it is announced yb Milton Reiley, manager of the Atlanta company.

The Austin is a direct duplicate of the famous English Austin. It is said to operate 50 miles to the gallon of gasoline, three-quarters of a cent per mile for fuel. The line will include three models, coupe, roadster and light delivery truck.

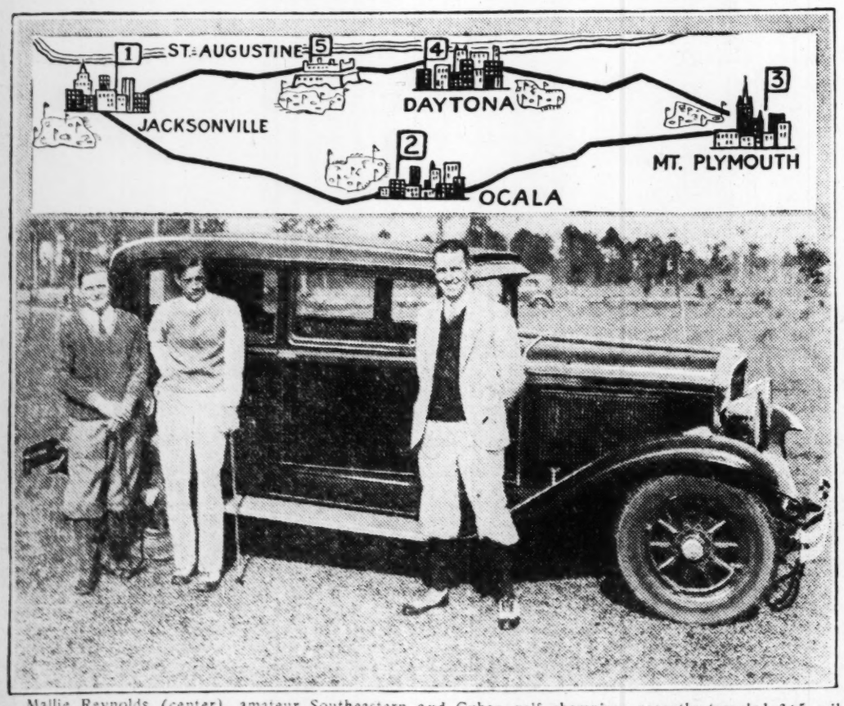

That the car will prove popular is unquestioned, according to officials of the Jack Phinizy Motor Company. Already there have been 158,000 placed on the market. The opening display will be made here about the middle of June, it is announced.

Athens---or Bust---

Plays Five Courses in One Day

Mallie Reynolds (center), amateur Southeastern and Cuban golf champion, recently traveled 315 miles to play 45 holes in one day on five widely-separated Florida courses. Reynolds' Oakland Eight, driven by Joe Power (left) averaged more than 51 miles per hour. On the right is Jack Cawsey, Reynolds fifth opponent, who previously had played the same "circuit" by airplane. Reynolds beat Cawsey's time by an hour and one-half.

Of Course Sixes Beat Fours

But in the ESSEX Challenger

you get a Super-Six

Its patented Super-Six principle gives the New Essex Challenger easy dominance over conventional Sixes. Look at the records. More than 5,000 New Essex Challengers set them. They represent local, national and world records in a great many cases. They show what any New Essex Challenger can do. No "Six" ever proved such all-around Performance, Reliability and Economy.

More Important Still Essex Keeps Its Newness for Years

In this you will appreciate the Super-Six principle. Years of driving do not make this Essex old. The pep, economy and smartness are still there. And they are there to stay.

The secret is that Essex is free from vibration. It remains tight, free from squeaks and rattles, And it saves driver and car from nerve-pounding discomforts.

Its modern, balanced design accounts for this. It includes the Super-Six principle, balanced aluminum pistons, balanced power line, from crankshaft to rear end, and the Lanchester balancer for smoothness.

Big and Roomy, Too

The new Essex Challenger is big and roomy with ample interiors and greater comfort. Beautiful interior appointments carry out the fineness and distinction of this car.

Everyone knows Sixes beat Fours. Every owner knows that a Super-Six as decisively beats the conventional Six.

AUTOMOBILE MANUFACTURERS STAY FAR AHEAD WITH PLANS

Producers Now at Work On Cars for Next 5 Years

Improved Designs Appearing in Next Few Months Will Forecast Future Models.

BY E. Y. WATSON.
Written Exclusively for The Atlanta Constitution and The North American News.

DETROIT, Mich., May 10.—Wheeled progress never stops. The engineers who plan and design automobiles, the research men who try them out and the production men who build them, are continually at work on the cars we will be driving two, three and five years from now. This year has brought to America its first 16-cylinder car, two front drive cars and a large group of other cars that utilize four-speed transmissions instead of the conventional three.

What next? The answer will be found in the improved designs that will be brought out between now and the end of the year. The prevailing trend in demand is toward low-priced cars. The statistics of last year show that the models under $1,000 accounted for more than 80 per cent of the industry's production. The price division between $1,000 and $2,000 was credited with approximately 14 per cent of the remainder. What was left was shared by models listing from $2,000 to $3,000 and upward.

Low-Priced Cars.

While no official data are available yet for this year, it is believed that the low-priced division has made a further advance, and that at present the proportion for the cars priced between $500 and $700 is between 75 and 80 per cent.

Scrutiny of the records of past years discloses an up-and-down movement of buyer preference. In 1919 and 1920, the makes in the $1,000 to $2,000 had their best years. They were 37 per cent of all the cars built. For the next three years, they dropped off and 1923 brought them down to 14 per cent or virtually the same proportion as in 1929. From 1923 to 1927, the medium priced cars forged ahead, again coming up to 25 per cent. The three-year period from 1927 to the past year has put them back to the 14 per cent level.

The year-to-year fluctuation ever since 1916 has shown direct forward and backward swings of the price pendulum. The next phase the automobile manufacturers look for is an upward push for the medium and high-priced models. With it will come more improvements in design and operation that will make these cars more desirable to the man whose purse can afford something more than a low-priced motor vehicle.

Ideas for Future.

The ideas the engineers have worked out for the future are numerous. They include greater development of the all-steel bodies, power actuated clutches and brakes, better carburetion that will produce more power from a given quantity of fuel, transmissions operated by electricity and conservation of oil by cooling through a section of the radiator.

The all-steel body trend is one that is being watched by engineers. On body construction there are two schools of opinion. One favors the all-steel construction in which wood parts are reduced to the minimum. Any wood that is utilized is chiefly for the mounting of upholstery and trimming. The other school favors the composite type of body consisting of a wood frame to which metal stampings are attached.

Builders of the all-steel type hold that the shell itself is the chief element of strength. Progress in all-steel design has reduced the number of parts required. At first from 450 to 500 parts had to be assembled into small units which in turn were brought together in larger units. This was found to be too expensive a process. The production men thereupon went to work with it and succeeded in cutting down the assembly to four principal stampings—two side panels, a rear panel and a cowl.

They work on the theory that fewer joints make fewer squeaks. They claim that the four main stampings united by modern welding processes become virtually one piece of metal.

All-Steel Types.

Instead of mounting the body on wood sills attached to the frame, as in the composite bodies, the all-steel plan is to bolt it direct to the frame. One advantage claimed for this method is that it makes a car from two to three inches lower to comply with style demands. Another claim is made for rigidity, which enables the shell to withstand severe shock.

Proponents of the composite type, on the other hand, say that the combination of wood in the frame work, with steel for the shell, is strong enough for all purposes and at the same time gives flexibility that is desirable.

A drawback in certain all-steel types has been what the builders call "drumming." This is a booming noise caused when the car doors are slammed shut. It is being reduced, however, by insulation involving the use of rubber and padding at certain points.

Firestone Celebrates Thirtieth Anniversary As Tire Builder

AKRON, Ohio, May 10.—Thirty years ago Harvey S. Firestone stood by the side of the road on the outskirts of Akron and watched a car testing out tires that he had built in a little shop nearby.

Now the company he founded at that time celebrates its 30th anniversary, after having written one of the most remarkable records of success in the history of the rubber industry. The progress of today's most widely used form of transportation—the automobile—has received a great impetus from Mr. Firestone and his organization and motorists have benefited largely from them.

Many of today's accepted standards of tire equipment and in fact motor construction are directly traceable to Firestone origination. Reminiscently Mr. Firestone told of the achievements of his organization.

"After we developed the straight-side tire, we developed the demountable rim for commercial use. Those motorists who had been accustomed to lose time and patience along the dusty roadside when they had to change tires from the rim, found their worries ended when the demountable rim made its appearance," Mr. Firestone declared. "This added immeasurably to the convenience of motoring.

"As cars improved mechanically we devoted our energies toward a safer tire and as a result brought out the first rubber tire with a non-skid tread, which time has proven is invaluable for the prevention of accidents.

"As we brought out the demountable rim with the idea of convenience to the motorist and the non-skid tread with safety as the object, it was with the purpose of giving the motorist greater comfort that we developed and brought out the first balloon tire," Mr. Firestone said.

"And now we work upon another problem," Mr. Firestone continued, "for never before have tires been called upon to do the things that users of automobiles expect of them today. Within the past two or three years, automobile motors have been constantly increased in power, in some instances far beyond the calculations of the automobile engineers of even a few years ago.

"The result has been," Mr. Firestone asserted, "a gradual increase in speed of travel. People, who a few years ago thought of 20 or 30 miles an hour as fast, think nothing of going through the country at the rate of 50 and 60 miles an hour and sometimes more.

"Roads today are built to invite speed," Mr. Firestone declared. "Motors are designed to produce it and brakes are built to stop the car within a minimum distance. But, the tires underneath the car must take the brunt of it all. No automobile, no matter what you pay for it, no matter how fine its construction, is really better than its tires.

"It is our responsibility," Mr. Firestone asserted, "to think ahead of these things and to have tires that will withstand the job.

"Start out by doing your work well and keep it up," the rubber pioneer said, "for a leader soon falls unless he uses every resource at his command to maintain his position. We must constantly make new improvements and supply greater efficiency to produce tires that will meet the changing demands of the motor car owner and the automobile manufacturer."

The same purpose was in mind 30 years ago when Mr. Firestone and his original 10-man staff started out to make 12 tires a day. They wanted to make the best tire that it was possible for them to make.

And they accomplished their purpose, for now—30 years later—the name Firestone is written among the names which will forever stand out as the world's industrial leaders . . . and the first little shop has sprung to mammoth factories which in Akron, Ohio; Los Angeles, Cal.; London, England and Hamilton, Ontario, have a combined capacity of 80,000 tires a day.

The original 10-man staff has grown to a proud organization of 15,000 workers who are also stockholders in their business and the annual sales of the parent company and its subsidiaries reach nearly $150,000,000 a year.

Ford Registrations For Georgia Show Big Increase

An increase in the number of new Ford passenger cars registered in Georgia in the first quarter of this year, compared with the corresponding period of 1929, is reported by local Ford dealers. The registration of new Fords in the first three months of this year was 4,229, compared with 3,966 in January, February and March of last year.

There were 8,295 new cars of all makes registered in the first three months of this year. Of these 50.9 per cent were Fords.

This record, according to local Ford dealers, reflects the popular appreciation for the new Ford body types and that at the same time indicates a generally healthy business condition in Georgia.

Keen Interest Manifested In Ancient Auto Congress

Keen interest in the ancient automobile congress, intercollegiate motor marathon and flivver frolic which will be staged Saturday at Lakewood park, is being shown by the prospective entries, who expect to have a "mad motor" day all their own at the big amusement resort.

At Georgia Tech, where there are many "rambling wrecks," several aspiring knights of the roaring road have signified their intentions of carrying off the honors, and along with entries which are certain from Oglethorpe and Emory, and other invited schools, including Georgia, Mercer, Chattanooga and Auburn, a big field is expected with chugging engines, faltering tires and steaming radiators.

The mile track at Lakewood is certain to be the field of honor where many a lilting Lizzie, chugging Chevrolet and antiquated autos of other makes will be in hot benzine battles. The high school and academy divisions will not let all the honors go to the varsity boys and those of pre-college age and education will have classifications of their own.

What promises to be of real interest will be the contests open to all auto owners for the oldest car shown of its make, for the oldest driver, the best tire mileage and other unique contests.

The marathons from the school campuses will be for Model T Ford types, Chevrolets dating to and beyond 1926 and for other makes of 1925 or back beyond that regime. Many prizes will be given ad a silver loving cup will go to the grand championship winner of all the marathons.

No event held recently at Lakewood has caused the interest which has been shown in the flivver frolic and old auto congress. Already a sound news reel company has asked to make a "talkie" of the race, so the entrants are apt to find themselves unwittingly in the movies or talkies as the case may be. Numerous champions will be crowned and the crowd will be treated to real fun as well as the prospect of unexpected speed in the Lakewood events.

The first races will start on the race track at 2:38 o'clock, but some of the marathons will get under way earlier in the day.

Goodyear Making Largest Truck And Bus Tire

Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, of Akron, has begun production of the largest truck and bus tires ever made, according to C. C. Mason, Jr., manager for the Dobbs Tire Company, local dealer for the company.

The new tires are 13.50-20 in dimensions and the first ones to go in service will be used by a Texas electric company on a large truck and highway trailer.

The load capacity of the 13.50-20 tires is 8,000 pounds, greater than the load capacity of a 10-inch solid, 12-inch cushion, dual 8-inch high pressure or dual 9.75 balloons. The recommended air pressure is 95 pounds.

Mr. Mason says that the new tire is one of the most rugged casings ever constructed, and predicts that its use will soon become general on heavy vehicles. The new tire, he points out, saves the good roads from injury from heavily-loaded trucks and buses and at the same time provides excellent traction and smooth riding qualities over rough and unpaved highways.

The Goodyear company to date has built more than 150,000,000 automobile tires, millions more than any other tire manufacturer in the world, Mr. Mason said.

Plymouth Sales Show Decided Gain in March

Retail sales of Plymouth motor cars in the 34 states which have reported on March registrations thus far show a net gain of 71 per cent over the month of February, according to an announcement made today by A. vanDerZee, general sales manager of Plymouth Motor Corporation.

The new low prices of Plymouth, which make it one of the lowest-priced cars in the world, and the new plan of distribution, which places it in the showrooms of the more than 10,000 Chrysler, Dodge Brothers and De Soto dealers, have been in effect only since March 10. Thus Plymouth sales had the advantage of the impetus given them by the new low prices and the new plan of distribution during only 21 days of March, Mr. vanDerZee pointed out.

"We are highly pleased with this splendid gain," Mr. vanDerZee said, "as it indicates the quick appreciation by the public of the remarkable value offered by Plymouth at its new low prices."

Mr. vanDerZee further stated that reports from dealers in every section of the country were highly enthusiastic and indicated a marked improvement in general business conditions. As a result it is confidently expected that the splendid increase in Plymouth sales registered in March will be carried through and increased in April.

"Plymouth was placed in the lowest-price range by the new low prices which became effective March 10 Our new method of merchandising through the Chrysler, Dodge Brothers and De Soto dealer organizations throughout the country provides us with greatly increased sales and service facilities. Together with these points Plymouth enjoys the distinction of being the world's largest low-cost car and features many refinements not included in cars in its price range before," Mr. vanDerZee concluded.

Georgia 'Y' Council Elects Ed Zeigler

Ed Zeigler, president of the Emory Y. M. C. A., was elected co-chairman of the Georgia Y. M. C. A.-Y. W. C. A. council at the meeting of that body in Athens. Zeigler and Miss Chopin Hudson, of Agnes Scott, will direct the association for the next year.

Cord Car Wins Grand Prix Race At Monte Carlo

AUBURN, Ind., May 10.—The Cord front drive car which recently won the grand prix at Monte Carlo and Beaulieu will be displayed in a number of the larger cities of this country, it was announced here by R. H. Faulkner, vice president.

This is the first time that an American-made automobile has ever won the most coveted of all the European automobile prizes.

Chassis of the car is the regular Cord front drive chassis while the body is a custom built one designed by Count Alex de Saknoffsky of the Hayes Body Company, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

Because of the simple construction of the Cord front drive chassis, the designer was able to build a body of unusually rangy an dgraceful appearance. The car stands only four and a half feet high, but provides a full 37-inch head room.

The car is done in a mountain mist blue duco with the top in a light tan Burbank grain leather. Interior is rich, but conservative, with specially designed hardware in antique bronze. A radio is concealed in the rear compartments with the remote control dials on the dash and the loud speaker in the floor.

Big Year for Motor Coach, Declares Dodge Official

Motor coach and bus sales in the United States during 1930 promise to show substantial increases, according to A. H. Ferrandou, director of the motor coach department of Dodge Brothers, who has just returned from an extended trip during which he studied at first hand the operation of hundreds of Dodge street car, de luxe parlor coaches and buses in many of the large cities.

"The electric railway companies of the country are carrying through their 1930 construction and maintenance budget plans," said Mr. Ferrandou. "Orders for many modern buses to replace equipment bought five or six years ago have already been placed by these companies and the purchase of hundreds of additional motor coaches and buses is pending. While electric railway expenditures of the first three months represent a large sum, it is only relatively a small part of the year's budget," he said. "In the next six months improvement plans will be pushed more rapidly.

"Some interesting figures on bus and bus-route mileage just compiled by Dodge Brothers' statisticians show how the motor coach is forging ahead as a common carrier. According to accurate records common carrier bus-route mileage has increased at the rate of nearly 30,000 miles per year for the last four years until in 1929 the total route mileage in the United States reached approximately 290,000 miles. This huge route mileage is regarded as remarkable in view of the limited time that buses have been regularly in operation as common carriers.

"Common carrier mileage has also increased at the rate of nearly 200,000,000 bus-miles per year, for the same period. During the past 12 months common carrier bus operations exceeded the staggering total of 1,750,000,000 miles.

"From 1925 to 1929 the mileage of surfaced highways in the United States increased from 471,667 to 615,000. Present construction programs promise an even more rapid increase in the near future, and every mile of improved highway is a potential motor coach and motor bus route. Motor coach operation is fast becoming a big business."

YACHT OFF ITALY RADIOS AMERICA

NBC Rebroadcasts Two-Way Conversation From Marconi.

BY C. E. BUTTERFIELD,
Associated Press Radio Editor.

The hope of radio broadcasts from anywhere in the world, on water, land, or even from the air, has become more of a realization.

Newest of the feats was the rebroadcast of a two-way conversation between the NBC studios in New York and the yacht Elettra, floating home of Senatore Guglielmo Marconi, inventor. Again short waves comprised the invisible circuit that connected the two points, 4,400 miles apart.

The yacht was in the Mediterranean off the coast of Italy. Its transmitter had a power only of 750 watts, using the wave length of 26.7 meters. The return circuit to the boat was through the 19.5-meter station at Schenectady.

To the broadcast listener it appeared that the conversations were carried on as easily as if by telephone, and that the quality of reception was as good if not better than previous attempts at retransmission from abroad.

When CBS held an audition for prospects, none qualified out of 100 applicants.

Announcers seem to be born, not made. Occupations that provide the proper background are scarce, for in this audition cigar store clerks, actors, sporting goods salesmen, journalists, accountants, advertising space buyers, ordinary salesmen and radio announcers from smaller stations participated. There were even baldheaded old men and inexperienced youths of 19, in addition to a lone woman applicant.

Diction is really the secret of a good announcer, together with the ability of getting personality into the voice. Those who have attained the greatest success in this field really have grown up with broadcasting, although there are a number of others who learned the art merely because they could grip the listeners with words alone.

Smallest Radio

A new radio set of the size and appearance of a loud speaker has invaded the radio field, so small and compact that it attracts attention wherever shown, Withers & Chapman, distributors for Georgia and eastern Tennessee, announced Saturday.

The entire set is only 18 inches high, 13 inches wide and 7 inches deep. It weighs 19 1-2 pounds and has 6 tubes. The set, which has been named the Echophone, requires only 15 feet of aerial and plugs into the house lighting circuit.

Local dealers are being appointed for retail sales. Withers & Chapman, wholesalers only, will be glad to demonstrate the new Echophone. Pleasing tonal quality, power and distance are claimed for this new radio receiver.

BALLET AND BARITONE ON STROMBERG HOUR

Two of the features of the schedule offered on the Stromberg-Carlson program of Monday evening, May 12, from 9 to 9:30 eastern standard time will be the "Herodiade" Ballet Suite of Massenet, played by the Rochester Civic Orchestra, with Guy Fraser Harrison conducting, and the Handelian air, "Where'er You Walk," sung by Kenneth Loysen, baritone. The program originates at WHAM, Rochester, and is put on over a coast-to-coast network associated with WJZ.

The ballet occurs in the familiar French opera when King Herod orders his dancers to perform for him in the attempt to forget his infatuation for Salome. Mr. Loysen's solo is from a "secular oratorio" of Handel written nearly two centuries ago which has largely been forgotten except for this beautiful air.

"Persian Dance," from the Russian opera "Khevanchtchina" and "Slavic Rhapsody," by Friedemenn, add exotic coloring to the orchestral offering.

The complete program follows:

Slavic Rhapsody, Friedemann.
Persian Dance from "Khevanchtchina," Moussorgsky.
Aria: Where'er You Walk, Handel. Baritone solo, Kenneth Loysen.
"Herodiade" Ballet Suite, Massenet. (a) The Babylonians; (b) The Phoenicians; (c) Finale.

Cabinet Process Saves Big Cost

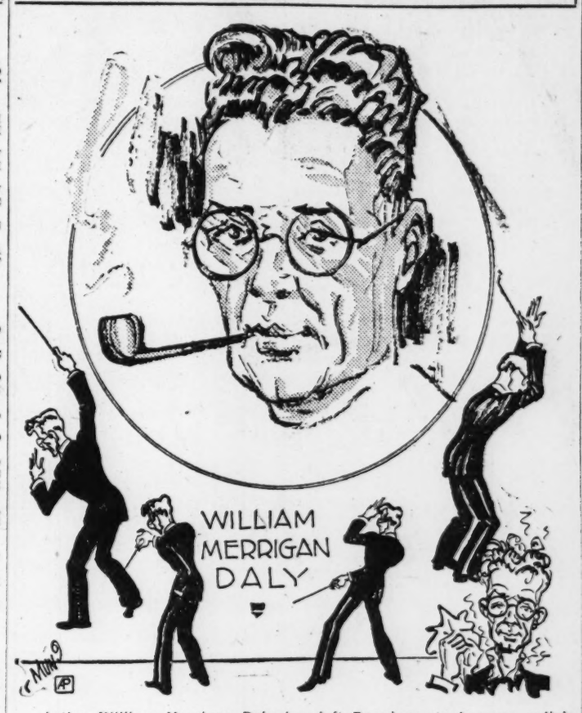

Although the cabinet making art dates back thousands of years and broadcast receiver manufacturing is only a decade or so old, yet the two are coming to work in great harmony. In the early days when sets were cumbered with many knobs and controls spread over hard rubber fronts, it was practically impossible to make a receiver that would rank as an acceptable piece of furniture. Now that the working mechanism has been made more compact and graceful and the controls reduced to a minimum, it is possible to treat radio receivers as articles of furniture and submit them to the canons of artistic taste. As a matter of fact it is generally the sets that are best constructed that are given the most handsome external appearance.

The use of wood rather than metal gives an appearance of warmth and depth that is desired in most pieces of furniture. Wood construction also permits the use of finishing stains that give pleasing contrasts and natural wood shadings.

The Stromberg-Carlson Company also gives, through the "Karvart" process, the appearance of delicate and expensive hand carving on its sets, without the expense that actual hand carving would involve. The wood is subjected to great pressure and heat in a steel mold and the design comes out perfectly. It is often found nearly impossible to tell the original hand carving from a duplication in Karvart.

Through the use of the Karvart process, the front panel and loud speaker of the Stromberg-Carlson consoles are made most artistic without adding materially to the cost.

Daly Tough on Collars

Active William Merrigan Daly has left Broadway to become radio's newest orchestra leader.

NEW YORK, May 10.—(AP)—Bill Daly, chain radio's newest orchestra leader, is the laundryman's friend. He needs lots of collars.

Daly, baton in hand, is truly dynamic. When he is coaxing tunes into the michophone, every muscle of his body plays a part in the direction of his orchestra.

Such activity, while productive of sweet music, is hardly kind to collars.

One collar retains its dignified appearance for just about a single number. After that it's no better than a water soaked rag.

Collars are not the only thing that suffer. After each broadcast, a complete change of attire is necessary. Air cooled broadcast rooms do not seem to give much help.

Once a "doctor" of Broadway shows, Daly came to radio because it offered a better field.

It might mean more work because of the greater diversity of music required, but, he said, it was not as boresome as the theater.

His average radio week requires the arranging and presentation of approximately 37 pieces of music for the programs in which he appears, including the Radio Revue on the WEAF chain each Friday.

It wasn't so long ago that he left Broadway, where he conducted and scored many musical comedies and reviews, including "The Scandals," "Show Girl" and others. In the theater, part of his job was to iron out musical kinks, with composing, arranging and conducting as other tasks. He now is a member of the NBC staff.

Music wasn't always Daly's means of providing butter for his bread. He started as managing editor of Everybody's magazine, now out of existence. His pet subject was economics. Even then music wns mighty interesting.

After five years as an editor, he decided to take his music more seriously. Thus an avocation became a vocation, which besides Broadway, included as assistant conductorship with the Chicago Civic opera company.

Daly was baptized William Merrigan Daly, but for years it has been just plain Bill. He is married and he has one daughter Eileen.

His dining room is the motorist's dream. It has wall paper all right, but not the ordinary kind. Government road maps, shellacked to withstand wear, take its place. On the maps, which are scaled one inch per mile, one can learn many things about New York and environs as well as Boston and vicinity.

The paperhanger was named Daly.

Radio Jack of All Trades

OMAHA, Neb., May 10.—(AP)—Introducing, ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience, the "man" behind the guns of WOW:

"Miss Marie Kieny."

When Eugene Konecky became editor of the magazine of the Woodmen of the World, Miss Kieny became commercial director. She also is program director; occasionally plays the piano in front of the mike; is hostess to the visiting firemen and redoubles as an announcer.

Seven years ago Marie needed money to continue her musical training. She played the piano for WOW's one-man staff, and got a job as entertainer. Two years later she was named hostess, a year later assistant program director, and last year chief program director.

With all the radio jobs, Marie finds time to teach a class of 10 youngsters aspiring to piano fame. She also takes music lessons herself.

Performance Best Test of Receiver

BY R. H. MANSON, Chief Engineer, Stromberg-Carlson Tel. Mfg. Co.

Satisfactory radio performance—in spite of the emphasis that is sometimes laid on a single feature—depends not upon one quality, but upon good design and construction from the antenna to the output of the loud speaker. For example, some designers emphasize "knife-like" selectivity although super-selectivity in present designs of radio receivers is usually obtained at the expense of good audio quality. Other designers have focussed almost exclusive attention on high amplification. Screen grid receivers, it is true, will give an r. f. amplification at least 100 times higher than for sets of older design. But all of this r. f. amplification is not used for obtaining increased over-all sensitivity as extremely high sensitivity is not desirable in the majority of home installations. The major part of this high r. f. amplification is used in providing such valuable improvements as "linear" power detection and the reduction of audio amplification, still leaving the over-all amplification of the receiver many times higher than for the older designs of sets.

Many other factors need to be considered if a good over-all effect is desired. Such itmes as total shielding, correct by-passing and the use of radio frequency chokes and filters prevents regeneration and a consequent distortion of the broadcast signal. An extended audio system that brings in both high and low tones is necessary and is made possible only by correctly designed radio amplifier system, detector system, audio system, loud speaker unit and enclosing cabinet. Stability and regulation are also important factors, so it can be seen that undue emphasis on single items such as selectivity and amplification alone are misleading.

Atlanta Plans Police Radio.

Atlanta is planning the adoption of the radio as a means of running down criminals. The plan calls for a central station from which information concerning crimes would be broadcast to police cars equipped with receiving sets in all parts of the city.

Kansas Station.

CHICAGO, May 10.—(AP)—Station KFKB, of Milford, Kan., won a recent poll to determine the "world's most popular station." It received 256,827 votes.

From Bell's Early Telephone came RADIO

ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL was the first to transmit and reproduce the voice electrically. Since his experiments in 1876 with a few feet of wire stretched from room to room, telephone engineers have broadened the horizons of communication to include not only the United States, but foreign countries as well.

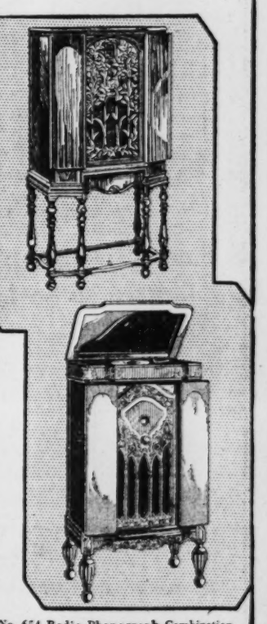

And telephoning without wires—which we know as radio—every day brings London, Paris, Berlin, within voice reach of America. Today's radio receiver is really but another step of progress in telephone engineering.

The reputation of Stromberg-Carlson instruments for ability to obtain distance, for quality of tone, for selectivity, is proof of the excellence derived from Stromberg-Carlson telephone knowledge in manufacture.

IMPORTANT!

It is essential that candidates have a thorough understanding regarding new contract subscriptions; also, what is considered an "old" or "new" subscriber, and the following rules explain this fully:

When a new contract order is secured for "six" or "twelve" months, it must be clearly and definitely explained to the subscriber that contracts must be adhered to, that they will be verified by The Constitution, and that if the subscriber does not meet the acid test, it will not be accepted.

No contract subscriptions will be accepted from minors, transients or those persons not holding responsible positions.

No contract subscription will be accepted unless signed by the subscriber, business address stated, occupation stated, phone number stated and where the paper is to be delivered.

No contract subscription will be accepted for a period less than six months or more than twelve months. Subscribers are not permitted to sign contracts for more than twelve months.

Once turned in by a candidate, for twelve months, the subscriber will not be permitted to give another contestant a new contract subscription; however, if signed for six months, the subscriber will be allowed to increase it to one year.

A new subscriber is any person not receiving The Atlanta Constitution by mail or authorized carrier on March 9, 1930.

Changing the name from one member of the household to another will not be credited as a new subscriber. A new subscriber must constitute a gain in circulation. All new subscriptions will be carefully verified. Making a subscription "new" when it is "old" will result in a disappointment. This rule is imperative and will be strictly adhered to.

The Atlanta Constitution aims to deliver its papers promptly, and it can do so only with the co-operation of candidates.

Careful observance of the foregoing rules and suggestions will be appreciated.

Second Payments and Extension Subscriptions

Second Payment subscriptions are extensions on prepaid subscriptions already secured by candidates. Regular credits on Second Payments will be allowed as follows:

Suppose a candidate has already turned in a NEW 6-months subscription for $5.00, for this subscription the candidate received 5,000 regular credits. If a candidate gets this same subscriber to extend his subscription for 6 months more and pays $4.50 more to make the total $9.50 for the year, the candidate turning in the second payment will receive 10,000 regular credits, which would make a total of 15,000 regular credits issued for the year. If the First Payment was an OLD subscription, then 5,000 regular credits would be issued on the Second Payment, making a total of 7,500 credits for the year.

This plan applies to any Second Payments. If the First Payment was a NEW subscriber then the Second Payment would still be NEW and must be turned in as such in order to get the New Credits. If the First Payment was OLD the Second Payment is also OLD.

IMPORTANT: In order for candidates to get credit for second payments they MUST mark them as such on the remittance sheet when turning in subscriptions. Otherwise the second payment credits will NOT be allowed.

Extension on Contracts

Contracts may be extended from 6 months to a year and these MUST be marked "Extension" on the Contract Sheets when turning them in, or the extension credits will NOT be allowed. Regular credits on these 6-month extensions, where the subscriber has already signed for 6 months, amounts to 5,000 regular credits, which makes a total of 7,500 credits issued for the year.

It does NOT make any difference which candidate secured the First Payment on Prepaid subscriptions or the First Contract, the candidate securing the Second Payment or extension on the contracts will be given credit for the Second Payment credits and the extension credits on contracts.

THE SENATE'S FUNCTIONS.

That is an unquestionably correct thesis upon which Senator George spoke to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen in this city on Thursday evening. His theme was the right of labor, as an element of the nation's citizenship, to protest against any government action it deems inimical to its general welfare. No one that we know of has denied that right.

But the right of petition, which is the real right involved, runs both ways, but neither those who petition pro or petition con, are authorized by constitution or law to aid their petitions with menaces of personal and political punishment in case of denial.

Especially is it true that the spirit to use political power as a "sword of Damocles" to coerce compliance from those sworn to preserve public integrity of government and the common welfare is un-American, unjust and strongly to be rebuked.

In the recent cases in the senate of the Hughes and Parker nominations it was all proper enough for those who favored them and those who opposed them to respectively make known their preferences to their senators. But it was clear out of line with the genius of the republic, embodied in the constitution and in the past traditions of the public service, for crusades to be inaugurated and pushed by factions of the people to change the order of established public functions.

When the senate, under the constitution, is called upon to act with the president in creating public officers, it is not acting in its legislative capacity. In the specific enumeration of the powers of the legislative department there is no mention of that particular function of the senate. It comes in with paragraph 2, section 2, of article 2, defining the powers of the president, where it says:

"And he shall nominate and by and with the advice and consent of the senate shall appoint . . judges of the supreme court," etc.

In such case the senate turns from legislative duties to that of association in a purely executive function, just as it becomes associated with the judicial department when it sits as a court of impeachment.

Therefore, to turn the senate, or for the senate to suffer itself to be driven by outside factional pressure, into a political or economic convention to support one or the other side of highly divisive public policies—especially in constituting the supreme judicial body of the nation, is immensely deplorable and dangerously threatening to our constitutional system of government.

Senators may justify themselves as they may for yielding to such extraneous and political pressure, but the great majority of the thinking patriots of the republic will feel a sense of alarm whenever and however the senate surrenders to such aggressive and changeable exterior forces and clamors.

THE SHERMAN AVENGERS.

The horrible vengeance taken by a mob at Sherman, Texas, on Friday for a criminal assault upon a white woman by a negro man, resulting in the burning of the courthouse and the cremation of the negro, is one of the most atavistic events of recent years.

The press reports of the affair show the desperate efforts of the officers of the county and state to prevent the infuriated people in the mob from wreaking their revenge upon the negro for his unspeakable crime. The officials and guardsmen in charge of his protection while actually upon trial in a regular court cannot be held responsible for what happened. They seemed sufficient in number and determination, but the fury of the maddened mass that fell upon them could not be stemmed and defeated.

The adherents to law and order may deplore and denounce these volcanic outbursts of murderous rage, overriding all the instrumentalities of regular justice and the powers of government, but there is one great and irreversible fact ingrained in the psychology of the southern people that must always be taken into account by those who judge such events as this one at Sherman. That fact is that the white people will not tamely allow their women to be the unavenged victims of the lust and brutality of any negro man. Their always hot passion is to kill the raper without mercy when they can catch him. Criticism of that passion and action from any source appeals only to the deafness of the adder and no one can avert the terrible vengeance but the negro who keeps his lustful hands off an innocent white woman.

BLAINE VERSUS McBRIDE.

That was an unseemly colloquy that occurred in the senate lobby committee on Friday when Senator Blaine, of North Dakota, hectored Dr. McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, for his statement in a speech somewhere and some time ago that the Anti-Saloon League was "born of God."

The senator distinctly sneered at the implication of the McBride statement and assumed that God not only had nothing to do with inspiring the objective of the Anti-Saloon League, but would disapprove of its course if He could be put in the committee's witness chair and be cross-examined on the subject.

For Senator Blaine, or any one else, to question that the "Spirit of God," whom Jesus declared would come to men when He Himself should depart from among them, and who "when He, the spirit of truth, is come He shall guide you into all truth," inspires men now to endeavors in line with that righteousness which is the constitution of Christ's Kingdom on earth, is going far afield from the understanding of the Christian world.

Such a spirit of negation would strip all human institutions of any divine implications. Religions, churches, benevolent organizations, humanitarian endeavors, would all be reduced to mere mental impulses and robbed of any claim of being in line with divine purposes concerning the race of man.

At least Dr. McBride is better fortified in his claim for a divine urge in the heart of his league than Senator Blaine is in his sneers and professed belief that God would definitely repudiate it.

MORE FOREIGN COTTON.

Recent announcement of the completion by the soviet government of Russia of a 1,700 mile long north and south railroad across Central Asia, carries a message of warning to the cotton growers of the south, for the main purpose behind the construction of this line was to open up a vast area of land for the production of cotton.

In addition a $250,000,000 irrigation project is now under way to further advance the Russian desire to raise enough of the fleecy staple at home to make unnecessary the present importation of $70,000,000 worth of cotton per year.

The purpose of the new railroad is two-fold. It will carry into Turkestan wheat and other foodstuffs from the rich fields of Siberia, giving an added outlet for Siberian products, and it will also permit the farmers of Central Asia to raise the more lucrative cotton on the land on which they have heretofore had to plant crops for the sustenance of their families and their animals.

Thus the great fields of southern Turkestan will be added to the hundreds of thousands of acres in Manchuria, China, India and Egypt which are already producing annually increasing crops of cotton.

The output of foreign cotton fields has mounted steadily since the World War and will undoubtedly continue to do so. It is well, therefore, for the southern planter to realize that with the passing of his practical monopoly of the world's cotton supply, he must curtail his output to meet lessened export demand.

To the farmers of Georgia, especially this situation, if properly met, should bring no financial distress. If they continue, however, on the one-crop idea of the past, they may expect to see their revenues steadily progress downward.

There can be no justification for the arising of such a condition, however, in view of the opportunity present to the agriculturalists of this section. If they will turn their efforts more and more to the raising of cattle and the diversified food crops for which the south is so admirably suited, they can check the onslaught of foreign grown staple on the world's cotton market, and at the same time more than make up for their loss of revenue incident to their reduced cotton crop.

When world progress reaches the stage where a government will undertake such a mammoth project as the building of a 1,700-mile railroad through mountains and deserts in order to give the best possible opportunity to the tillers of the earth in widely separated sections to raise and dispose of the crops best suited to their lands, then the agriculturalists of every section of the world must follow suit in the selection of their products or they will founder economically and financially.

The southern section of the United States will always be the world's greatest producer of cotton, but it is also true that our soil and our climate is as well suited to other farm products as any other section of the universe. It stands to reason, therefore, that if our farmers are to keep step with modern progress, they must pay increasingly more attention to the diversified crops which will be their only salvation as the foreign output of cotton mounts higher and higher.

MOTHER'S OWN DAY.

The beautiful and worshipful thought which designated a Sabbath in the calendar year as "Mother's Day" has received added honor in America with every added year. To show honor and reverence to mother is an almost universal feeling in human hearts. She who bore us into this life and all of its possibilities deserves every devotion of which we are capable. The smile of her face is always a sunburst of comfort and joy to our responsive souls.

Today, all over the land, humble and high placed, rich and poor, those who can cast pearls no more than those who can only pluck a flower as an insignia, will do honor to mothers, both the living and the departed.

Mothers by the millions will be made happy by the words and tokens of sons and daughters. Their spirits will feel fully repaid for their pains and labors by the meeds of love and duty poured out to them by their children. From near and far the messages of absent ones will come to them like the sweet breezes from "Araby the blest," and for this day all things should wear for them the roseate hue of unalloyed affection and consecration.

Such a day gives a religious relief from the strenuous life of labor and the sordid competitions of trade and ambition. It imports into the national consciousness a flavor of that utopia that has ever lured in the vision of human hopes. So Mother's Day should be made glorious in our common calendars.

STATE REFORMS INVISIBLE.

From over the state come evidences that the thinking people are of the growing opinion that reduction of state government costs is more important and urgent than finding new things to tax in order to get more money for tax-eaters in office to feed upon.

That may be a timely and proper feeling for the taxpayers to have and it would seem a heaven-sent blessing to the people if it should be realized. But it will not be realized for most obvious reasons.

There is no coherency of sentiment among the people to that end, no possible organization to materialize the economic desire, and no co-operation to demand the production of the needed reforms. All over the state men who, as legislators in recent years, have been most active in dragging the state into greater expenses and involving it in financial deficits, are offering for re-election to the general assembly. And the complacent voters will elect enough of them to make sure that the present system of state mismanagement will continue.

It is a deplorable state of affairs, to be sure, but there is no apparent remedy for it. The people, who could reform the system to their vast benefit, are too subject to the self-seeking politicians to do it.

SAVE THE EAGLES.

The report from Washington that the bill introduced by Senator Peter Norbeck, of South Dakota, and Congressman Andresen, of Minnesota, seeking to protect the American bald eagle, is in danger of dying in the house committee on agriculture, should cause every bird lover and conservationist to protest to his or her congressman.

The bill has already passed the senate and all that is necessary for it to become a law is that it be passed by the house, as the president is known to heartily favor it.

From all parts of the country come reports that the eagle is slowly but steadily losing out in the battle with unscrupulous hunters and it is apparent that unless some drastic law is passed looking to the preservation of this magnificent and fast-disappearing bird, it will not be long before it is practically extinct.

Unless congress hears from the lovers of wild life it seems certain that the Norbeck-Andresen bill is doomed. It is a meritorious measure and the members of congress should hear from their constituents in no mild terms over the apparent apathy which is being evidenced towards the effort to safeguard America's national bird.

FINDING AND KEEPING.

One of the striking peculiarities of advertising is seen by an inspection of the "Lost and Found" classification in any newspaper. Many people advertise something of value that has been "lost," but scarcely any one advertises something that has been "found."

The commonalty of this phenomenon seems to prove that most people have adopted the old saying that "finding is keeping." They pick up lost articles and appropriate them with no seeming compunctions of conscience. If they remark at all upon their finds they say they will wait to see if the loser advertises for what they have found. If they see the "lost" ad, they may or may not answer it, but police reports indicate that most usually they do not answer and turn up the article, unless the promised reward attracts them more for the cash than the article itself.

It is not creditable to the common honesty of the people that they thus so freely and complacently hang on to lost articles which they find, including purses, valuable jewelry and other articles of substantial and useful worth. It argues for the having of a very elastic conscience and sense of honor for men and women to carefully conceal their findings of other people's lost property. It almost reaches the low level of plain stealing "without force and arms." The price of keeping a lost article should be the cost of advertising the finding of it.

CLOSING PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Schools for the common run of children are being prematurely closed in Georgia, Florida and other states because of the exhaustion of public school funds that were allocated to keep them in full action. These deprivations of the children excite the anger of their parents, but do not seem to excite their common sense enough to set up strong demands for obvious public education reforms.

On Friday, in an address to the Flint Circuit Bar Association, Justice Hines, of the Georgia supreme court, referred to the provision of the Georgia constitution which limits the state public school system to "instruction in the elementary branches of an English education." He insisted, as all constitution-supporting citizens should insist, that the state school laws, funds and administration shall be confined to those terms. If so confined, the state appropriations can be made ample to meet the requirements of the constitution and give to the children of the state everywhere in it all the education the state has pledged to them.

The schools of the people have been overpacked with the fads and experiments of improvident administrators and the money that should provide solid and practical instruction in necessary knowledge frittered away on the notions of visionary and ambitious pedagogical adventurers.

Here in Georgia, at least, we need a wholesale and imperative return to the constitutional system, or a drastic new deal for competent administrators of the only lawful system.

FEAR FOR THE COURTS.

Prompt public reaction to the Parker rejection vote by the senate, as reflected by the press of the nation, is that of a general disapproval. The opinion prevails that the senate majority yielded far too much of its independence to the clamor of factions demanding that the supreme court be fashioned to put the social, economic or political interests of a class of reformers or "progressives" above the constitution and the settled precedents of judicial interpretation.

It is in the nature of a throwback to the efforts of Theodore Roosevelt and the elder La Follette to set up recall of judicial decisions or to overrule them by votes of the congress. When those projects were broached years ago, they met the stern condemnation of the most eminent constitutional lawyers and conservative citizens of the nation.

In stead of reviving those schemes a majority of the senate has substituted the indefinite and elastic qualification that justices of the supreme judicial tribunal must be men who have shown ability to adjust their views of the constitution and the instrumentalities of justice to the vehement demands of large voting factions with special objectives in government which they know they cannot attain at the ballot boxes, but hope to secure by novel decisions of the supreme tribunal of the republic. It is regarded as a deplorable omen of the power of radicalism to bore into and change the order of justice.

The people do not realize how cheap a crowd the congress is. It only costs $26,000,000 a year, or less than two-bits per capita of the population.

Every businessman is dependent upon the prosperity of the farmers, but only a few businessmen have the sense to see that!

The warden of the Ohio penitentiary, where 322 convicts were burned to death, denies all allegations and defies all alligators in the state house.

All the cheap little politicians in the state are 'rarin' to break into the next general assembly. The people should impound them at home.

Governor Roosevelt joins the Georgia health crusade. He knows the real values of health from personal experience.

A good bishop fears that luxurious living is conducive to immoralities. Certainly many persons find it a luxury to be immoral.

The unregistered city voter is a municipal Maverick, if you know what that is?

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL

A Few Burning Facts for Honest Men of Georgia To Ponder.

The existence and powers of government, we all admit, rest upon the will of the people and the people pay the price of government with their taxes. That big and inescapable fact appeals to political common sense and to the economic interest of the citizen.

Hence the general need that every prideful citizen should show a lively interest in the character and conduct of government. Here in the democratic republic of America we live under four separate units of government—the town, the county, the state and the national administrations of power, taxation and expenditures. And the man who fails to exercise the rights and perform the duties of a citizen degrades himself to the status of a mere dominated subject.

* * * *

Where the People Begin to Rule.

It is in the first unit of government—the town—that the people begin to rule, for government goes up out of the people and does not come down to them from a sovereign power like that assumed by kings, emperors and czars, or self-elected dictators.

The character in common of the cities and towns of the state is the index number of the character of the county, state and national governments. The more generally that the administrations of the towns are kept clean, honest and efficient the more certain are the larger units to take complexion and character from the initial civic center.

Rural population may be larger in certain county and state instances, but long experience has demonstrated that their political powers are inchoate and do not strongly influence the greater streams of government.

* * * *

Some Notorious Exceptions.

As there are exceptions to all rules, so there are notable exceptions to that general political rule. The most glaring of those exceptions are found in New York, Illinois and Georgia, where the people of the rural districts, finding themselves in the saddle, took advantage to make their governing power permanent.

So in those states conspicuously and without any regard for equality of representation, or the justice of taxation disproportioned to representation, the state governments were so framed as to keep power in the hands of the country elecorate and out of the hands of the majority of the people—especially if the majority live in cities.

That is the condition here in Georgia where we live under the most undemocratic and unjust state system of government to be found anywhere on this continent.

* * * *

What the Census Reveals.

The census of the state now being registered will show that largely more than half of the people of Georgia live in the larger cities and towns, but that they have less than one-third of the governing power of the state.

For instance, Atlanta and Fulton county have about one-tenth of the population of the state, but have only one sixty-ninth of the representation in the house of the general assembly.

Fulton county, including Atlanta, pays 24 per cent of the direct property taxes of the state—just one per cent less than a quarter of those taxes collected from the whole tate, but only 3 out of 207 representatives to speak for those taxes.

And yet there are plenty of men professing common sense and common honesty who refuse to see anything wrong in that system.

* * * *

The Measures of Gross Injustice.

The facts of record at the state capital are that Fulton county pays $1,456,883.36 of the taxes levied for state purposes, which is 24 per cent of the whole.

Chatham pays 5 per cent, Bibb 4 per cent, Muscogee and Richmond together pay 8 per cent, DeKalb 3 per cent, Clarke and Dougherty together pay 3 per cent, and Floyd pays 2 per cent. That is the eight of them pay 25 per cent of the total taxes for state purposes, or just 1 per cent more than Fulton county alone pays.

Laurens county has as many representatives in the house of the general assembly as Fulton county has, and yet pays only $51,363.62 of the state taxes, or less than one-twenty-eighth as much as Fulton pays—and yet we are told that is honest and just!

* * * *

Something to Wonder Over.

The nine "big counties" of Cobb, Coweta, Glynn, Hall, Laurens, Lowndes, Thomas, Troup and Ware—all together—pay to the state only $532,514.38 in taxes as against $1,456,883.36 paid by Fulton county. Yet those counties have 18 representatives, or six times more than Fulton county.

There are 30 counties that together pay only 17 per cent of the state taxes and 80 other counties that all together pay only 21 per cent, and 33 counties that all together pay only 4 per cent—or the same amount that Bibb county alone pays, and only four-fifths as much as Chatham alone pays.

Most of the counties get more from the state in cash every year than they pay into its funds, and nine counties furnish that charity for them.

The Background of Foreign Affairs

BY HENRY KITTREDGE NORTON.

In London and Tokyo, as well as in Washington, the respective watchdogs of the respective navies have respectively discovered that the London naval treaty reduces the relative power of their respective fleets.

The American experts have been the mildest of the three. Admiral Moffet feels that we shall not have real parity with England until we have as many merchant ships as Britain has. "The Army and Navy Journal" finds that Japan has increased her navy at our expense, and that our delegation was seriously at fault in not reopening the question of Pacific bases in return for its concessions to Japan. Aside from this, no one seems to have found as yet a particularly good reason for rejecting the treaty.

In London Lord Bridgman, a former first lord of the admiralty, and the British representative at the Geneva naval conference, denounces the treaty as a betrayal of the empire. In his view Britain has sacrificed her domination of the seas for a mess of pottage.

And in Japan the minister of marine, who must, according to Japanese practice be an admiral of the navy, has raised a constitutional question as to whether the cabinet or the general staffs of the army and navy are responsible for the national defense. He is opposed to the treaty, and has found an additional argument against it in the rumor that the new cruisers to be built by the United States are to have slightly heavier armor than he had expected.

All of which leads us to recall the first speech of Ambassador Dawes and its reference to the relative responsibilities of statesmen and naval technicians. Not all of the latter, of course, oppose the treaty. Not all the former approve it. But the fact remains that a group of political representatives of the three countries did, after months of arduous labor, arrive at some measure of agreement. It remains to be seen whether the three nations concerned in the limitation portion of the agreement will ratify the work of their delegates or hand the matter of naval equipment back to the more bellicose of the technicians.

Meantime the other two parties to the treaty, Italy and France, are adding their bit of excitement. Italy has announced an elaborate construction program, which France regards with open concern. There would be more French anxiety, no doubt, if it were not for the conviction that lack of funds will prevent Italy from converting her program into an actual fleet.

A labor government in England, with all sympathy for the aspirations of the Indian people, has been forced to the decision to arrest Gandhi as a disturber of the peace. He will be confined in a prison de luxe during the pleasure of the British government. No charge has been brought against him and he will not be tried. He is confined under an old law which authorizes the government to incarcerate individuals who are considered a menace to authority.

It is obvious that the labor government would receive no more popular support in England in surrendering to the demands of the Indian agitators than would a conservative or liberal administration. Mr. MacDonald's problem is to hold India with the least possible use of force. To this end they have allowed the Mahatma to continue his subversive agitation undisturbed for nearly a month. Meantime the great majority of his effective lieutenants have been placed under arrest and the revolutionary press has been bridled.

Now that Gandhi himself has been confined, there are no recognized leaders to carry on the movement which he started. The report of the Simon commission will be available shortly, and it is the British hope that a discussion of its constructive proposals will supersede the independence agitation.

There is much that might be conceded on both sides. For example, Gandhi has pointed out that the viceroy of India receives a salary of more than 5,000 times the per capita income of India, while the prime minister of England receives a salary of only 90 times the per capita income of Great Britain. The other costs of government, Gandhi infers, are in proportion and constitute an impossible burden upon the Indian people.

On the other hand, Gandhi must realize as well as any one the chaos which would ensue if the steadying hand of the British administration were withdrawn. A compromise worked out with a sympathetic government in England would appear to hold far greater promise of happiness for the Indian peoples than an obstinate pursuit of the fancied delights of independence.

One of the most spectacular accomplishments of the soviet government is the completion of the north and south railroad across central Asia. This line, 1,700 miles long, connects Tashkent, just north of Afghanistan, with Novosibirsk, on the Trans-Siberian railway. The new line was built under Russian direction, with Russian labor and with Russian money. An American contribution was present, however, in the picturesque figure of the directing genius, "Bill" Shatov.

Shatov received his education in railway engineering as a communist and I. W. W. agitator among the railway laborers in this country. When the bolshevik revolution made it possible for him to return to his own land he went to Siberia, where he became minister of communications in the short-lived Far Eastern republic. There he demonstrated his executive capacity by restoring the railroads to operation after they had been almost wrecked by civil war. He was called to Russia to take charge of one of the new soviet banks and later placed in charge of the Central Asian railway project.

His new line is planned to bring the wheat and lumber from Siberia to southern Turkestan and thus free the wheat lands there for the cultivation of cotton, which Russia now imports at an expense of about $70,000,000 a year. A $250,000,000 irrigation project is upnder construction—an American engineer is at the head of this project—to furnish the necessary water.

"Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown," especially if it is the crown of Spain in the twentieth century. The dictatorship of the last five years featured Primo de Rivera in the leading role. His fall and the appointment of General Berenguer as prime minister was supposed to mark the end of the dictatorship and the inauguration of a new civil order.

The real dictator of Spain, however, is King Alfonso. Primo was his tool and Berenguer is no less so. The ostensible liberation of the administration under Berenguer resulted in an immediate resumption of the agitation for a Spanish republic. The reins of authority were promptly tightened.

The forces of resistance which finally brought about the fall of Primo de Rivera are turning their efforts against the new regime. The university students were among the outstanding opponents of the old dictatorship. They have been the first to clash with the police under the new regime. They attempted to hold a demonstration at the Madrid railroad station, to greet Professor Miguel de Unamuno, on his return from exile. The police interfered and the students went on strike. Two days later they raised a red flag over the university, and some 2,000 of them started to parade the streets. The police drove them back without firing. The students rushed to the roof of a building and showered the police with stones and roof tiles. Firing began, and before it was over two had been killed and some 40 wounded.

The government may by careful handling of the situation prevent the movement from spreading to other classes. But the students are firmly set against the continued domination of Spain by the throne, the army and the church. The laboring classes are in close sympathy with them. The issue can hardly be permanently settled except by force.

Motherhood in a Modern World

Of course today is always modern, but each generation has its own characteristic, which determines what is modern for its own time. For our generation two distinct influences upon the life of womanhood may be noted—the industrial and the political revolution. The first transferred the greater part of manual labor from the home to the factory, while the second removed many conventional restrictions, giving woman a larger area of interests and activities. Both spell a larger freedom. We face the vital question, then, what effect will these changes have upon the office of motherhood?

Liberated to such a large extent from being "housekeeper," will the woman feel free from the responsibility of being a homemaker? Perhaps here is to be found the tragic blunder which we have made in the past. We have identified "housekeeping" with "homemaking." The popular idea has been that if the house was in order the home was in order. Too often it has been an illustration of the story which Jesus told. A little devil returned to his house and found it "empty, sweet and garnished," and summoning his companions entered with glee into a clean and attractive house. Into our well-swept houses there have entered every variety of devil which can destroy a home, because, though it was well swept it was empty, because the spirit of motherhood was not there.

Is the House a Home?

No! Good housekeeping does not necessarily mean good homemaking. We have all been amused at the classic recipe for keeping a husband: "Feed the beast." One is tempted to ask, if our age is not accepting that as the true answer to the question, what is the function of a home? It is indeed the cult of a certain school of psychology, and the theme of much of modern fiction, that we all are beasts, with a thin veneer of clothes and manners. From this standpoint the supreme duty of society is to see that our physical appetites are satisfied.

Many a wife and mother today is proceeding systematically on that creed, in her conception of making a home. Husband and children are to be attached to their home through their physical comforts. Of course we are animals, with the appetites of sex and stomach, and we do well to understand as clearly and intelligently as we can the physical basis of life, and learn to meet its normal demands. Accepting the dictum, however, that the way to preserve the family life is to "feed the beast," we are indeed on the way back to the jungle.

If homes are to be anything more than well builded and well kept kennels, we must meet the premise that a man is nothing but an animal, with that triumphant assertion of Jesus, "Man cannot live by bread alone." This is true because he is a spirit also, living within a physical environment. The body must have a house in which to live, and bread for food, but the spirit, too, must have a home and nourishment for its growth. That means a mother must be more than one who bears children and keeps a house for their bodies. She must make a home for their souls and provide spiritual nourishment for their personalities.

Foundation of Society.

We have outgrown many of our social ideas, but it is difficult to even imagine the day when society will not be builded on the home as its foundation. This is becoming ever clearer with the revelations of modern psychology. The first seven years of childhood are the most impressionable, and to a large extent determine the direction of the development of the personality. The home is childhood's world. Here are formed its definitions of life, moral standards, motives and habits.

As one passes along the residential streets of a city in the evening there is something solemnly impressive in the thought that within these houses the civilization of the next generation is being made. Here the definitions of honor, loyalty, success are being made. Within these walls the attitudes toward state and church and neighborhood are being determined. Tastes in art and literature are being formed, and here, too, is the very birthplace of faith and love. Without discounting the other influences which may come into the life of the child, it is quite certain that the mother may be primary in the making of the psychic atmosphere of this home-world of childhood.

The Russian communist is suggesting a substitute for the mother, in the form of a scientific communal nursery. This is a direct challenge to the womanhood of America. Are you willing to pay the cost in preparation of body and mind, and in sacrifice of time and pleasure, in order to perform this highest and most sacred office of motherhood?

NEW YORK SKYLINES

BY CHARLES ESTCOURT, JR.

(Written Exclusively for The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance.)

NEW YORK, May 10.—In 13 years Billy Sunday has changed some, but New York has changed more. When the evangelist came here this last week for his first sermon in the city in that length of time his reception was far different from the one he had on the other occasion, when he led a big revival campaign.

Once more he jumped to a chair and prayed with one foot planted on top of a desk and again he filled a church, but with comparatively few exceptions he received no hearty greeting from the ministers and church people who indorsed him so strongly before.

"I believe," said John D. Rockefeller, Jr., on that other occasion, "that he is as sincere a man as ever lived and that the whole campaign was a big job well performed and that the city will realize the concrete benefits within a year."

Since then Mr. Rockefeller has gone along with Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick in the so-called modernist camp that Sunday and the fundamentalists oppose.

The New York of Yesterday.

Two residents of long standing were disputing in a restaurant about what Broadway at Times Square looked like 10 years ago. They might have settled the argument, which was natural enough because the pace of rebuilding here is too much for men's memories, by stepping outside and buying picture postcards from a girl on the sidewalk.

Her sign proclaims her deafness and asks aid through purchase. Somehow this girl has acquired quite a collection of postcards bearing pictures of buildings razed within the last few years. She does not announce the fact that her cards are thus out of date and she might resent it if informed that her goods are not exactly fresh and yet more people might buy from her if they knew that.

Old prints and drawings are available, showing the city of centuries ago, but it is not so easy to check up on how this amazing town looked, in its most progressive sections, within the generation still alive.

The Situation at the Library.

Why don't people step into the comfortable public library and use the telephones there in large, cool, quiet and wide-open booths instead of waiting in line in crowded cigar and drug stores in that area? What are they afraid of? Books don't bite. It isn't important and the library doesn't feel at all hurt. It's merely strange.

That part of the public that sits and thinks—or just sits—on stone steps and benches about the library building has capital diversion now in the building so rapidly rising at the northwest corner of Fifth avenue and Forty-second street. Sparks fly and the riveting is well-nigh magnificent.

Only there should be benches. Through the afternoon a line of weary men lean against the library wall to watch the workmen. The need of benches is sadly apparent and so it is also behind the library, in small Bryant park, where on fine days gentlemen of leisure have to stand and wait until some of their fellowmen get up.

When Episcopalians Meet.

Clergymen and laymen who believe that church differences should not develop into public controversy have done their best to see to it that disagreements within this Protestant Episcopal diocese are submerged this year, as usual, in the annual convention about to begin.

But they are less sanguine than in the past. Opposition to the policies of Bishop William T. Manning, who as presiding officer, has shown rare skill in suppressing such murmurs in other conventions, has crystallized somewhat, as is evident from the expressed attitude of Dr. Alexander G. Cummins, rector of Christ church, Poughkeepsie. When asked about a report that he might be named to succeed the late Rt. Rev. Herbert Shipman, as suffragan bishop to assist Dr. Manning, he declared that he wouldn't have the position for anything.

"I have no desire to be an errand boy for Bishop Manning or any other bishop," said Dr. Cummins. It's an odd fact that Dr. Cummins, an aggressive leader in the so-called liberal group that happens to be strongly entrenched in certain of the most fashionable churches, was guest of honor at a dinner given by Bishop Shipman and that Bishop Manning spoke in his praise.

Window Displays Attract Attention.

The knees of a cockroach must knock together if possible when he or she scurries past a certain shop window which presents now a murderous display of products purporting to be deadly to all insects. It's enough to give a thousand-legger the creeps to see this array of bottles and cans, all garishly labeled with promises to slay ants, flies, mosquitoes, moths and all of the insect tribe.

So far as holding attention is concerned the window display of a prominent pet store wins the marble moth ball. Along with glass containers in the shape of elephants full of goldfish this window contains a half dozen of the most highly entertaining monkeys in town. People that stop to look at them remain there amused and fascinated and depart finally with reluctance. Clowns, acrobats and possible philosophers are these monkeys and their showmanship never tires.

Straw Ballots Meaningless, Holds Dr. Chas. O. Jones

Editor Constitution: As measles in spring and football in autumn, we have periodical attacks of straw ballots and referenda on prohibition. They are absurd and would be laughable except that their sponsors seek to impress the public with conclusions whose falsity is shown at the only constitutional referendum, which is a state or national election.

The Literary Digest ballot begins its betting odds two to one in favor of liquor. It gives one question to two divisions of prohibition, but two questions to the wet side. Question 1 is: "Do you favor the continuance and strict enforcement of the eighteenth amendment and Volstead law?" This should have been: 1. "Do you favor the eighteenth amendment?" 2. "Do you favor the Volstead law?" Note the two fingers on the wet hand reaching for votes: One question: "Do you favor a modification of the Volstead law to permit light wines and beers?" Second question: "Do you favor repeal of the eighteenth amendment?" This is not a square deal to begin with.

Then the ballots do not reach the people. Sixty millions of our population are eligible to vote. If the Digest ballots of thirty millions were distributed individually, more than that number would not have received a ballot. But the ballots were unequally distributed, names being largely taken from telephone and city directories, leaving out millions not listed, especially in rural sections, comprising over 48 per cent of our population. Even of those listed we have reports as follows: Of 15 Methodist preachers subscribers to the Digest, only 5 received ballots; at Gordon Street Baptist church, in a pool of 600, 15, one a woman, received ballots; at St. Paul Methodist church, of 800, 35 received ballots. These figures could be increased indefinitely, proving the wisdom of the resolutions offered by Dr. J. Sprole Lyons and passed unanimously by the Atlanta Christian Council of ministers and laymen, representing 80 churches, that the referendum agitation is "prompted entirely by interests which have been and are intensely hostile to the eighteenth amendment to the constitution, and to its supporting statutes."

Actual facts prove such referenda ridiculous. Several years ago the Illinois legislature ordered a state referendum. The drys largely refrained from voting. The wet majority was much over a million, the result being hailed as proving the state hugely wet. That fall Illinois elected two dry congressmen-at-large by great majorities. In the primaries of this spring, of 27 congressmen nominated, 20 are dry, and the dry candidate for the senate beat the wet "to a finish." In the fall election we shall see J. Ham Lewis, as master of the wardrobe, carrying the senatorial toga for Mrs. McCormick!

The Constitution editorial a few weeks ago hit the referendum ghost a terrific blow, saying "The only constitutional referendum on prohibition is the national election. If, as they claim, the wets are a majority handcuffed by an organized dry minority, why don't the wets crowd the polls and elect their men? A wet congress could easily pull the teeth of all dry laws." "But," continues The Constitution, "the present congress is dryer than ever." Of 96 senators only 20 are even counted moist. Of 435 congressmen only 100 are considered wet, and to reach that "measly" number the ballot has to be stuffed.

In its editorial of May 7 The Constitution says: "Whether the people are a majority for the policy of the amendment, or want a new treatment of liquor problems, cannot be assumed from straw votes, or even from court decisions. Hence the country must accept the congressional elections as the best barometer of public sentiment. As long as congress is dry by decisive majorities in the senate and house, one must believe that the people want prohibition, and want it enforced to the limit." Until congress is decisively wet, the drys can give the "ha-ha" to every false assertion that the country drinks more liquor and commits more crime than ever.

Greensboro Not 'Dead Town,'

:: NEITHER HAD IT 8,000 POPULATION IN 1820, THEY HOLD ::

Say Its Progressive Citizens

BY HAROLD STEPHENS.

From down in Greensboro, progressive and enterprising Georgia community, comes a chorus protesting that the town should not have been mentioned in the same connection with a list of "Ghost Towns" of Georgia, around which an article was published in the magazine section of The Constitution of April 27.

For the relief of those concerned this historian—so this reporter was called in the letters descending upon him—tenders his apologies to both Greensboro and its citizens individually, and for earnest begs leave to say that nowhere, in no wise in the article was Greensboro referred to as a dead town.

After reciting a list of six Georgia towns, populous in 1820 but now dead, and calling them by name—Frederica, Sunbury, Hardwick, Petersburgh, Jacksonborough and Ebenezer—the article said, "Consider: At that time Greensboro, with a population of 8,070, was greater than Savannah, which boasted only 7,215. And Atlanta did not exist at all."

The statement stands. It was made in direct connection with, and in the discussion of a list of Georgia towns of 1820 appearing in the "Universal Geography," published in Philadelphia in 1820. And in substantiation of the statement, on page two of the magazine section, a photograph of the pages of the book carrying the list of towns was published.

Greensborough—or Greensboro, as the spelling is now—was not called dead. If it was, then likewise was Savannah, which to date has recorded no protests, and Atlanta, which as the census of 1930 winds to its end flaunts a population of 360,000 and more.

That 8,000 Population.

But letters from Greensboro also cite another matter, namely, that the town never had a population of 8,000. The assertion that it had, quoted above, was likewise based on the "Universal Geography," and similarly substantiated by photographic evidence.

T. B. Rice, former mayor of Greensboro, is of the opinion that the town reached its population peak in 1920, when 2,128 were recorded in the census.

J. C. Williams, editor of The Greensboro Herald-Journal, although he says he has read or heard of something like that, scouts the idea of such an early, large population. There are no signs in the community that 8,000 people ever lived there, he states.

Tracing the population of the town in Sherwood's Georgia Gazeteer fails to give corroboration. The edition for the year 1826 gives 910 as the population, 382 of whom were white and 528 negro.

". . . The first courthouse was merely a cabin," the book states. "Greensborough was once burned by the Indians; and in '91 it contained about a dozen cabins, built on the ruins of the old town."

Yet there is a well defined report current that Greensboro once had a population of some size, larger, in fact, than that of Savannah at the time.

It is a question of interest. The Constitution would be pleased to receive any information with regard to the early population of Greensboro and Savannah that its readers may have.

Greensboro Citizens Write.

Among the letters received from Greensboro were communications from Editor J. C. Williams, of the Greensboro Herald-Journal, and from T. B. Rice, president of the Bank of Greensboro. Their letters were as follows:

Editor Constitution: Harold Stephens, in writing anent "Georgia's Dead Towns," in the magazine section of The Constitution last Sunday, said that Greensborough had a population of 8,000 around the year 1820.

While I have heard and read something like this before, I am inclined to believe it a mistake. In fact, Greensboro (as now spelled) has as many people as it ever had. There are no signs that Greensboro ever had 8,000 people within its borders. I have talked to old inhabitants that have resided here all their lives, and they know nothing of such a period in the town's history. There are no signs that Greensboro ever had 8,000 people within its borders.

The Georgia railroad wasn't built at this time. Before the railroad was built all merchandise was hauled to Greensboro by wagon trains from Augusta. This itself makes us think the town has always been even less than its present population of around 2,500 inhabitants.

The place where Greensboro stands was originally an Indian fort, where people for miles around would come for protection when the Indians would go on the warpath.

In 1786 Greensboro was selected as the site for the University of Georgia. For 15 years nothing was done about it, and in 1801 John Milledge gave 700 acres of land in Jackson county—now Clarke county—and the university was placed in Athens.

While Greensboro has not grown as we believe it should, the city will compare favorably with the other smaller cities in this section. We have a large textile mill, oil mill, ice plant, two cotton ginneries. Greensboro was the first small city in the state to install talking pictures. It has many splendid stores and sells the largest amount of milk and cream of any town in the state.

J. C. WILLIAMS,
Editor of The Herald-Journal.

Letter From Ex-Mayor.

Editor Constitution: The census as published so far places Greensboro as the second largest town on the Georgia railroad between Atlanta and Augusta (not counting Decatur, as Atlanta claims that).

Greensboro has furnished her full quota to help make Atlanta what she is, but she still has the finest lot of "folks" that you ever saw, and she is proud of them.

Those good people who went from Greensboro to help make Atlanta great are not ashamed to "tell the world" that they came from Greensboro, and often make pilgrimages "back home" to recuperate both physically and morally, and always feel that they are better men and women by having returned even for a few days, and many of them request their families to see that their remains are brought back to Greensboro for their "last resting place."

One of Atlanta's prominent businessmen (who never lived in Greensboro) stated to another Atlanta businessman (who never was in Greensboro) some months ago that "if he had a son that he wanted brought up in an atmosphere of right-thinking and right-living" he would send him to Greensboro, Ga., in preference to any place that he knew of.

This remark impressed his friend so profoundly that he stopped me on the streets of Atlanta not long ago to tell me about it, and I am satisfied that when he finished talking with me he was completely "sold" on Greensboro.

I am not a native of Greensboro, but came here from Atlanta in 1889, and have found that my friend did not overestimate the good qualities of the people here, and I will never cease to thank my Maker for directing my footsteps to this town, which is composed of as fine people as live on the face of the earth.

SEEING LONDON

BY JOAN LITTLEFIELD.

(Staff Correspondent of The Atlanta Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance.)

LONDON, May 10.—A gala performance of "Die Meistersinger" at Covent Garden, under the direction of Herr Bruno Walter, made a fitting opening to a London season which promises to be rich in musical interest.

In addition to ten weeks of "star" opera, we are to have visits from the Vienna Philharmonic orchestra, a famous Dutch orchestra, and the New York Philharmonic orchestra. Interest is so great in the visit of the last named that all tickets for the concerts they are to give in London under Toscanini's baton have already been sold.

During recent years English society has brown definitely to like music for its own sake and it now no longer goes to the opera merely to see and to be seen. The musical party has become fashionable again among older hostesses, and Mrs. Philip Snowden's lead in giving musical soirees at No. 11 Downing street is sure to be followed by many prominent people during the season.

A number of society people are themselves musicians of no little ability. Among them are Princess Beatrice, who is a first-rate performer, composer and critic, and Princess Arthur, of Connaught, who has a good voice and practices regularly every day. The Duchess of Atholl, M. P., is a very brilliant musician. Before her marriage she studied at the Royal College of Music where she was a pupil of Sir Hubert Parry, and it was hoped at one time that she would make music her career. Besides being a fine pianist and an excellent accompanist, the duchess has composed a number of songs, including settings to some Robert Louis Stevenson verse.

Lady Holmes, wife of the ex-director of the national gallery, is also a composer, and she sometimes gives violin recitals. She has written a good deal of chamber music, an Indian opera, "Nur Jahan," and a delightful fantasy on Charles Lamb's essay on roast pig.

Lady Brittain is an exquisite harpist, who has composed much harp music and some ballads. Some of her work has been produced at the Metropolitan Opera house. In 1922 she led the band of harps at the Welsh National Eisteddfod and later was admitted into the Gorsedd circle under the Bardic title of Telynores Y Golomen Wen.

Royal Duke Keeps Up With Times.

The Duke of Connaught, who celebrated his eightieth birthday on May 1, has just returned from the south of France to his London home in the Mall. Clarence House was redecorated shortly before his arrival, and the duke's sitting room is now pale blue and his study a cheerful rose-pink.

In spite of his advancing years, the duke intends to take an active part in the London season. On May 31 he is to celebrate his jubilee as colonel-in-chief of the rifle brigade by attending a review in Hyde Park and a few days later he will assist the king to take the salute at the trooping of the colors.

The duke has always been eager to keep in touch with all the changes and developments of the modern world, and his bonhomie and sense of public duty have endeared him to the English people.

He has the same broad human sympathies as his brother, the late King Edward, and he is essentially a man of domestic tastes and one content to be among his family and intimate friends. Nothing delights him more than a walk round the streets of the West End, especially in the early morning, when he may often be seen mingling, quite unrecognized, among the people.

Barrie Captains His Cricket Team.

On May 9 all the distinguished literary people in London foregathered at dinner to do honor to Sir James Barrie on his seventieth birthday. The dinner, which also marked the 140th anniversary of the Royal Literary fund, was presided over by the hero of the occasion, who made a few felicitous remarks.

Another event in which the great little playwright will play a leading part takes place in June when he has promised to captain a cricket team to represent his birthplace, Kirriemuir (the immortal Thrums) against the west of Scotland. Sir James has presented a new cricket pavilion to the village and the game will be played after he has declared this open.

When it was suggested that the odds would be heavy against Kirriemuir in a match with some crack Scots batsmen, Barrie, eager for the honor of "Thrums," retorted, "I'll take a few test players up with me and we'll see about that!"

The team has not yet been composed. It is a matter that rests entirely with Sir James. But there is a rumor that some of the Australian players visiting this country for the forthcoming test matches may be included.

An Aeroplane Home.

It would almost appear that the present boom in flying is beginning to influence domestic architecture. At any rate, a house has just been built at Amersham, in Buckinghamshire, which is shaped like an aeroplane.

The "nose" is the library and the "wings," each 30 feet long, which are set back at an angle of 60 degrees from the "cockpit," are the dining room and the drawing room. In the center of the house a fountain plays and the garage is in the cellar.

The place has been designed as a sun-trap. The front of the house consists largely of windows; and hardly anything but glass fronts the spiral staircase which runs from top to bottom. The top story is a playground for children, open to the sun and air. Many of the rooms have been decorated in pale blue dusted with gold, giving an effect of brilliant sky. The nursery has sunlight glass windows, and there is only one fireplace, the whole house being centrally heated.

The garden has fives and tennis courts and a small lake flanked by terraces, and the house, which is 600 feet above sea level and 100 feet above the road that runs by it, has been appropriately christened "High and Over."

Economy in Wedding Presents.

Whether it is the effect of Philip Snowden's budget or the fact that at this time of year society weddings are as multitudinous as freak parties, or whether it is merely a feeling in the air that young brides must not be spoilt, is not clear. But it is certainly a fact that many recent wedding presents have been noteworthy from the point of view of economy.

A recent April bride received a set of saucepans from a duchess, a hearthbrush from an earl and a patent eggboiler from another titled friend. Among her other presents were a visitors' book, and what she describes as a "deadly home-made handbag."

Another bride was given three wooden kitchen spoons, tastefully tied together with a piece of blue ribbon, while a friend burst into tears when she received an amateur water-color, the laborious work of the donor!

The limit was said to have been reached when one member of a wealthy family gave a sugar bowl, while another member of the same family presented the tongs. One unfortunate bride, however, does not agree with this verdict, since what should have been one of her most "important" presents turned out to be a sachet of lavender with the family crest embroidered in one corner!

Authoress Collects Walking Sticks.

Miss G. B. Stern, the novelist, a dramatization of whose book, "Debonair," was recently produced at the Lyric theater, has a strange hobby for one of her sex. She collects walking-sticks. They are of ebony, ivory and agate, of blue shagreen and orange Chinese lacquer. One, in creamy yellow, has a Viennese amber top; another, a red one, has a knob shaped like a toad, while a third, for country use, is cut from a nut-hedge and shows the marks of the honeysuckle which for years twined round its stem.

Miss Stern's favorites, however, are "joggleberry," so called after the character in "Surtees," which was cut from the olive trees in her Italian villa; and a black and white one as carried by Val in "The Matriarch." If "Debonair" is a success, she has promised herself a new addition—a walking-stick of jade.

ATLANTANS TO ATTEND DRY GOODS CONVENTION

Executives of Atlanta department stores are leaving today to attend the concurrent conventions of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, which open Monday morning at Chicago. There are over 3,000 member stores in the association, employing about one-half million workers, and selling annually between three and four billion dollars worth of merchandise, and representatives of a great majority of these will assemble for an exchange of information concerning policies and methods of the four participating groups—the controlers' congress, store managers' division, traffic and personnel groups.

Philip LeBoutillier, president of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, and president, Best & Co., New York, will deliver the keynote address, "Profits or Exercise?" The opening meeting will be called to order by Earle Powers, Strawbridge & Clothier, Philadelphia, Pa., chairman of the store managers' division. An address of welcome in behalf of Chicago and its merchants will be made by Colonel Robert Isham Randolph, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce. Dr. David R. Craig, research bureau for retail training, University of Pittsburgh, will speak on "Retailing Analysis." Other leaders in the merchandising and financial world will deliver addresses in subsequent meetings of the convention which continues through Thursday.

J. J. Doran, Davison-Paxon Company, Atlanta, will address the controllers' congress on "The Education of the Controller," and Frank H. Neely, Rich's, Inc., Atlanta, will speak on "Co-ordinating the Non-Merchandising Functions of the Store."

The May Song

With skies low enough to blue you,
Trailing hill and plain,
And stars a-shining thru you
The May comes home again.

O the flower blisses,
The friendly zephyred lane,
The silver shower kisses
Love her home again.

Down around the river,
The lazy willows sweep you,
Every blushing quiver
Longing loves to keep you.

With skies low enough to blue you
Trailing hill and plain,
And stars a-shining thru you
The May comes home again.

MOTHER'S DAY RHYMES

BY EARNEST NEAL,
Poet Laureate of Georgia.

MOTHER'S DAY.

Every day is Mother's day;
Every when and where
That God can't go
His love to show—
In Heaven's glow—
He sends a mother there.
Safe in her arms,
From earth's alarms
She shelters us with care,
And at her knee,
How tenderly
We're taught to lisp a prayer.

Every night is Mother's night,
When tired little feet
Her great heart knows
To soothe from woes
Of heels and toes,
Stone-bruised in field or street
"To lullybye town
In snow-white gown"—
Her voice is low and sweet—
"In lullabye town
There's never a frown"
When love's a snow-white sheet.

When sickness comes Into our homes
Who sits beside our bed?
Who, who alone,
When there is none
Save her—and God o'erhead?
When Fortune's frown
H[illegible] brought us down
And sun-shine friends have fled,
We are weak and poor;
Whose heart's wide door
Reveals love's banquet spread?

God's holy love
Came from above
And thrilled a mother's breast.
From Mary's knee
To the cruel tree
All motherhood He blest;
Mother o' mine,
Mother o' thine,
And mothers of all the rest:
The tru and good
Of motherhood
That save the Old Home Nest.
Every where and every when God needs mothers to help make men.

"DOLORE DOLORIUM"
(A Mother's Day Reflection.)

It is Mother's Day,
And flowers of May
On the grave of winter grow,
The world seems bright
With the soft spring light
And I feel it should be so.

But for me there gleams
From my land of dreams
A spectre dim on memory's shore;
For my soul today
Is groping its way
In the Land of Nevermore.

With love I was wild—
And Mary a child;
In the kingdom of God lived we,
For she was my wife,
And I was her life;
Both happy as mortals can be.

One bright, happy day,
On her white bosom lay
The gift of all gifts of love;
Thru the smiles of our child
God blest us and smiled
From His throne in Heaven above.

When treacherous Fame
Had honored my name,
And Mary had bowed to Pride,
'Twixt Fame's cold power
And Fashion's vain flower
Love—leaves a-withering—died.

No wife! No child!
Life's dreary wild
Is bleak this Mother's Day;
My hopes are dead, are dead,
Fame's here has flew—
December buries May 1.

A Letter to Mother

I see your face in every flow'r that blooms;
I hear your voice in every bird that sings;
Your wondrous smile my darkest hour illumes,—
Your silv'ry laughter through my mem'ry rings.
Your twinkling eyes are in the morning dew;
The lullabies you sang—I hear them still;
And most I've missed,—(I wonder if you knew?)—
Your hand to hold as I've marched up life's hill!
And so today, on Mother's Day, my dear,
I write to say what long you must have known:
My love for you has marked my pathway clear,
Though all too little I've repaid your own!
So all things join me, earthly and Divine,
To say again: "I love you, Mother mine!"

—DAVID EDGAR UNGAR.

EVERYDAY QUESTIONS

BY DR. S. PARKES CADMAN.

Allentown, Pa.

How do you account for St. Paul's obvious prejudice against women, and why did he insist that they should cover their heads and be silent in churches?

Because he was human as well as a divinely inspired apostle. The reasons for his prohibition against any departure from the ancient rituals regarding woman's conventional behavior were: (a) The age was one of appalling moral laxity. (b) The infant church was bitterly assailed by unscrupulous enemies, who accused her of frightful excesses. (c) The slightest infringement of the social code by a woman however innocent, was marked down as proof of her immorality.

Yet it was this same apostle who declared for feminine equality. "In Christ," said St. Paul, "there is neither male nor female." His epistles repeatedly disclose his anxiety for the protection and advantage of womanhood. Under social conditions as they then existed, much sound sense was embodied in the counsels to which you object. The fierce light of a hostile paganism focussed on the conduct of the early Christians necessitated the avoidance of even the appearance of evil.

The exhortations of St. Paul regarding women do not apply to our day, nor should they be judged by modern standards.

We did not ask to be born. Life follows a purely natural process. When we examine ourselves we find that we are simply so many chemical elements. Hence death is the end of us. Is there anything wrong with that position?

I wonder if you are quite satisfied with so easy an explanation of the mystery of human existence. Few major questions of life will admit a simple and unqualified affirmative or negative as their answer, because there are usually two sides to be considered. You have stated one side of the issue. Allow me to state the other.

Certainly life is an unsolicited gift, but what of that? No person can be consulted about his being born. He has to be born before he can consider what being here involves. I therefore suggest that it is quite possible the life we did not choose is entirely beyond our power to destroy. It has always seemed strange to me that speculators who argue that inorganic processes ultimately produced life, also maintain that life itself has no power to reappear on the other side of bodily death.

Your statement that self-examination shows we are simply a chemical process moves me to ask what you do with the examiner himself, and with the faculty making the examination? Somebody has set up the process. All observation involves an observer, and there is no way whatever whereby the observer can identify himself with what he is observing.

You can insist, if you please, that observation is simply one chemical process observing another chemical process. But would not a chemical process capable of such an achievement be a rather remarkable thing? If you are bound to materialize the whole of life you can do so only by giving the material a spiritual power, dignity and value never yet attributed to it by intelligent thinkers. In that case, where is your theory? It has vanished. People who start out to rule out the spiritual world find by the time they are through that nothing is left of their own personality.

What course would you suggest adopting for the instruction of a class of young people who are candidates for church membership.

An effective course should include the essential doctrines of the faith of the church these young people are to join. Exemplify and strengthen their instruction in those doctrines by the use of Christian or Jewish biographies. Abstract statements of religious beliefs are likely to be one-sided until supplemented by the registrations of those beliefs in human life and action.

A Hebrew teacher cannot do better than appeal to Abraham, the father of the faithful, to Moses the lawgiver, to Isaiah and Jeremiah, the prophet statesmen, to Hosea and Amos, the seers of righteousness. A Christian teacher ought to begin and end with the life of Christ as the revelation of the Father. St. Paul is available for this purpose because he was the heroic missionary whose adventures for his Master's Gospel attract the young. Besides, we know more of his personal career than of that of any other Apostle.

Then go to history as it is epitomized in the leading figures of post-Biblical eras. Select the characters which illustrate and enforce the claims of religion as life's major concern. Here abundant material is available and a dozen or more leaders should be selected. For Christians I suggest St. Augustine, Hildebrand, Innocent the Third, St. Francis, Wyclif, Huss, Luther, Calvin, Pascal, Wesley, Carey of India. General Booth, Bishop Thoburn, Sir Wilfred Grenfell and Cardinal Mercier. Doubtless many others will suggest themselves to my readers especially to those of the Jewish church.

Sweet Flowers

(The following poem was written by Captain R. T. Davis, of the 12th Georgia Regiment, upon receipt of a bunch of violets from his wife, shortly before he was killed on a Virginia battlefield in 1862. The R. T. Davis Camp, U. C. V., of Eatonton, Ga., was named in his honor and up to the time of the death of his widow his grave at that place was marked by a bed of violets. He was the father of Rev. W. C. Davis, of Atlanta.

"Sweet flowers! Ye bring delightful thoughts,
And memories of love and home,
Ye breathe a fragrance far and more sweet
Than e'er exhaled from tropic bloom.

Sweet flowers! How fondly will I prize,
And keep you with a miser's care,
Affection's treasure! far more worth
Than all the gems that deck the air.

Sweet flowers! 'Mid all the varied scenes,
In which my soldier's lot may fall,
Ye shall attend my wondering steps,
And solace me amid them all.

Sweet flowers! In loneliness and care,
In sorrow, suffering, and pain,
Your perfumed wisperings shall soothe
And cheer my drooping soul again.

Sweet flowers! When gladness fills my heart,
And joy and happiness are mine,
My thoughts shall turn to her whose love
Your pleasing mission did assign.

Sweet flowers! When peace shall smile again
Upon this fair, loved land of ours,
I'll bear you to my home again,
My home, where first ye bloomed, sweet flowers.

Sweet flowers! But should I fall in death,
Far, far from loved ones, and from home,
I'd have you laid upon my breast,
The partners of my lonely tomb.

Sweet flowers! And on that lonely tomb
No other monument I'd crave—
No marble—but sweet flowers, like you—
A bed of violets on my grave.

My Enchantress

BY MAYBELLE MAYNE PORTER.

In ages past, I must have been
Some elfin, sparkling water queen
Who had her home deep in the sea
Or in some caves, wind-swept and free,
For bounding waves forever cast
O'er me a witching spell.
They always hold my heart steadfast;
I seem to read a bygone past
In every tiny shell.

And white-capped billows, foaming high,
As wind and storm go raging by,
Or tranquil seas of deepest blue,
Beneath a sky of azure hue,
All have a charm I can't resist.
O ever changing sea!
I love its waters gray with mist,
Or sparkling 'neath a sky sun-kissed;
It always enchants me.

Safeguarding Georgia's Cotton Crop

By Dr. Andrew M. Soule, President, Georgia State College of Agriculture and the Mechanic Arts, Athens, Georgia.

The condition and outlook of the cotton farmer are not rosy at this juncture. This is due in part to the falling-off in the export demand by reason of the production of a better grade and quality of cotton in other sections of the world and to the distinct lessening of the mill demand for spinning fibers here at home on account of the period of deflation through which we have recently passed.

The constant threat of an expanded cotton acreage in the southwest has also tended to depress rather than stimulate the market. Coupled with this, the southeast has experienced ideal weather for the preparation of the land up to the period of planting. Since that date, the rather persistently cold weather has delayed this operation and may possibly interfere with the rapid and uniform germination of some of the seed already incorporated in the ground.

Other difficulties to which attention should be directed are the relatively low viability of much of the seed planted this spring due to the unprecedented rainfall during the period of the cotton harvest in the fall of 1929.

The restriction of credit by bankers and others should not be lost sight of as it has probably tended to bring the acreage which might otherwise have been planted down to a considerable degree. No one is capable of expressing a very definite opinion relative to the situation which now pertains, though most people seem to think the acreage devoted to cotton in Georgia will equal or exceed that planted last season. This may in part be due to the recent evident tendency for credits to loosen up a little, the movement of fertilizers, to increase to a rather marked degree in many if not all parts of the state, and the enlarged number of farm units in operation this year as compared with last.

At best, it would seem as though the planting season for cotton is somewhat later than usual, at least in certain sections, and that getting the crop to a good stand throughout this state in particular will not be an easy task. Once this is accomplished, there is a question as to whether the plants will show the usual degree of vigor ordinarily experienced by reason of the low germinating quality of the seed which undoubtedly must have been used on many of our farms.

Stabilization Steps.

A review of the facts and conditions which now pertain affords thought for serious reflection and very appropriately leads to a consideration of what can now be done to help stabilize the situation and protect and advance the interests of the farmer and insure the reaping of the best possible yield from the area devoted to the cotton crop in 1930.

The basic fertilizer has already been purchased and applied. The best advices available indicate that slightly lower formulas may have been used in smaller amounts this year than was true of last season. The general tendency, however, is still to use higher grade mixtures than were applied by many of our planters as recently as several years ago. This procedure is undoubtedly predicated to a large degree upon the effective educational campaign conducted relative to this matter as well as to the results obtained by the farmers engaged in our five-acre cotton contest.

The figures show, for instance, that 3,430 farmers resident in all parts of the state have participated in this project during the past four years. These contestants were located in more than 76 counties. Of the gross number, 83 completed acceptably the records obtained by 873 farmers on five-acre areas or a gross of 4,415 acres are therefore available.

No such data and information concerning cotton cultivation have ever been assembled in any other southern state, and, in view of the difficulties by which we are now confronted, it is not inappropriate to review these figures. It appears for instance that in all four of the years in question that the average amount of fertilizer applied per acre varied from six to eight hundred pounds of 10-4-4 to an 8-4-4. Of course, there were many special formulas employed, and, in some instances, the applications ran to as low as two hundred pounds per acre and in others to as high as three thousand. These were extremes, however, and are therefore of no special significance. In addition to the basic fertilizer applied, nearly 500 out of the 873 farmers who finished in the Georgia Five-Acre Cotton Contest used a side-application of nitrate of soda. This varied in amount from 25 to 300 pounds per acre. Again, these extremes should be disregarded, for the average appears to have varied from one to two hundred pounds per acre.

These facts indicate a unanimity of procedure on the part of the contestants both from the standpoint of the initial, high-grade fertilizer used under the drill row and the side-applications put on chiefly after the cotton was chopped to a stand.

Profits Assured.

Some one has suggested that the plan of procedure outlined above and which has been followed so effectively and with such pronounced success by our five-acre cotton contestants might very appropriately be regarded in the future as constituting the "Georgia Plan of Cotton Fertilization." In any event, it appears to have given results from the standpoint of yield that insure a substantial profit to the land owner at a cost for plant food which he could well afford to make.

While naturally a considerable variety of top-dressers was used, 59 of the contestants in 1927, 120 in 1928 and 266 in 1929 used nitrate of soda. Many more used combination of this material with sulphate of ammonia, potash, phosphoric acid or other similar materials. Sulphate of ammonia stood second in so far as its individual use as a side-application was concerned, having been applied each year by about 15 to 20 of those who sent in satisfactory records. A small number of growers applied some one of the so-called "synthetic" nitrogens, while a few individuals used a complete fertilizer for this purpose.

The facts set forth speak for themselves and indicate the general line along which our most successful cotton farmers are thinking and proceeding. No doubt the use of these side-applications is predicated on the general belief that nitrogen in the main constitutes the controlling factor in so far as the yield of cotton is concerned. Apparently, a minimum of 45 to 60 pounds of available plant food derived from this source should be used on each acre of land devoted to cotton in Georgia. Evidently, the application of a part of it under the drill row constitutes the very wisest and soundest practice which can be followed. It is equally clear that the use of the balance in the form of a side dressing now constitutes a well-established practice on the part of many of the most progressive cotton farmers of the state.

These results also demonstrate that when an inadequate amount of nitrogen is used in connection with cotton that insufficient yields will be obtained to insure a profitable return. Farmers who have discovered this fact are undertaking to remedy it on a pretty general and extensive basis with substantial advantage to their welfare interests.

Checking the Weevil.

In face of the situation by which we are now confronted, it would appear therefore as if it were wise to give careful heed and consideration to this matter and endeavor to so encourage the growth and development of our young cotton immediately after it has been chopped to a stand as to place it on a comparative basis of growth with that which has pertained in other years. Unless this is done, the boll weevil, if seasonal conditions are at all favorable, is likely to damage the crop much more than otherwise would be the case. Two weeks delay in the time it begins to square and bloom and set on fruit may easily spell profit or disaster for the landowner.

There is an idea that the severe, cold weather which prevailed during the fall and winter minimized the possible damage from the boll weevil this year to substantial degree. It is quite possible that this insect suffered a setback; but it would be irrational to conclude that this was absolutely true. Given a few weeks in which to grow and develop and correspondingly unfavorable weather conditions for cotton and it can easily multiply at such a rate as to overtake and encompass the destruction of a very large percentage of the bolls set on. The wise farmer will therefore follow whatever policy he can to meet and overcome the danger which may easily arise from this source in the most acceptable manner possible.

Little, yellow, stunted, sickly cotton will certainly not make money for any landowner in Georgia. This was amply demopstrated by the facts and figures obtained as a result of our five-acre cotton contests and which now extend over a period of four years. In 1926, those farmers who made a yield of 200 pounds of lint cotton per acre obtained $8 profit, while those making 800, secured $70. In 1927, the farmers producing approximately 200 pounds of lint cotton per acre made a profit of $24.41. Those raising 80 pounds and upward per acre made a profit of $154.35. The cost of the cotton in the first instance was 19 cents a pound; and in the latter, 7 cents.

In 1928, the farmers who grew 200 pounds of lint per acre lost $2.21. Those who harvested 800 pounds per acre made a profit of $126.03. The cost of the cotton in the first instance was approximately 21 cents, and in the second, 5 1-4 cents. The farmers who made a yield of 200 pounds per acre in 1929 lost $7.20 per acre. Those who made 800 pounds and upward made a profit of $91.96. The cost a pound of lint in the first instance was 22 6-10 cents and in the second 6 9-10.

The wise farmer will study and cogitate over these results and be governed accordingly. It is worse than "carrying coals to Newcastle" to be endeavoring to raise cotton on a basis that insures a loss; whereby, following a different method of up-to-date and efficient practice, this crop can be cultivated at a substantial profit.

5-Acre Contest Lesson.

In conclusion, it seems appropriate to direct attention to a consideration of the results obtained by the 873 farmers who completed acceptable records during the four years in which the five-acre cotton contest has been in progress. Remember, that these men all followed about the same plan, namely: 1. They selected good, fertile land. 2. Planted choice, standard seed thereon. 3. Fertilized the same very generously with a high-grade, basic formula. 4. Used a side application of from 100 to 200 pounds of quickly available carrier of nitrogen when the cotton has been chopped to a stand. 5. Gave rapid, clean cultivation to the crop. 6. Protected the cotton against assault by the boll weevil by dusting with calcium arsenate.

That there will be a variation in the yield and profit obtained from cotton from year to year is undoubtedly true; but that the good farmer will seldom realize a loss on his operations is also equally evident. These statements are predicated on the fact that 83 farmers in 1926 produced 536 pounds of lint cotton per acre at a cost of $52.71 and a profit of $30.74. The cost per pound in this instance was 7.67 cents. In 1927, 131 farmers harvested an average of 535 pounds per acre at a cost of $51.95 and a profit of $76.70. The cost per pound was 8.36 cents. In 1928, 231 farmers made an average of 544 pounds per acre at a cost of $56.68 and a profit of $63.42. The cost per pound of lint was 7.05 cents. In 1929, 428 farmers grew an average of 443 pounds per acre at a cost of $54.67 and a profit of $33.57. The cost per pound of lint was 9.90 cents. The average production of cotton made by the 873 farmers in question was therefore 514 pounds at a cost of $54 and a net profit of $51.11 per acre. The average cost per pound of lint for all the contestants was 8.24 cents.

These very exceptional and unusual figures were obtained by the outstanding growers of the staple in the state of Georgia. Naturally, the cost for many individual farmers throughout the state should run anywhere from 33 to 90 per cent above these figures. Yet, the results cited above are indicative of what may be done with a greater or less degree of success by many of our farmers. They indicate that a different practice from that ordinarily followed must be set up and maintained. They show that business methods applied to the cultivation of cotton will pay a substantial dividend. They evidence that the progressive Georgia farmer can so handle and manipulate his land as to continue to grow cotton on a modest basis of profit and in a manner that will enable him to compete with the farmers of the southwest. They also demonstrate that thousands of farmers are now trying to raise cotton on an antiquated basis and by following procedures that render it unprofitable for them to cultivate the crop. It is certain that this condition can and should be corrected. One of the best ways to bring this about is to reassign our marginal land to crops to which they are better suited. The acreage must also be properly minimized because our poor land inefficiently prepared and managed, and improperly fertilized and planted with indifferent seed will not make a profitable crop of cotton.

SUNDAY HEALTH TALKS

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

WE OUGHT TO HAVE A BETTER RACE. THE PHYSIOLOGY OF REST.

Sixteen years ago today I secreted my copy of the Code of Medical Ethics behind the whatnot, took my reputation firmly between thumb and forefinger and my future in the other fist, and made my debut, premiere or bust in this column with the remark that

"It is all very well for romanticists and cynics to ridicule the trend of modern eugenics but certainly no practicing physician would refuse to look at a certificate of health presented by the young man who asks for his daughter's hand."

That was tellin' 'em, 16 years ago.

Even at that early date I must have had some faint idea of the abysmal dumbness of the esteemed laity, for I went on to explain that

"A young man of upright character ought to obtain and offer his health certificate voluntarily as a preliminary to his engagement. If this were done there would be very few divorces, and more important still, our public hospitals would not receive so many young wives and young mothers for mutilating operations."

Since I wrote that one or two states have enacted statutes with the intent, to preserve the integrity of the home against this menace of marriage—that may seem a strange way to express it, but it is true, for as marriages are now contracted in our society a very grave menace to the integrity of the home is unquestionably involved. That is the reason why certain statutes have been enacted in two states requiring some sort of guarantee that the contracting parties are free from communicable disease.

Here is an actual situation: Dr. Coe is treating Henry Doe for a communicable disease. Henry is a popular young man of respectable family. John Roe, a dear friend of Dr. Coe, tells the doctor his daughter is going to be married next week, to Henry Do. The doctor asks Henry about it and Henry explains that he can't postpone the wedding without getting into an awkward situation. The wedding goes on, and Dr. Coe is bound morally and legally to preserve silence. The consequence, for the young wife, is inevitably a ruined life. Some layman might think Dr. Coe should warn his friend Roe of the mistake Roe's daughter is making. But the law is strict and the doctor cannot if he would.

Now there is one way in which the doctor might try to prevent such a fatal wedding. He might endeavor to persuade Friend Roe that, as the father of a marriageable girl it is his duty to demand a health certificate from any man, no matter who or what he may be, who proposes marriage.

There are not a few who argue that if the man who proposes marriage ought to offer the parent or guardian a bill of health from a physician whose standing is satisfactory to the parent or guardian, then why should not the woman in the case offer

NEWS of STAGE and SCREEN

EDITED by RALPH T. JONES

Another contest this week. This time a couple of guest passes await the one who can supply the best line of comment for the picture from "Young Man of Manhattan,' published today in this section, which will show at Keith's Georgia the week of May 19. If you read the story—published serially in The Saturday Evening Post—or if you've read any criticisms on the picture, you know that this is one of the cleverest talkie achievements of the season. So the prize winner will have passes to something worth talking about, afterwards.

I confess to exceptional interest in the Erlanger Theater Players' production of "The Garden of Eden" this week. Chiefly because my knowledge of the play is more meager than usual Everything I have read about it, however, indicates a most unusual piece of work. Also a surprising character for Margaret Brayton to revel in, in Toni. Both of which facts whet my appetite for the Monday night dip into legitimate stage entertainment with even greater than usual keenness.

Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's Capitol, sees more pictures in a month than the average theatergoer looks at or listens to in a season. That's one of the obligations of theater management. You have to look at a lot of pictures if you want the best for your patrons. Which fact adds considerable weight to the information that Manager Barron is near the raving point over his attractions for the next two weeks. "Divorcee" this week and "King of Jazz" next. Carter says they are two of the greatest screen productions he's ever seen. If you knew Carter and his conservative self as well as this writer, you'd know that his enthusiasm means a lot.

Rumors are running 'round that Dr. M. Sayle Taylor, sexologist, may bring his presentation "Married Love," back to the Rialto for a second engagement, within the next few weeks. Despite his stay of five weeks it seems there are quite a number of people who have voiced regrets that they haven't heard him. Hence efforts by Miss Lillian Wade, Rialto manageress, to secure him for a return engagement.

The Fox has one of the most important and "different" pictures of the year booked for a week from Monday. This is "The Strange Case of Sergeant Grischa." You've never seen a movie quite like this before. You've never heard a talkie with quite the same freedom from conversation. It is a war picture—but so different from any other war picture that you'll probably gasp a little at the strangeness of it.

In the spring the fancy of picture fans turns to coolness and comfort, Atlanta is blessed with a group of theaters that are equipped with the best possible cooling systems. Every high-class theater in the city is able to maintain comfortable and healthful temperatures all the year 'round. Of course, different managements have different ideas as to what is ideal summer indoor weather—just as different street car riders have varying ideas about the wisdom of open windows—but patrons can make their own choice as to Fahrenheit degrees as well as entertainment offerings.

An unusual picture offering is to be seen at the Rialto this week in "White Cargo," screen version of the sensationally successful stage play of a few years ago. Legitimate stage patrons will undoubtedly remember the torrid opus about "mammy palaver" and those who didn't see the play will be sure to want to see and hear it on the screen. For the benefit of both classes it is reliably reported that the picture follows the stage production with utmost fidelity.

The Fox management, with the idea of suitable marking of Mother's Day, has invited the old ladies from the Home for Old Women to be guests at the first show, Monday afternoon, of Warner Baxter in "The Arizona Kid."

Speaking of Mother's Day, Manager Bob Hicks, of the Paramount, will have his hands full Monday afternoon. The Constitution's annual party to the mothers of Atlanta will be held at his popular house at that time and, with past years as precedent, he anticipates capacity houses for the afternoon. The Constitution Mother's Day parties have come to be one of the biggest events of the year in theatrical circles.

Five Feature Offerings on Talking Screens This Week

Norma Shearer, In 'The Divorcee,' Capitol Feature

Finest Work of Popular Talkie Actress To Be Seen This Week.

Heralded as the most important talking production in which Norma Shearer has been seen to date, "The Divorcee" will be seen at Loew's Capitol all this week.

Critical opinion at a recent preview of the production was to the effect that it is far and away Miss Shearer's greatest individual triumph, ranking ahead of "Their Own Desire," "The Trial of Mary Dugan" and "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney."

Three prominent male actors, Conrad Nagel, Chester Morris and Robert Montgomery are featured in Miss Shearer's support in the new film and each one appears to have walked off with more than his share of the picture. Others in the supporting cast who were singled out for praise include Florence Eldridge, Helene Millard, Mary Doran, Tyler Brooke, Zelda Sears, George Irving and Helen Johnson.

"The Divorcee" was adapted from a story by Ursula Parrott, the treatment being handled by Nick Grinde and Zelda Sears and the continuity and dialogue by John Meehan. The production was directed by Rozert Z. Leonard, who came to this picture following completion of Ramon Novarro's forthcoming vehicle, "In Gay Madrid." Leonard has supervised several of Miss Shearer's past productions and recently directed Marion Davies in "Marianne."

"The Divorcee" is a brilliant and sophisticated expose of the promiscuous use of divorce in modern smart society. The production is filmed with a lavish hand, the environment of New York's millionaire class being faithfully reproduced in both costuming and settings.

Much of the picture was filmed aboard a 90-foot power yacht, which cruised along the coast of Catalina island. Although the picturesque coast afforded an ideal setting for beautiful exteriors, it is reported that considerable difficulties were experienced with cameras and microphones because of the rolling deck of the yacht.

MEDAL HOLDERS INVITED TO FOX SHOW MONDAY

Division Manager R. T. Newton, of the Fox theater, believes that there should be a common bond of fellowship between holders of medals of all kinds. In line with this belief he is inviting all medal holders in Greater Atlanta to be the guests of the Fox theater Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock to see and hear Warner Baxter in "The Arizona Kid," the feature screen attraction for the week.

Baxter, star of the Fox studios, won the 1929 medal offered by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for the most outstanding performance during the past year. The role which brought this honor was that of "The Cisco Kid" in "In Old Arizona," a fiction character made popular by O. Henry. The part Baxter takes in "The Arizona Kid" is similar to the one he played in "In Old Arizona."

All medal holders are requested to gather at the Fox theater box office at 3:30 with the medals they have won. The only requisite is that each medal shall bear the name of the winner, the object of the award and the date.

Patsy THE Hollywood Stenog

"Dear Eloise:

"You're right . . . that ole davil of a spring fever has gone and got me. And if you're as balmy (yawn) readin' this as I'm writin' it, you'll (yawn) scarcely notice that I've yielded to "mananna," which Edwina Booth says is what the African natives mean by being quite minus all ambish. And she oughtta know, having spent months down there with the "Trader Horn" troupe trying to look natural for the camera while lions 'n tigers were near enuff to register sound effects. Remember—Booth's the goldilocks chosen as queen of the jungle for Duncan Renaldo in this. Tho, personally, I think an elephant had the femme lead . . . but of course Van Dyke, the director ain't putting Edwina wise.

"Betty Compson and Myrna Loy just came back too from a South Sea isle where this lazy feeling is popular. They were making "The Isle of Escape," and, as Betty tells it, every time Monte Blue wanted a native to guide them he'd have to bribe the boogie with a can of salmon or such. Tho, ACTUALLY, Loisy, even throwing me a fish right now wouldn't help (yawn) much. The nearest a stenog like me can get to the tropical life around here is sitting under a palm tree on the studio grounds, watching the grass sprinklers sprink.

"Dorothy Jordan relaxes that way, too. I saw her chasing herself in-and-out of bushes . . . looking for a four-leaf clover ,(SEZ SHE!) Tho, 'twas unique-like how she just found Paul Cavanagh, instead . . . (SEZ I!) M'deah, who wouldn't go weeding around if they could stumble over anything like THAT? He's the imported Englishman who Catherine Dale sags towards in "Strictly Unconventional." And, baby, John Barrymore better drape up his profile some with this savage Paul spreading competish. You oughtta see his shoulders, too . . . real stuff . . . not padded like some of the Grbek gods hereabouts. Y'know, just the kinda comfort stations a girl can rest her weary head on.

"Maybe this Owen dame don't get the breaks, tho? Golly, Catherine even promoted an eyebrow arch outta Corinne Griffith when she strutted out in her riding habit. Wouldn't you imagine, tho, Loisy, with Owen and Norman Shearer and Virginia Villa all posing around in these jockey suits, at least one of them would bring a horse along . . . I mean just to look more natural like. Y'know, I got so lonesome for animal life staring at Norma Shearer in her leather puttees and riding breeches on the "Divorcee" set that I simply had to go over to "The Rogue Song" plot where Lawrence Tibbett's Sparkplug is stabled. After having to lissen to the foreign legion chirp on this set for hours the poor thing needed company . . . and I was it.

"But (yawn), after all, this gets me nothing but an s. p. c. a. button, so I didn't overdo it. I mean, instead, I found Lila Lee looking pretty exhausted, too, after a day's pashing in "Double Crossroads," so the two of us headed to the nearest ice cream parlor for a bracer. And did we get it . . . Hot dog! But without thanks to the soda clerk, who seemed to think he was Billy Haines.

"Instead, high-stooled next to us was . . . Ramon Novarro . . . and Loisey, in these days of (yawn) spring fever . . . he can be my sulphur and molasses, arright, arright.

"Garden of Eden," Startling Modern Play, at Erlanger

Atlantans are to witness, this week, one of the most "different" and astonishingly clever plays ever written. It is "The Garden of Eden," chosen vehicle for the Erlanger Theater Players, and offering a magnificent star role, that of Toni, to Margaret Brayton, the new leading lady. Miss Brayton scored a tremendous personal success last week in the Jane Cowl part in "Smilin' Through." The role of Toni, entirely different in type, offers her opportunity to display an entirely different side of her charming personality.

With the scenes of "The Garden of Eden," set in Paris, some exceptionally realistic stage work is anticipated from Art Director Albert H. Amend. His versatility is given full scope. The first scene is in the dark and dismal dressing room, below stage, in a cheap and obscure Parisian cabaret. Here Toni, a cabaret singer, eking out a pitiful subsistence, successfully combats the efforts of the proprietress to make her accept the attentions of wealthy patrons of the place. Toni, after a bitter struggle, escapes.

The second act finds her living in luxury, with a wealthy admirer to defray the bills, but still seeking for the happiness for which she longs. Her past rises up to ruin her afresh, and again she flees, alike from wealth as she had done earlier from sordid poverty.

In the second act Toni is living in a poor Paris lodging house. How she is found by the man she really loves and how her success and happiness come to her at the end forms a surprising denouement with an unusual twist to an exceedingly clever comedy-drama of life, love and romance. It should prove an exceptionally good week at the Erlanger.

Despite the importance of the production there will be no increase in the low scale of prices in force for this week. A slight increase for the night performances has been announced, however, for May 19, in order to meet the expense of the perfect productions the players offer. The three weekly bargain matinees, on Wednesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays will continue at the old scale, however.

"General Crack," With Barrymore, Back at Grand

John Barrymore, the distinguished actor of the stage and the screen, and Zane Grey's epic of the west, "The Lone Star Ranger," are the feature offerings at Loew's Grand theater for the week. Barrymore appears in the exotic film of gypsy love, "General Crack," Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, while the western play holds the screen during the last three days.

"General Crack" is a romantic tale of love in the eighteenth century. It serves as Barrymore's debut in talking films and wherever the colorful movie has shown it has been proclaimed as one of his finest pieces of characterization. Given the role of the fighting Duke of Kurland, a ruler who makes might right, he lends his charming voice and winning style to the cinema once more.

It has been said that Barrymore's greatest charm lies in his voice. For when a man who has so successfully played the most difficult of all roles—Hamlet—this statement is not amiss. The golden richness, the full round tones and the dramatic inflections so essential to an actor are all present in the Barrymore makeup. He is excellently supported by Marion Nixon, Lowell Sherman, Hobart Bosworth, Jacqueline Logan and a score of other stars.

Those two impressive stars, Sue Carrol and George O'Brien, juveniles of the screen, have been chosen for the cast of Zane Grey's first talking picture, "The Lone Star Ranger," a story adapted from the famous book by the greatest writer of yarns of the old west.

"The Lone Star Ranger" has all that a movie could call for. It has dash, it has sparkle, it has fire, it has romance, and it has beauty. A dashing, smashing movie of the romantic land of the prairies is the offering.

No one has taken an accurate inventory of the daily influx of free baby go-carts with which manufacturers are deluging Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh since it was bruited about that she is awaiting the arrival of her first-born. Scarcely a day passes without on baby carriage being dispatched to Mrs. Lindbergh, with the compliments of the manufacturer.

The other day a local reporter indulged in a wild flight of fancy and benignly described a middle-aged doorman of an old, dilapidated theater in Brooklyn, dressed in ill-fitting clothes as Al Raymond, of the vaudeville team of Raymond and Caverly, German dialect comics. Now, it so happens that the original Al Raymond and his partner, Frank Caverly, are very much before the public, and have contracted to make a series of talking pictures for a large movie organization. The publication of the reporter's story caused several old admirers of Al Raymond to make proffers of financial help.

Brilliant Lady Organist Comes To Paramount

While Bancroft Stars on Screen in "Ladies Love Brutes."

Inaugurating a series of special attractions, Gladys Lyle, brilliant concert organist, will be presented at the console of the Paramount theater's melodious organ this week on the program with George Bancroft's latest picture, an opus with the intriguing and unusually interesting title of "Ladies Love Brutes."

Miss Lyle, according to advance notices, possesses a charming southern personality and rare musical ability which have won her instant favor with music lovers wherever she has been heard. She is quite small of stature—billed as the Tiny Tot at the Mighty Wurlitzer—and the facility with which she handles a massive organ causes both wonderment and admiration. It is announced that she will be a regular attraction at the Paramount, each week presenting an organ show distinctly different from anything yet offered Atlanta theatergoers.

Although "Ladies Love Brutes" is the title of Bancroft's new picture, in his portrayal of the millionaire "skyscraper king" he can hardly be called a brute. For, while he is still the two-fisted he-man of the screen, he is also gentle and kind, a man who rises to great heights of character through his overpowering love for a woman far above his social station in life. The role is one of subtle shading, of mood, a vitally interesting characterization easily the most fascinating Bancroft has portrayed in some time.

Too, the quality of brute falls somewhat by the wayside in the presence of the aristocratic beauty and musical voice of the leading lady, the stately, beautiful Mary Astor, making her first appearance on the audible screen. It is Miss Astor who undoubtedly tempers this roaring giant with her majestic calm. Not that she robs Bancroft of any of his virile characteristics, but rather that she gracefully subdues his two-fisted tactics to a more even and convincing mode. As a result of her excellent work in this picture, Paramount has signed Miss Astor to a long term contract, a bit of news that is sure to be well received by movie fans generally.

"Actions Speak Louder Than Words," a strange interlude in which the actors speak the proper, conventional things, but act their impulses, is credited with being one of the most uproariously funny subjects ever screened. It will be seen on the program with the Bancroft picture, as will the miniature musical comedy, "Ride 'Em Cowboy," a new issue of Paramount Sound News and a special rendition of the popular melody, "Lonely Troubadour."

Consider the plight of Ina Claire! She was one of the most charming stage comediennes who ever consented to make a talkie. While in Hollywood she married John Gilbert. An important matter necessitated a hurried trip to New York recently. Gilbert, in the midst of producing a picture, found it impossible to accompany his wife. Her arrival in New York this week without him started rumors of divorce. For the past few days she has been hiding from the sob sisters in order to avoid repeating denials of any rift in her romance.

Nick Lucas Billed On Georgia Stage Week of May 19

The biggest piece of information for vaudeville patrons in many months was divulged this week by Manager Semop, of Keith's Georgia theater.

Nick Lucas is coming back! He will headline the Radio-Keith-Orpheum vaudeville program for the week of May 19. One week from tomorrow.

It is always big news when Nick Lucas is billed in Atlanta. Since his last visit, however, his importance as a drawing card has increased at least 50 per cent. For he has added new laurels to his tremendous reputation as the crooning troubadour, by his starring work in the successful talking and singing picture, "Gold Diggers of Broadway."

Despite his new fame, it will be the same old Nick, with his unobtrusive guitar and his insinuating, crooning voice, that will sing from the Georgia stage. He will offer many new songs, but no Atlanta audience will allow him to give a performance without "Side by Side." And, likewise, of "Tiptoe Through the Tulips," "Moonbeams, Kiss Her for Me," and half a dozen others.

Make a note now, to reserve at least one evening during the week of May 19 for Nick Lucas, the crooning troubadour. But it isn't necessary to give such advice to tens of thousands of Atlantans. All that is necessary is half a dozen words:

"Nick Lucas is coming to town."

Perhaps the most poignant sight to behold is the weekly appearance of the old Tespians who formerly trod the boards at the Actors' Fund offices in New York. Each Saturday is payday for them, when a sum of $2,000 is disbursed from a fund which is raised annually for their needs. Not one of these recipients is less than 75 and each has spent the greater part of a lifetime on the stage. Many of them were famous in their heyday. Now in the twilight of life it is this weekly dole from the coffers of the Actors' Fund which sustains them until the sound of the last trumpet.

Warner Baxter In "Arizona Kid" On Fox Screen

Popular Actor in New Vehicle of Romantic Days of Old West.

Warner Baxter, winner of the gold medal awarded by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences as the most accomplished actor on the screen for 1929, comes to Atlanta and the new Fox theater Monday for a week's engagement in his latest all-talking western drama, "The Arizona Kid."

In "The Arizona Kid" Baxter is said to excel even his many fine performances in the past, notable among which were leading roles in "Such Men Are Dangerous," "Romance of the Rio Grande," "In Old Arizona" and other masterpieces of the audible screen.

"The Arizona Kid" reveals the genuine spirit of the old west. Perhaps the fact that all its scenes, including the interiors, were made right on the actual scene of the story, a little village in southwestern Utah, has much to do with the note of unquestioned realism that prevails throughout the picture. Anyway, this touch of the old west is there, and together with the gorgeous scenic backgrounds and the remarkable work of the cast, makes the picture one of the best and most entertaining screen dramas of the year.

As a badly wanted outlaw, "The Arizona Kid" is being searched for by many, including the sheriff of Rockville, Utah, who does not suspect that Chico Cabrillo, a well-liked resident of the town, is really the "kid" himself. Events follow swiftly when Baxter's guests for a night, strangers from the east, discover who he is. How he escapes by the skin of his teeth with his sweetheart forms the stirring climax of this unusually well-handled epic of the west.

Mona Maris, whom all will remember for her stellar work in "Romance of the Rio Grande," plays the leading feminine role and reveals herself as a dramatic actress of tremendous ability. Carol Lombard, Mrs. Jiminez, Theodore Von Eltz, Arthur Stone, Hank Mann and other well-known players give noteworthy performances in their roles.

Big Time Vodevil Star for Capitol

Frank Masters, one of the top-notch masters of comedy, singing, dancing and band leading in modern vaudeville, comes to Loew's Capitol to headline this week's program of Loew vaudeville. The title of his act is "A Gob in Paris," which has all kinds of possibilities and, in addition to his inimitable self, contains nine men and three women performers—comprising the famous Hal Crocker's band, Bobbie Gorman, the Amido Twins and Don Gauthier.

The vaudeville program will be shown together with Norma Shearer's latest and greatest talking picture, "The Divorcee," which has created nothing short of a genuine box office sensation wherever shown to date.

It isn't so often that a comedy juggling act can be classed as headline caliber on a modern vaudeville program. Such an act, however, is that of the "Three Swifts," who are described as "among our best clubmen." On almost any bill except one with Frank Masters and his gang, this trio would easily take top honors.

One of the most astonishing mystery and illustion acts ever created is also billed on the week's program. This is Professor Sierak's "Miracles," which is due to send audiences away gasping with wonder at the seemingly impossible stunts accomplished. It is an act based upon some of the lesser known discoveries of science and demonstrates just how far man has progressed in his constant war to solve the riddles of nature and the universe.

Another clever comedy talking and singing act, with two men and one woman included in the personnel, will complete the bill. This act is described as "The Law, the Flirt and the Girl," and is one of the standard acts which are always in demand. It is presented by Harry Seymour, Arthur Putnam and Arline Melburn.

The situation of the small-time vaudevillian is acute. With so many of the theaters in the land devoted exclusively to the talkies, vaudeville is rapidly disappearing from the American scene. Philadelphia and Dayton, to name two cities, do not shelter a single theater devoted to vaudeville. As a result the vaudevillians have come trekking back to New York in despair. One of the largest independent booking agents who formerly supplied 200 theaters with variety acts has turned his offices into a general employment bureau. He reports that several actors and actresses have swallowed their pride and have accepted employment as salesmen, saleslades, floorwalkers, private detectives, insurance agents, hotel clerks and chauffeurs.

Snap Features Stage Offerings of Week

'Art In Taps' Idea Fox Stage Show

Devotees of the dance will have much to revel in at the Fox theater during the coming week, when Fanchon & Marco's "Art in Taps" idea furnishes the merriment on the stage for 24 big shows. Advance notices claim that this idea boasts more dances and dance talent than has ever been presented on any one stage during any one show, anytime, anywhere.

Just to give you an idea as to how much real entertainment will be in store for Fox patrons when "Art in Taps" takes the stage, run an eye down this list of headline talent:

Earl Knapp, midget song bird, who has been crooning melodies behind footlights for months and months in the biggest theaters in the country; Rodney & Gould, who dance in comedy with a laugh in every step; Al & Hall, who start where others leave off on tap dancing and Eddie Lewis, who strives to better even the superb dancing of Al & Hall. Then there's Red Donohue and Pal, a two man comedy act with a mule—and if you don't laugh at them, you can't laugh. They are followed by Browne and Willa, who present another of the old favorite type of speciality, a rag picture, in which they are accompanied by a stageful of beautiful raggy-art students. Yes the glorius Sunkist Beauties! Johnny Plank, a youthful whistler, who can make more music with a pair of puckered lips than lots of jazz bands can with a full quota of instruments.

In the finale of "Art in Taps," everyone in the show tap-dances in a modern rhythm that will never be forgotten. They tap-dance upstairs, downstairs, sideways, backwards, across and all over the stage. This is one of the speediest, noisiest and yet most entertaining finales yet produced by Fanchon & Marco.

Director Leide, of the Fox grand orchestra will give opera-minded patrons something to write home about in the presentation of a symphonic overture that will be a medley of airs from "Faust" and which will embrace these popular numbers: "The Fair," "Soldiers' Chorus," "Calf of Gold," "Ballet," "Flower Song," "Love Duet" and the famous finale from "Faust." Truly a musical treat. Don and his stage band will offer a novel number that will enliven the stage presentation.

and Frederic March will be featured in "Marriage Playground." Based on the novel "The Children," this production concerns the revolt of the younger generation against the divorce-crazed thrill-thirsty behavior of their elders. Saturday, Rin-Tin-Tin, wonder dog of the screen, will be starred in "The Land of the Silver Fox."

Cooper Has Hit Role in "Texan," Georgia Talkie

Popular Star at Best in O. Henry Story of Romantic Old West.

Gary Cooper, star of "The Virginian," returns to the screen Monday in "The Texan," another rollicking and virile story of real he-hen, which is doubly important due to the fact that the story is by the famous O. Henry and is regarded as one of his best.

"The Texan" plays at Keith's Georgia theater in conjunction with a bill of Radio-Keith-Orpheum vaudeville headlined by Ruiz and Bonita, famous South American dancers.

In "The Texan," which is from O. Henry's "The Double-Dyed Deceiver," Cooper plays the role of the Llano Kid, a young hardy desperado on whose head a hundred prices have been set. Five aces and blazing guns over a card table send him fleeing the United States after he has killed a crooked gamester.

He falls in with a shyster lawyer who represents a wealthy South American widow who has offered $1,000 reward for the return of her son, who fled to American when he was a lad. The two plot to have Cooper impersonate the missing son, so the lawyer can claim the reward, and the two eventually mulct the old lady out of her fortune.

Cooper goes to the South American village and is received like a prince. Love, in the person of Fay Wray, enters his life, and slowly, but surely, Cooper falls in love both with the mother and the girl and resolves not to go through with his plot.

Threatened with exposure of his true identity if he fails to carry out the nefarious scheme, he makes a choice which brings one of the famous novel twists for which all O. Henry stories are noted.

Ruiz and Bonita will be supported on the new bill by Marie Hartman and Billie Hibbitt and two other R.-K.-O. acts.

The biggest asset to the dealers of questionable literature is John Sumner, of the Anti-Vice Society. The instant he succeeds in barring a book from public circulation it is immediately sought by persons interested in erotica. The few remaining copies are quickly gathered up by a small group which follows Sumner's actions zealously. These volumes are then booklegged surreptitiously and command fancy figures. One book which normally sold for $2, with no buyers, now fetches $200, thanks to the book censors.

Wednesday brings Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and beautiful Loretta Young in "Fast Life," a thrilling story of modern youth and love, with a plot that is interesting as well as unusual.

Will Rogers, the world's greatest comedian, in his first talking picture, "They Had To See Paris," is the attraction for Thursday and Friday. You will laugh as you've never laughed before when you see Will Rogers as the small town westerner making whoopee in the wild night clubs of gay Paree.

EDITED by RALPH T. JONES

Famed Dance Act Comes to Georgia

There are few dancing acts appearing in any form of stage entertainment today that can be spoken of in the same breath with Ruiz and Bonita, famous team of South American terpsichorean artists who headline the RKO vaudeville program announced for Keith's Georgia this week. This team, aided by their own string orchestra, offer a stage presentation which, according to all advance reports, breathes the very spirit of Latin American gayety and infuses every audience with the verve and dash which characterizes it.

The vaudeville program will be given with "The Texan," sensational all-talking outdoor picture of the old southwest, with Gary Cooper in the title role and Fay Wray playing the lovely girl with whom he falls in love. It is a picture version of one of the best short stories O. Henry ever wrote, "A Double Dyed Deceiver," and retains all the charm and unexpectedness of plot for which the master of the American short story was famous.

In addition to Ruiz and Bonita, the vaudeville program contains the name of Marie Hartman, one of the cleverest singers and comediennes of the day. Miss Hartman, assisted by Billy Hibbitt, will present her latest innovation, an act entitled "Before and After."

Ed and Tom Hickey, described as "two elegant gentlemen," will add action and speed to the program while "The Highland Collies," offer an act of surpassing beauty, alike delightful for children and older people.

In addition to the feature talking picture and the splendid vaudeville program, the Georgia will offer several short subjects, news reels and short comedy of the standard this theater has maintained until it has acquired an enviable reputation for this style of entertainment among all Atlanta entertainment seekers.

What Is Claudette Colbert Saying? Here's Another Contest for You All!

This department comes to bat with another contest for Atlanta's movie fans this week. The last one proved so successful that the editor decided to launch another without delay.

This week a pair of guest tickets to Keith's Georgia, for the week of May 19, when "Young Man of Manhattan" will be the talking feature, is the prize. A scene from the picture is shown above.

Incidentally, you may recall that "Young Man of Manhattan" was one of the cleverest serials run by the Saturday Evening Post last year. On the audible screen it makes an even better thriller. Presented by a magnificent cast, it ought to pack 'em in at the Georgia all week. To mention only three of the star performers, there are Claudette Colbert, Norman Foster and Charles Ruggles.

But to get to the contest.

The idea is, what is Claudette saying while the boy friend holds the drink in suspense? To the person who can supply the best, most suitable and wittiest remark for Claudette—in not more than 25 words—goes the pair of tickets. Remember, you can say anything, anyhow—only it must be appropriate to the picture. And no one knows what kind of liquid is in the glass—though no one can forbid you from guessing.

Send in your entries to Ralph T. Jones, theater editor, The Constitution. They must be in this office not later than Friday, May 16, or postmarked before midnight, May 15.

In the Washington Heights section, which is about a half-hour ride from Times Square, an amusement circuit opened a de luxe theater seating 4,000 people. The movie magnates proceeded upon the assumption that they would easily devour the two or three neighboring competitors at a single gulp. While competition was stifled, a dangerous and unforeseen enemy loomed up in the person of the Rev. Christian F. Reisner, minister of the Chelsea church, which is directly opposite the new theater. Dr. Reisner accepted the challenge of the theater interests and has managed to beat them at their own game. Each Sunday he fills his church to capacity and presents as a feature surprise, at no admission, some of the most noted stage folks. Al Jolson, Eddie Cantor, Chic Sale, Lillian Gish, Fred Stone, and even Jackie Coogan, have appeared as curtain raisers to the newest talking pictures, which follow.

Two Great Hits Mark Birthday Bill at Cameo

"Dangerous Paradise" and "Hell Harbor," two pictures of outstanding entertainment value, have been selected to celebrate Anniversary Week, which stars Monday at the Cameo theater. The week of May 12 marks the fifth year of this theater's now famous policy—"Brings the big ones back." Under their booking arrangements the biggest talking pictures that Paramount, First National-Vitaphone, Radio Pictures and United Artsits make are brought direct to the Cameo after their showing at the big first-run theaters. Gratified with the continued good patronage of its friends, the Cameo promises more years of quality programs and moderate prices. Other attractions to show very soon are "The Vagabond King," "Benson Murder Case," "Putting On the Ritz," "Son of the Gods," "Only the Brave," "Honey," "Sarah and Son," "Young Eagles," and "Paramount on Parade."

In "Dangerous Paradise," the Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday feature, Nancy Carrol is seen as a girl musician, playing in a South sea island orchestra. Menaced by her employer she seeks safety on a nearby island where Richard Arlen, a recluse, lives alone. Adventure follows adventure as Nancy falls deeply in love with the scornful Arlen. How her daring sacrifice finally awakens a reciprocal love in him makes a moving episode, a delightful ending to a splendid picture.

"Hell Harbor," the week-end feature, presents Lupe Velez in the part of a high-spirited young modern, a descendant of the great pirate chief, Sir Henry Morgan. Around this theme is developed a story rich in incident, local color and tense drama. "Hell Harbor," which was filmed entirely in Tampa, is said to have one of the most beautiful backgrounds ever used for a picture. Jean Hersholt, John Holland and Gibson Gowland are in the cast in addition to Miss Velez.

Stanwyck Star In New Talkie At Metropolitan

Barbara Stanwyck, hailed as the new sensational talking picture star as the result of her great work in her second all-talking production, "Ladies of Leisure," which played in Atlanta last week, is a product of the speaking stage, lately an initiate in pictures, but who, seemingly, has come to stay, if the work that caused such wonderful praise in "Ladies of Leisure" is the standard by which she shall be judged.

This new star is to be seen again in Atlanta, at the Metropolitan this week, in "Mexicali Rose," in which the star has another great role and one which, needless to say, she plays to perfection.

"Mexicali Rose" is the story of a girl in whose breast beats a heart that craves always something new, whether that be fun, clothes or love; whose life is a checkered mass of new and different adventures until it brings us to where the story opens, in a palace of pleasure devoted to wine and women and cards or dice. She is loved by the owner of the place who casts her aside when she plays with the affections of another. She seeks revenge as a new amusement and gets it in the way only a very beautiful woman could. She uses her beauty, wit and charm to efface what she thought was a blight to her record for a life of success.

"Rio Rita" Shows At Alamo Two For Two Days

As Florence Ziegfeld has "glorified" the American girl, so Radio Pictures glorifies Ziegfeld in its superb spectacle of music, beauty and drama coming to the Alama No. 2 Monday and Tuesday only.

All the rich qualities which drew Broadway crowds for 62 consecutive weeks to the Ziegfeld theater have been retained in the film production and to these have been added mobility and magnitude which the stage, even under the direction of a Ziegfeld, could not hope to attain.

Against the most lavish sets yet seen on the screen is played and sung the magnificent drama of the Mexican borderland by Bebe Daniels, John Boles and a supporting cast of hundreds. Mighty vocal choruses, inspiring dance routines and beauty assemblies show for the first time the endless possibilities of the speaking screen.

The whole of the second part of the production is filmed in technicolor aboard a sumptuously furnished galleon anchored in the Rio Grande.

This is the age of rackets. The most insidious one is that of the landlords of the medium-priced apartments. For example, an owner will consent to offer a month or six weeks' concession in rent to a prospective tenant, providing a year's lease is signed for the apartment. By so doing the landlord can offer an imposing list of monthly rentals to a would-be purchaser which implies that the aggregate income is greater than what will actually be received. This is a more attractive plan in disposing of a building than a straight rental, with no concessions.

The swanky apartment house cliff dwellers are beginning to accumulate the choicest collection of prohibition memorabilia, in the form of neatly engraved announcements from bootleggers openly soliciting trade. These announcements not only bear the actual names of the agents, but contain the price lists of every known alcoholic drink that was ever fermented.

Opportunity's Second Knocks

Two more of the outstanding successes of recent months are brought back to Atlanta by popular second-run houses. At the left, Gary Cooper and Mary Brian are shown in a scene from "Only the Brave," which will be at the Cameo Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, while at the right, Armida, clever Mexican actress, is shown with the donkey in "General Crack," John Barrymore's great success, which will be at Loew's Grand, also for the first half.

THE NEW YORK THEATER

BY PERCY HAMMOND

After the first act of "Lost Sheep" on Monday night, Mr. George Creel, the eminent publicist, expressed an amiable curiosity as to how far the Broadway drama will dare to go in its exposition of the Facts of Life. He had just been witness to a gay betrayal of some of sex's darker secrets, voiced intrepidly by a troupe of gentle men and women in the era's most redoubtable play. By startling candor and bold innuendo the author and actors had made public a situation, amusing in its way, and as remarkable for its valor as for its comedy. A Methodist clergyman, his wife and three pretty daughters were discovered to be ignorantly inhabiting an English bungalow that previously had been a place of ill-repute. To this righteous household, fragrant with chastity and decorum, had come the former habitues of the sink, intent upon violations of the moral code. They had treated the parson's daughters as women of the town and the girls, unaware that such things existed, had innocently furthered the error by conversation, which, though they meant it to be decent, became in its misinterpretation, indelicate if not lewd.

* * *

How far, Mr. Creel pondered with the calm indifference of a casual bystander, how far will the art of amusement venture in its passion to make all things plain? Well, George, the theater, as you know, is the gamest of the rackets. It will do anything that it believes it can get away with in its ambition to entertain and educate. How many drama-lovers know of such comic evils as are elucidated in "Lost Sheep?" Very few, indeed, and I daresay that the learning it imparts to them is wholesome. Where knowledge is bliss, 'tis folly to be ignorant. One feels, nevertheless, that "Lost Sheep" would display more fortitude were it to be performed in other circumstances. Mayor Walker is absent, bicycling in Bermuda; Mr. Whalen, the police commissioner, is in the throes of resignation, and the state's attorneys, Messrs. Crain and Tuttle, are busy investigating more serious deviations from rectitude. Mr. Summer, of the Vice League, is but a bookworm, so engrossed with mischiefs in the libraries that he has no time to discipline the stage. I hope that when Mr. Walker resumes his Balkan throne he will not arrest "Lost Sheep." Its performance may disturb him a little, because three of its girl players are so bred in the deep purple that their function in "Lost Sheep" seems contaminating. The play is to be regarded as an advance against censorship. It is wanton and ruttish, but never, as the extravaganzas often are, filthy and obscene. If I had a daughter, Mr. Creel, I should shift my responsibilities as a parent to the broad shoulders of dramas like "Lost Sheep." I should leave it to them to tell her and her boy friend at the matinees that, as the 16-year-old Miss Rhoda Wampus blithely says in "Lost Sheep," there is something more in sex than kissing.

* * *

The life of a drama critic, resembling that of Gilbert's policeman, is not a happy one. Callous to the darts and approbriums of theatergoers who differ from him, he is really miserable when he knows that he should enjoy a play or player, though he cannot. Some of the most dependable reviewers in New York sing hallelujahs upon their Remington's about clowns in musical comedy whose exertions to me are merely laborious. To prove how woeful my lot is as a professional playgoer, I confess that I never have got a laugh out of such celebrated laughmakers as Bert Lahr, of Mr. White's "Flying High," and Will Mahoney, of Mr. Carroll's "Sketch Book."

* * *

They are both Big Shots in the amusement world, conceded by press, public and pulpit to be irresistible in their appeal to what are known as the risibilities. Yet their antics leave me grave, while all around me I see my betters falling from their chairs in sheer merriment. I tremble with pleasure at Mr. Ed Wynn's thoughtful antics, and Mr. Bert Allen, of "The Little Show," by his effortless, sententious comedy fills me with delight. Groucho Marx always strikes my funny bone, as does his brother, Harpo, the fishworm pantomimist. I can smile, reluctantly, at Willie Howard, and also at the solemn Eugene, as they join together in musical comedy duelloes. When Jolson and Cantor were heroes of the more or less legitimate extravaganzas, I found them humorous, if not witty and always ludicrous in their magnetic fashion. Jack Donahue's dancing and hick impersonations cause flutters upon my caligraph, and though I have never seen him, friendly acquaintances tell me that William Gaxton is a peer. It is my misfortune that entertainers such as Mr. Mahoney and Mr. Lahr do not amuse me, and I apologize to them for their failure to do so.

* * *

Among other petitioners for playgoing advice this week is a member of the Fort Orange Club, of Albany, N. Y. He asks me to direct him in the paths he should go when he comes to the capital in search of theatrical relaxation. Though flattered by faith in me as a signpost to recreation, I feel incompetent to give inquirers counsel. They might differ from my opinions of "The Last Mile," "The Green Pastures," "The International Review," "Subway Express" and "Uncle Vanya." I shall refer him and others, therefor, to the plays that are recommended by the public—"hits" of the town. These are to be discovered in the ticket broker's booths. If it's a popular show you will have to pay a premium; if it is not, you won't. I suggest "The Green Pastures" to any one with a pathetic sense of humor; "Topaze" as a jaunty burlesque of business honor, and Mr. White's "Flying High" as a spectacle of Broadway's prettiest girls and, alas, of Broadway's indifference to good taste.

An old belief was that ringing of church bells would dispell a threatening storm.

"White Cargo" Starts Rialto Run at Midnight

Sensational Drama, Made From Stage Play, at Downtown Theater.

"White Cargo," the all-talking picture taken from the famous play of the same name by Leon Gordon, which comes to the Rialto theater, commencing Sunday night, May 11, omits none of the vivid realism nor colorful romance of the stage play, one of the most tremendous dramas in the annals of the American theater. The producers of the picture have taken utmost care to keep the dialogue and story intact and selected a cast of exceptional talents to play the well known characters.

"White Cargo," as those who saw the play will remember, is the gripping story of a group of white men in the tropics striving to keep their souls clean amidst all kinds of temptations. The unusual settings, the naturalness of the characters, the rapid development of the story and the attractiveness of the primitive siren, Tondeleyo, make it one of the most fascinating productions ever brought to the talking screen.

The scene of this vivid drama is a rubber plantation on what is known as the Gold Coast of Africa, a section that is mostly swampland. The terrific heat, together with the moisture from the swamp, gives a continuous dampness which decays and rots everything. The climate saps the vitality of the white man, it is useless to fight it; it is best to accept. Many feel that they should fight and in this way eventually lose their ideals, as does young Alan Langford who goes out fresh from England to the Gold Coast. It is his struggle and final breakdown that forms the basis of the story.

"White Cargo" as a talking picture made as much of a stir on Broadway as did the play when Earl Carroll first presented it. The picture played for many weeks at the George M. Cohan theater on Broadway to crowded houses night after night at an admission price of $2.

There is a Yiddish stock theater down on the teeming East Side which is heavily patronized by the local residents. The only justifiable criticism of the performances is due to the cantankerous orchestra conductor, who continually misses all the cues at the moments when the big, handsome star and his leading lady indulge in some of the most romantic lovemaking ever seen upon a stage. Upon inquiry we learned that the leading lady is married to the orchestra leader. The latter cannot be fired, for he has a 50 per cent financial interest in the theater; the star cannot be discharged because he is tremendously popular with the patrons, and the lady is bound to the orchestra leader by marriage ties.

Closing Programs of Music Week To Be Given Throughout City Today

Atlanta artists, the schools, churches, newspapers and the public have co-operated with the woman's division of the Chamber of Commerce in making National Music Week for 1930 a most outstanding success. Every avenue for enlisting public interest was entered and the civic clubs, the local bulletins issued by organizations as well as the radio announcements, hotel managers and the leaders in women's clubs all united to fulfill the 1930 slogan of the National Music Week committee—"Make music your friend from youth to age."

The schools have been particularly active in putting on specially arranged musical programs and for the first time the county schools, under the musical direction of Professor W. G. Griffith, co-operating with Mrs. Mary Griffith Dobbs, have given individual concerts for each day of the week. The local talent found in each school was utilized in this work which was further emphasized by a series of talks given the pupils by Mrs. Walter Bedard, president of the Atlanta Music Club.

National Music Week for 1930 comes to a close with the final concert at Wesley Memorial church Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Dr. Charles A. Sheldon will direct the program and George Rogers, Mrs. Mary Griffith Dobbs and Miss Margaret Battle are the contributing artists.

The Agnes Scott Glee Club of Agnes Scott College will contribute to the occasion which promises to be a notable one in Atlanta's musical history.

The following program will be rendered: Organ, "Piece Heroique" Cesar Franck, Dr. Sheldon; address, "Value of National Music Week," Horace Russell, president Atlanta Chamber of Commerce; solo, "Hallelujah," Mozart, Miss Battle; harp, selected, Mrs. Dobbs; organ, "Reve Angelique," Rubinstein, Dr. Sheldon; group of songs, "Sleep, Holy Babe," Candlyn; "Legende," Tschaikowsky; "Lift Thine Eyes" (from "Elijah"), Mendelssohn, Agnes Scott Glee Club, Gussie O'Neal Johnson, director; Professor C. W. Dieckman at the piano; solo, "Eri Tu," Verdi, Mr. Rogers; organ, "Prelude and Toccata," Berwald, Dr. Sheldon.

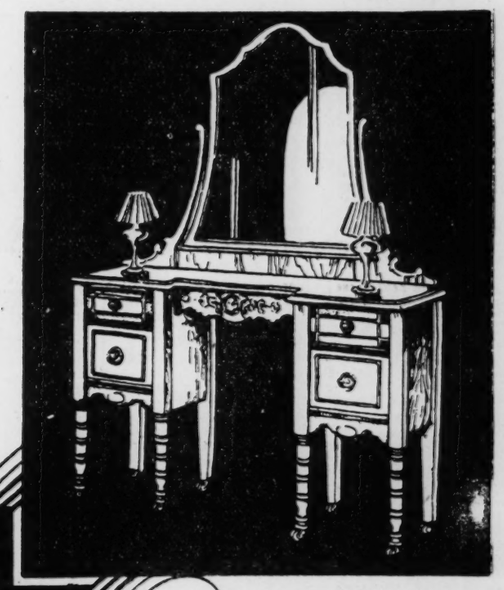

Miss Regina Corrigan is president of the woman's division of the Chamber of Commerce; Mrs. Lillian A. Dove was chairman of National Music Week and Mrs. Nellie Nix Edwards was chairman of programs while an able committee directed the details of the week.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

VOL. LXII., No. 330. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 11, 1930.

Revered of All Careers Paid Homage

Mother's Day—the one day in the year set aside to pay homage to motherhood, the most revered of all careers. No matter how hardened to sentiment people may become, there is always a deep feeling of love expressed in the tribute paid motherhood, on the second Sunday in May, and many there are who will pause to worship at her shrine today. The exquisite crimson rose, designated as the symbol of mothers' sacred presence on earth, rises to important heights today in proclaiming this, the greatest of all blessings. The fragrance and purity of the white rose will be worn in loving memory of the sainted parent who has "crossed the bar."

The blessed imprint of a mother's teachings and loving sacrifice are with us all our days, and no tribute can truly express the greatness of that vast meaning of the word "mother." Today her children throughout the land shall "rise and call her blessed."

COMES THE DAWN OF THE WHITE SEASON

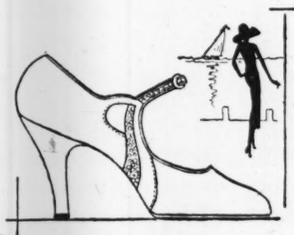

—When all Footpaths Lead to Nisleys

Where abundant varieties of the season's most favored patterns are artistically developed into beautiful "dreams" of white shoe loveliness by craftsmen who know only the right way to make shoes.

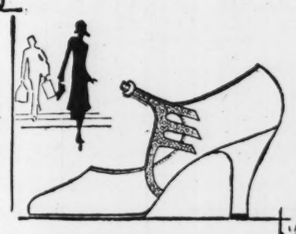

Where one expects to find her exact style, size and width in an atmosphere of refinement and courtesy at a price that is a revelation—and is never disappointed. Only Nisley stores sell Nisley shoes.

"DAWNHAVEN"
No more striking two-strap pattern in white was ever created than Nisley's Dawnhaven. Daintily trimmed in white lizard calf and flaunting a "boxy" Cuban heel.

"ROMANCE"
The embodiment of all that is new in regent pumps including the square throat, modified toe and high Paris heel. Beautiful in any color but simply marvelous in white.

"WHITEHALL"
A high-waisted walking oxford in white, with the underlay and tongue in white lizard calf and the new "boxy" Cuban heel. A masterpiece in tailored smartness.

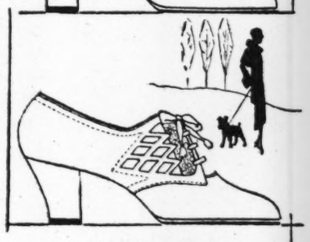

"RIVIERA"
White smartness dramatically expressed in a new single-strap, high heel slipper with just enough white lizard calf in the trimming to make it different and desirable.

Sizes 2½ to 9
Widths AAAA to D
Always in Stock

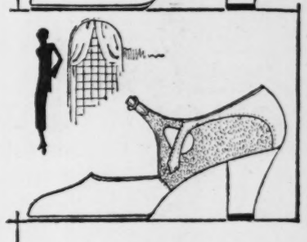

"PEEKSKILL"
An adorable new pattern in white one straps with a medium Paris heel and a liberal and novel trimming of white lizard calf to give it zest and character.

"GLENBROOK"
An open oxford in white featuring a trim front panel of white lizard calf. Has the Cuban heel and the fine fit that always characterizes a high waisted oxford.

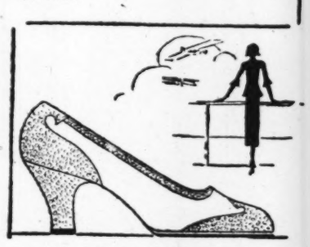

IT is only logical to assume that the largest group of retail shoe stores in the world, under one management, catering exclusively to women, know best what women desire most in footwear and with their own factories can create it to sell for less in their own stores, than this whole procedure could be accomplished under methods that require several profits instead of merely one.

"TOWN CLUB"
A semi-tailored white one strap with the large and clever underlay (as well as the strap) in white lizard calf. The heel is Cuban + the toe modified.

All Styles $5 One Price

Sheer White Stockings of Fresh New Silk
$1.15 $1.35 $1.65

"BOKARA"
An unusual pattern in white lizard calf featuring the underlay in plain white. The heel is the latest concept in the "Baby Louis" family and is covered with white lizard calf.

Lovely Georgia Girl Is Personal Friend And Protege of Famed Lucrezia Bori

Lucrezia Bori, famed soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, is shown here with Miss Betty Myers, right, in whom she is personally interested and whom she has advised to study voice culture. Bori and Miss Myers have been friends for years, during which time they have developed a great mutual love. Photograph by Bascom Biggers.

BY TREVA H. SHAFTO

For nine years Miss Betty Myers, of Savannah, and granddaughter of Mrs. Morris Rich, of Atlanta, has literally hung breathlessly on every note the glorious Lucrezia Bori, incomparable soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, has uttered. She has listened in wide-eyed wonder to the various operatic roles sung by Bori and attended as many of her concerts as possible. She even manipulates those exasperating gadgets on the radio when it is announced that Bori's exquisite voice is to be broadcast across the continent, for she is unwilling to miss a single opportunity to hear her adored, and adoring, ideal. This year Betty came up especially to see Miss Bori in her favorite role, Mimi, in "La Boheme."

"I stayed backstage where I always stay," said Betty, "and I cried so when Mimi died. But Bori is so comforting . . . not at all as one would imagine a great person to be . . . she told me (in Italian, for we never converse in English) not to cry for she only plays."

Always Loved Bori.

Since a wee child, for Betty is barely in her teens now, she has known and loved Bori. Her grandmother, Mrs. Rich, whom she often visits, has for many years lived at the Georgian Terrace, where Bori always stops during the opera season. Betty is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Howell Myers, of Savannah, her mother being formerly Miss Valerie Rich, born and reared in Atlanta and the daughter of Mrs. Morris Rich and the late M. Rich, founder of the Rich company.

Miss Myers, or "Bettina" as Bori calls her, has indeed hitched her wagon to a star and some day she hopes to make Bori as proud of her as she is of Bori. Betty has enrolled at Sarah Lawrence college in Bronxville, N. Y., to major in voice, which Bori has urged her to study.

"And," she gaily adds, "I shall be near Bori, too."

Betty's Poetry.

This vitally interested and interesting girl has a naturally lovely voice and she plays the piano "enough for accompaniment," she modestly admits. Her two great loves, however, are: first, Bori, and second, verses. The following verse was writen after Bori's last radio concert and is "too new to be named, being less than a week old," according to Betty. Even those, unfamiliar with verses, cannot fail to feel the rhythm and depth of emotional sensibilities portrayed:

I heard the wind singing through tree tops
In a violet forest when it was almost sunset,
I heard a wave that rose with a mighty song
And broke itself against the flank of a sinking ship.
I heard the moaning thunder when the clouds
Were wounded by arrow shafts of blinding lightning.
And all had a music, a powerful thrilling rhythm
That made me tremble.

Tonight I heard more music:
It was your voice coming across the continent,
It made me think of almost sunset woods and tree tops,
Of a mountain billow on a beaten ship,
And an unchained storm.
And something more delicate even than the blossoming of June flowers,
Which none can ever hear.
It made me tremble.

It made me frightened in my deep delight,
Because you are greater than the world's three voices,
For you sing with tones that can bring their tunes
And yet another tune which they cannot sing.

It is almost unbelievable that such verses come from the pen of a schoolgirl. Miss Myers graduated from the Pape school in Savannah and attended Smith college in Northampton, Mass., for three months this semester until she was forced to return home on account of a broken ankle. While at Smith she had all of the students in Cushing house, her dormitory, in a high pitch of enthusiam about Bori. Even now the teachers and pupils send her pictures and clippings of Bori's doings.

Lovely Personality.

When you see Betty it isn't at all difficult to understand why she made the whole school feel personally acquainted with her friend par excellence. She is rather tall, a medium brunette with eyes of greenish gray that flash and sparkle with excitement and joie de vivre. Her vibrant personality is infectious and one immediately wants to know and love Bori, too. When she speaks, flashes of color come and go and her lovely eyes accentuate every point in the story she so artlessly recounts.

In addition to being a brilliant and cultured scholar, Betty is able to converse in all the romance languages. Her correspondence and conversation with Bori is carried on in one of these languages. Recently she found an old copy of "La Naranjera," a Spanish song composed in the eighteenth century which cannot be purchased now, and thinking that Bori would be divine in the song, she laboriously copied it and presented it to Bori. She also made for Bori a sachet, most certainly a labor of love, for she vehemently stated that she detests sewing.

When she becomes discouraged Betty says that thoughts of Bori and her encouragement drive her on to higher things. Some day she hopes to achieve two things: To be able to bring happiness to others as Bori does, and write verses, as these go hand in hand for Betty, and to write a biography of Bori. With these aims, the years ahead of Betty will mean hard work—but what is that when one has inspiration and stimulation from one so great as Bori?

W.C.T.U. Expresses Appreciation Of Motherhood at National Meet

By Frances Meadors Burghard, of Macon, Editor.

Of all the titles bestowed upon the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, whether in love or in disfavor, the one it appreciates most and which best describes it, is "Organized Mother-Love."

The W. C. T. U. has always glorified the vocation of motherhood above all others, for the only queen that shall survive is the mother on her rocking-chair throne. Frances E. Willard, founder of the World W. C. T. U., said: "Organized motherhood is a force, the strongest, the most deeply rooted, the most steadily enduring, that this planet knows." And again she said: "Were I asked to define in a sentence the thought and purpose of the W. C. T. U., I would reply: 'It is to make the whole world homelike.'" The W. C. T. U. believes with one who said: "If motherhood were a trade for which all mothers should be paid, their value, if paid in love, would bankrupt heaven; in gold, would bankrupt earth."

Honor Motherhood.

Motherhood indicates home and child. The W. C. T. U. members honor their own mothers today. They are a band of Christian women organized for the protection of the home, and their prayer for themselves and other mother-hearted women is:

Lord, give to the mothers of the world
More love to do their part.
The children made by birth their own,
But every childish heart.
Wake in their souls true motherhood,
Which aims at universal good.

All over the land this month the W. C. T. U. is holding child welfare and mothers' meetings, carrying on its program of education and work, that to every child belongs the right to be well born, to an education, to protection from child labor, to be morally safeguarded and to be spiritually trained. Through this educational program the organization emphasizes that alcohol is a racial poison, and that the welfare of the child is a basic reason for totally abstaining parents; that alcohol is a degrading and destroying factor in home and community life, and that the welfare of the child demands freedom from the sale and use of intoxicating beverages which national prohibition makes possible.

W. C. T. U. at Chautauqua.

The W. C. T. U. owns its own home at Chautauqua, N. Y., where it accommodates a number of guests each season. The chautauqua program for 1930 bids fair to maintain its record of attractive and helpful features. The outstanding event of the season is always National W. C. T. U. Day, which this year falls on July 21. The address given in the amphitheater is to be by Mrs. Gordon Wright, president of the Dominion of Canada W. C. T. U., who is well known from her frequent visits to the United States. In connection with the day will be the dedication of a fountain in honor of Miss Anna Adams Gordon, president of the World's W. C. T. U. July 21 has been chosen because it is Miss Gordon's birthday.

The schedule of leaders for the morning conferences in Frances Willard house, owned by the W. C. T. U., has been completed. Two national W. C. T. U. officers appear upon it, Mrs. Margaret C. Munns, Evanston, Ill., treasurer, and Mrs. Sara H. Hoge, Lincoln, Va., recording secretary. Mrs. Elizabeth A. Perkins, Ann Arbor, Mich., former director of the W. C. T. U. child welfare department, now a member of President Hoover's planning committee of the White House conference on child health and protection; Mrs. James M. Doran, Washington, D. C., director of non-alcoholic fruit products, wife of the federal administration of prohibition; Miss Winona R. Jewell, Evanston, Ill., general secretary of the young peoples' branch of the W. C. T. U., and Mrs. Mary H. Ream, Kansas City, Mo., director of the department of social morality, make up this galaxy of W. C. T. U. leaders. Miss Mary B. Ervin, Xenia, Ohio, one of the field secretaries, will be hostess during th eseason. A visit to Chautauqua will be both pleasant and profitable.

Temperance Sunday.

State director of the Sunday school department in Georgia, Mrs. Dudley Sheppard, of Elberton, calls attention to the next temperance Sunday, on May 18, subject, "Jesus Teaching in the Temple." Helps may be secured from her or the state W. C. T. U. headquarters, 1436 Highland avenue, N. E., Atlanta. This department of W. C. T. U. endeavor aims fundamentally to reach the conscience of youth by instruction in the principles of total abstinence and prohibition. Mrs. Sheppard suggests the use of temperance posters and the free distribution of W. C. T. U. leaflets, "silent teachers" in Sunday schools, as well as a program.

On July 27 comes another temperance Sunday, subject, "Deborah, a Leader in National Emergency." A patriotic program is suggested for use in all Sunday schools, with salutes to Old Glory and the Christian flag; also "I pledge allegiance to my flag and to my Savior, for whose kingdom it stands, one brotherhood, uniting all mankind in service and love." She urges W. C. T. U. members to co-operate with Sunday school superintendents in the observance of temperance Sundays, and asks them to see that temperance teaching is a part of the curriculum of daily vacation Bible schools.

Brief News.

Fifty-sixth convention of the National W. C. T. U. will be held in Houston, Texas, November 12-20, 1930. A fine program and attractive sight-seeing trips are being planned.

Mrs. Ida B. Smith, Des Moines, Iowa, national W. C. T. U. vice president, who is now on a visit to the Holy Land, won three women for the W. C. T. U. on the steamer going from New York to Mediterranean ports. She could not find her box of white ribbon bows, so stopped in Algiers to replenish her stock. "French, Arabian and English language; francs, centimes and meters were somewhat confusing, all at once," she writes, "but fortunately a woman came along who knew a little of all these tongues and I was able to get my white ribbon for the members of our party."

Miss Agnes E. Slack, of England, one of the world W. C. T. U. secretaries, has been organizing the W. C. T. U. in Greece and Turkey. She addressed many temperance meetings. The Turkish Temperance Society, the Green Crescent, has decided to organize a great Temperance Day on the 15. Members of the society will meet on board a boat for a propaganda trip along the coast of the sea of Marmora and to Princes' island. The same day the Stamboul papers will publish articles against alcoholism. In the cinemas temperance maxims will be thrown on the screen, and in the evening luminous inscriptions on the minarets of the mosques will denounce the evils wrought by alcohol.

Mrs. Frances Willard Wang Liu, educated in this country, president of W. C. T. U. of China, reports of the growing interest in the work there. She recently addressed a company of 1,000 women and girls in Soochow, many of them leaders, and organized a W. C. T. U. there. Dr. C. T. Wang, minister of foreign affairs of China, gave her assurance that help would be given to send a white ribbon delegates from China to the World's W. C. T. U. convention in Toronto, Canada.

On pain of dismissal from the service, army officers who will accompany the Gold Star Mothers' and War Widows' pilgrimage to France are prohibited from drinking any liquor of any sort abroad.

President Masaryk, of Czecho-Slovakia, has been a total abstainer for some years. He said in an address in Vienna, "I conclude with the avowal that the arguments advanced in favor of abstinence have completely convinced me that a life without alcohol guarantees a higher conception of life and consequently a happier, purer and nobler existence."

New Union at Ashburn.

Mrs. Marvin Williams, Barnesville, state W. C. T. U. president, organized a W. C. T. U. of 50 members at Ashburn Thursday. Officers are: President, Mrs. D. H. Rose; vice president at large, Mrs. J. W. Raines; vice presidents from Ashburn churches: Methodist, Mrs. J. B. Boyd; Baptist, Mrs. J. S. Johnson; from Sycamore churches: Methodist, Mrs. George Warren; Baptist, Mrs. L. W. Green; vice president from Amboy, Mrs. J. B. Pate; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Ida Jackson; recording secretary, Mrs. E. A. Mann; treasurer, Mrs. Charlie Fountain.

Ministers of all the churches were present and gave aid in the organizing. A luncheon was served at 1 o'clock. Macon members accompanying Mrs. Williams were: Mrs. August Burghard, state W. C. T. U. editor; Mrs. Ida C. Nottingham, president Bibb County W. C. T. U.; Mrs. Charles Hudson, Mrs. C. H. Ruff and Miss Nannette Ruff.

Mrs. Harris Attends Memorial Week Exercises at Chapters

By Ada Ramp Walden, Editor.

Memorial week was an extremely busy one for the division president, Mrs. J. J. Harris. There were invitations from chapters from various portions of the state that she be with them on that day, or during the week, but she could only respond to those that came first.

Thursday she was the honored guest of the Mary Brantley chapter, in Dawson, where a tea was given in her honor, those receiving being Miss Minnie Bridges, president of the chapter, the remaining officers, and the heads of the patriotic organizations of Dawson. In the afternoon, Mrs. J. M. Rauch was hostess at a theater party, and Mrs. Wiley Baldwin was hostess at dinner, honoring Mrs. Harris.

Friday afternoon she participated in the memorial exercises and Saturday, was guest of a Dougherty county chapter, in Albany.

Fort Tyler chapter, of West Point, was entertained at its last meeting by Mrs. Hugh McCulloh, Mrs. S. H. Fuller, chairman of programs. Interesting sketches of the lives of Alfred Colquitt and T. R. R. Cobb were read, as was the "Origin of Memorial Day." The memorial exercises were held Friday, April 25, under the auspices of the chapter and the Ladies' Memorial Association, the entire program being carried out by the high school students. They marched in a body to the Confederate cemetery where the exercises were held, and where lie the remains of 80 unknown soldiers. The veterans were entertained with luncheon at the Charles hotel, as guests of the Rotary Club.

Only three Confederate veterans were present at the memorial services held in Albany, under the auspices of the Dougherty County chapter, the memorial services being held Sunday afternoon at the auditorium, when an address was delivered by Dr. W. Raleigh White. Mrs. P. J. Nix, president, presented Mrs. J. J. Harris, division president, who expressed her appreciation to the city of Albany for its invitation to have the U. D. C. as convention guests in October. Mrs. Harris awarded the medals in the essay contest to Louise Casson, Helen Clark, Loulie Donaldson and Thea ArOliver, 704 essays having been written. Another distinguished guest was Mrs. Frank Harrold, of Americus, past president general, who responded to Mrs. Nix's introduction. The veterans, those participating in the program, and the presidents of the local patriotic societies occupied places on the rostrum.

Dawson honored its dead most appropriately Friday, April 25, when hundreds assembled at the school auditorium, for the exercises. Two pages, Elizabeth McLendon and Dorothy Marshall, attired in white and red, escorted the participants and the three veterans present to the rostrum to the strains of martial music, played by Mrs. Arthur Hamilton. Presented by Mayor Wilkinson, Mrs. J. J. Harris delivered an address in which she paid tribute to the loyalty and patriotism that had dominated womanhood in Colonial days and down to the present day. At the conclusion of her address she was presented with an armful of red roses by the Mary Brantley chapter. Lucius Lamar and William Littleton were presented military crosses of service. A dinner was served to the veterans at the Woman's Club, at the conclusion of the exercises.

Most impressive were the exercises held in Valdosta, in honor of the Confederate dead, Rev. H. M. Fugate being speaker. Those taking part marched to the rostrum as Mrs. Lloyd Greer played the processional, and a wreath was later placed in memory of the World War veterans, and one for those of the Spanish-American War. One hundred and eighty-six essays were reported as having been written, and Mrs. R. A. Peeples awarded the high school prize to Miss John Corn; the junior high, to Miss Sarah Martha Pyle. Red roses filled silver baskets on the table at which were seated the veterans and widows, when they were entertained in the Woman's Club building with luncheon.

Hon. John Guerry, of Montezuma, delivered the memorial address at Buena Vista, the exercises held under the auspices of Marion County chapter, Miss Minnie Lowe, president. Four veterans were present, but the ovation given these surviving heroes was as stirring and enthusiastic as if the number had been much greater. Luther Anthony, a veteran of the World War, received a cross of service, and each of the Confederate veterans a sum of money in gold as a tribute from the chapter.

Raines Memorial Chairman

Mrs. John W. Daniel, of Savannah, whose urgent appeal as chairman of L. H. Raines Memorial fund, appeared last Sunday. Mrs. Raines was a charter member of the Savannah chapter, designer of the U. D. C. insignia, first vice president of the division and was for several years custodian of crosses of honor. Mrs. L. M. Bashinski, president general, also makes an appeal for this fund in her letter appearing on this page.

President General Issues Message to Organization

By Elizabeth B. Bashinsky, President General.

We sometimes doubt that members of this organization fully realize all that the magazine, the Confederate Veteran, means to us as an official organ; all that it means as the medium of communication between officers and members; as a source of material for our historical programs; all that it means for the preservation of the history of our southland. If we did, then surely chapters and individual Daughters would be more generous in the number of subscriptions and in their contributions (15 cents per capita) for the reserve fund for its perpetuation. It is true that the report made to the Biloxi convention on our U. D. C. work for the Confederate Veteran in 1929 showed an encouraging increase in subscriptions secured, but there is much room for improvement. It is highly important to us and the cause we represent, that this publication be kept going, and as its support comes from subscriptions, it is necessary that our efforts be largely increased during this year. Every state might set its mark to double the number of subscriptions secured in 1929 and then not meet the needs. Every chapter should subscribe first, for a copy to be used by its historian, for there is much material in each number that could be used effectively in the historical work; then a representative should be appointed to secure individual subscriptions from the members. At least 10 per cent of each chapter membership should be represented on the veteran's list of subscribers, and if such were the case, the life of the publication would be assured. Daughters must take this matter to heart and act upon the suggestion, for unless the Veteran has support it cannot be continued.

Reserve Fund.

The reserve fund which the organization is making up, a fund to be drawn upon in time of need, has not yet met expectations. Do not forget to contribute your 15 cents per capita for that purpose. Another matter to which we wish to call your very special attention, and for which we beg your generous support, is the Mrs. L. H. Raines memorial scholarship loan fund. The United Daughters of the Confederacy at the Biloxi convention last November adopted a resolution to raise an endowment fund of $8,000, the interest from this fund to be a loan for one year to a student doing graduate, vocational work. It is to be known as the Mrs. L. H. Raines Memorial Fund, in recognition of the work done by Mrs. Raines for the United Daughters of the Confederacy in its formative period, and in recognition of her as the designer of the official insignia, as the first first vice president of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, 1894-1895, and custodian of the crosses of honor, 1906-1912. One thousand dollars of this amount will be donated by the Daughters from the treasury, and $7,000 is to be raised by the several divisions, and chapters where there are no divisions.

Mrs. Bernard C. Hunt, chairman of the committee of education, is in general charge of the work of establishing this fund. Mrs. Hunt has assigned to Mrs. T. W. Reed, of Athens, a member of her committee, the work of solicitations of funds with which to establish this memorial to Mrs. Raines.

Booklet Issued.

Mrs. Reed has already prepared and issued a folder setting forth the steps that should be taken to secure contributions and containing a brief statement of the work done in the developing of the United Daughters of the Confederacy by Mrs. Raines.

While contributions from anyone interested in this work will be gladly received, each member of the organization should consider it not only a duty but also a high privilege to contribute to this fund. It has been decided to ask the divisions, and chapters where there are no divisions, each to assume its share of the undertaking on the basis of a contribution of 12 cents per capita. This figure has been arrived at by using the number of taxpaying members of the organization as the basis on computation. A response by each taxpaying member of 1929 with this sum will complete the endowment. Let each division president and each chapter where there are no divisions, secure through the press in their respective sections of the country as much publicity as possible, and manage according to the plans deemed best to campaign for the securing of these contributions.

Each division president has received a letter from Mrs. Reed giving the details of the movement to realize this amount, together with copies of the folder for distribution to the chapters of the division. Mrs. Raines was one of the loveliest of southern women, one of the pioneers in our great organization, who gave her whole heart and mind and spirit to its development. She was greatly interested in helping the poor and deserving, especially those seeking an education. The proposed fund will honor her memory in a most appropriate manner and will also contribute for all time to a most worthy cause. It is essentially a work in keeping with the aims and purpose of the Daughters of the Confederacy and should receive the active and enthusiastic support of all members of the organization.

Jefferson Davis Highway.

Mrs. John L. Woodbury, chairman of the Jefferson Davis highway committee, has issued an illustrated log, picturing many points of interest of the highway which links our national capital with the Pacific coast. Most of all, it illustrates what may be accomplished by earnest, determined effort and co-operation on the part of the central committee and division directors. We would commend to chapters the two treatises on Jefferson Davis by the chairman; Mrs. Woodbury, and vice chairman, Miss Decca Lamar West, for your Jefferson Davis programs in June. While these have been sent gratis to division and chapter presidents, additional copies may be secured from the chairman for 25 cents per copy, a price incommensurate with the merits of this instructive booklet.

Learning through the press that Chief Justice Taft, because of his serious illness, had returned to his home in Washington, we immediately wrote expressing your admiration for him, gratitude for the courtesies and recognition given this organization when, as secretary of war, he issued the order which made it possible to erect in the national cemetery of Arlington our monument to the south's heroic dead, and as president welcomed our convention to Washington in 1912, and deep sympathy for him in his illness. In reply the following letter from his secretary was received:

"My dear Madam President-General: Mrs. Taft has asked me to convey to you and to the United Daughters of the Confederacy an expression of her sincere thanks for the kind message of sympathy you have sent to the chief justice. She greatly appreciates it. She will read your message to the chief justice and knows he will be deeply touched by it. Sincerely yours, Wendell W. Mischler, Secretary to the Chief Justice."

When, a few weeks later, our nation was saddened by the announcement of his death, we wired expressing your sympathy and received the following message in reply:

"Elizabeth B. Bashingsky, President General, United Daughters of the Confederacy, Troy, Ala. Dear Madam: I beg to acknowledge your kind telegram of sympathy and ask that you convey to the United Daughters of the Confederacy my sincere appreciation and gratitude for their expressions of condolence. Very sincerely yours, Helen H. Taft."

Beloved Members.

Each month brings its toll of death to our members. Since our last letter we have been advised of the death in December of Mrs. Mary Cobb Lamar Erwin, originator of the idea of the Cross of Honor. We deeply regret that we were not advised of her going at that time, that we might have given the recognition her long and useful life crowned by patriotic effort so richly merited. The Daughters of the Confederacy shall ever lovingly cherish her memory. Mrs. A. C. M. C. Kimbrough, Greenwood, Miss., who was so recently with us in Biloxi, has crossed over the bars, leaving to us a memory of her beautiful service, her gentle womanliness and great love for the Confederate soldier to whom she gave her heart's affection and tender sympathy. But,

"Death is not the end,
Neath the cold black sod;
'Tis the inn by the road
On our way to God."

The Mother

By Ben Dixon MacNeill

DEFERENTIAL knuckles rapped timidly on the door of the cabin. "What," said the boy when he had been blasphemously commanded to enter, "what did you say the name of the lady was? Her cabin's ready, sir." The master of the Confederate States of America's blocade runner Advance said that he did not know the name of the lady, that he did not give a damn about the name of the lady—and did she expect them to lie there at the dock waiting for her until worms gnawed the bottom out of the Advance and the entire Federal fleet assembled at the Cape Fear bar to shoot the daylights out of what the worms left?

The boy withdrew hurriedly, not knowing the answer to any of these things nor having lesiure for more than fleeting wonder about them. All that he knew about it was that an important looking gentleman who knew the governor or somebody had been aboard during the afternoon to make arrangements for the transportation of a lady through the blockade and that he had been directed to make ready a cabin for her. Then there was another gentleman, a Mr. Hill, who was going to London on some mission for the Confederacy, and a cabin must be made ready for him.

Not without some reason did the master of the Advance abandon himself to truculent meditation upon the deplorable womanliness of women. Even now she was probably powdering her nose or engaged in some kindred ritual common to all women about to embark upon journeys, wholly unmindful of the fact that within three hours she might be blown to kingdom come by a pack of gunboats standing just out of range of the guns at Fort Fisher.

Under the decks of the Advance were 2,000 bales of cotton consigned to the spinners of Manchester and worth a vast lot of money if he could get the ship through the blockade. The night was favorable; there was no moon and fog held low over the water. A smart breeze was blowing to fill the sails of the Advance once she was across the bar and on the course toward Nassau. By now he should be cast off and ready for the turning of the tide to carry him down the river toward the bar . . . already he would have been standing out in mid-channel but for the delay about this woman who had influential friends who knew Governor Vance, of North Carolina.

The slow clop of hoofs and the creaking of ungreased carriage wheels on the pier broke in upon the master's reflections. He strode out, glanced briefly over the rail to make sure that the woman and her companion were arriving and bellowed preliminary orders for casting off. From the pier dim lights reached feebly after the Advance as she slid away into the dark. Paddle-wheels churned the brown river; sailors shinned up into the rigging to spread sails for winds beneficently provided for them. The master, standing beside the river pilot at the wheel, peered into the black mist where there was nothing to see. Astern the lights of Wilmington retreated into nothingness.

Light bulged against the sky and after it came the surging dull roar of cannon.

Fort Fisher was wasting more powder on an impudent gunboat that rolled with the swell beyond the pounding surf. On the crest of the tide's ebb the Advance slid across the bar. The master elbowed the river pilot from the wheel and swung the ship smartly into the southeast. Eastward a ring of lights disclosed the Federal fleet concentrated against the last surviving port of the Confederacy.

A mile away the gunboat turned back, and against it the guns of the fort bellowed. A livid blast of light flashed across the fog-shrouded water, to be caught fleetingly by the bellying sails of the blockade runner. Almost instantly the entire Federal fleet opened with every gun in its armament trained toward the fugitive Advance. The end of a yard-arm splashed into the sea, and the master swore prodigiously against the Yankees and against his compatriots whose firing from the fort had made an illumined target of his ship.

Shifting his course slightly landward, the master leaned grimly over the wheel. The race with destruction was begun. There were no orders to be given. Already every ounce of steam was in her boilers and every inch of canvas on her masts was straining forward. The Advance could only outrun them. Creaking masts and whining shells falling a little astern now afforded some hope that he might be gaining. The diapason of the three great guns in the fort momentarily dwarfed the thunder of the fleet's lesser cannon, and the glare of them lighted the water. Everywhere little geysers rose up where shells dropped into the sea. But none of them was falling ahead of him. In an hour, perhaps, if his luck held and the boilers did not burst, he would be clear of them.

Deferential knuckles rapped timidly upon the door of the cabin, and when he was not projected backward through the door by a glance from the master, the boy advanced across the cabin with some assurance. He turned down the covers on the master's bunk. He laid out the master's night shirt and found other things to do that might, not unreasonably, have escaped the attention of a youth but recently chased unsuccessfully by the entire Federal fleet. The master toyed abstractedly with a mug of rum.

"That lady," the boy said, "she says her name is Missus Whistler." The master lifted his mug and sipped rum silently. "She says," the boy continued, "she says she's goin' to London. She says she's got a boy over there what paints pictures or something. She says he needs her to look after him. She's goin' over to live with him." The master's gaze rested, not unkindly, upon the boy and an eyebrow was lifted inquiringly.

"She says she's been visiting her folks up around Fayetteville somewhere. Got there just before this here war started and she was waitin' to hear from this here boy of hers. And then she had to wait until she could get some way to get across. He was goin' to school somewhere or other, and was to let her know when he was ready for her to come over. Looks to me like she might have waited until she could have went without all this shootin' at her, but she says this boy—she calls him Jamie—needs her.

"That man," the boy continued, "what brung her aboard, he's her cousin. He knows the governor or somebody. The other man, he's a Mister Hill, goin' to London for the gov'ment. Her cousin told him to look after her, but she don't need no lookin' after as I can see."

"What," said the master, "did she do when the Yankees was chasing us back there?"

"Didn't do nothin' but stand at the port and look at 'em," the boy said. "She sort of smiled when that one landed in the riggin' and said that she knew nothin' was goin' to harm us and we were goin' to get through all right. That Mister Hill, he was sort of fidgety, but she wasn't."

"Go and say to Mrs. Whistler," the master said, "that the captain would be honored if he might come and pay his respects."

Mr. Hill remembered, in 1909, that the boy, when he came to Mrs. Whistler with the captain's message, was whistling with unnecessary loudness a tune that he thought was "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean," and that Mrs. Whistler laid her hands on his lean shoulders and asked him if he were a good boy. The boy blushed and Mr. Hill and Mrs. Whistler were sure that he was not a bad boy, and she said as much to the master of the Advance after she had thanked him for coming so magnificently through the blockade. And Mr. Hill remembered that when they had arrived in Liverpool the boy blushed mightily when Mrs. Whistler kissed him good-by and hoped that he would come safely home to his mother.

It was in this fashion that Mrs. Anna Mathilda McNeill Whistler, at once the most celebrated and the most obscure woman of American birth, took leave of her native shores for the last time. Her last glimpse of the mouth of Cape Fear river, beside which she was born, was lighted by the glare of the guns of the Federal fleet early in 1864 when, serenely, she ran the gamut of death through the blockade to a curious sort of anonymous immortality.

In that one heroic enterprise many lesser women might have got for themselves a sort of legendary renown. It is no small thing to have been the only woman to brave the incredible dangers of running the blockade of the mightiest fleet ever assembled and to have come through it serenely and unharmed. Women did not, ordinarily, do such things in the middle of the last century. Mrs. Whistler might at least have been famous.

It is a curious sort of immortality to which this mother went through the concentrated fury of a hundred and fifty ships of war. She was not in search of any sort of fame, any sort of immortality. It was simply that beyond the ring of ships and death was her boy Jamie, who needed her when he had come from Paris to London in the early 1860's to begin his career as an artist and controversialist.

Five million prints of a picture that was called, simply, "The Mother," have been printed and have made their way to every corner of the earth. Universally the woman in this painting is the embodiment of motherhood—this slight, serene woman who smiled and was not afraid when death rained about her. For the mother of James McNeill Whistler has come to be the mother of mankind.

Almost always she had been the mother. Oldest of five children of a distinguished North Carolina family, she had maternal duties thrust upon her early, when her own mother died. Still a girl, she became the mistress of the ancient house of the McNeills, of Bladen, in North Carolina, and was charged with the care of her younger sisters and her one brother. The latter became Major William Gibbs McNeill, of the United States army, thus breaking the tradition of the family for a hundred years in America.

For the McNeills, since they came to America in 1739 from the Isle of Skye, had been planters and physicians. Long before the Revolution the Donald McNeill of that day had built a great brick mansion on the plantation on the Cape Fear river. Sons of the family were educated at Princeton and in Scotland. Anna McNeill's brother, William Gibbs McNeill, was the last of his clan, and it was through him that his sister's horizon was widened until she has become the anonymous but universal symbol of motherhood.

For one vacation during his years at West Point he brought a classmate home with him, George Washington Whistler. And when, years later, Whistler became a widower, he again met the serene, motherly older sister of his friend and married her. Then the family had removed to New York, where Dr. McNeill, with characteristics that in time made his grandson a fantastic figure in another sphere, had attracted a wide practice.

Anna Mathilda McNeill married Major George Washington Whistler and became the mother of James McNeill Whistler. The biographies of her son are curiously reticent about her.

But throughout his life she is there, a sort of warm, gray shadow in the background of his existence. She was there when the family went to Russia when the boy was a slender, weak lad. Her diary of that time is concerned principally with the well-being of her two boys, and mostly with the health of Jamie. Through the bitter years of the Russian experience she nursed him, and when they were ended in the death of Major Whistler, when poverty stared grimly at them, she brought them out of Russia and home again.

Other sisters married brilliantly—into the British peerage, into the aristocracy of Virginia, with a son who was to come to be Admiral Donald McNeill Fairfax. The younger Whistler became, like his forefathers, a physician, with an adequate if not distinguished practice. Alone was left Jamie, the son who never, somehow, grew up to be a man who did not need his mother. Past manhood she watched over him, and he never seemed to be able to take hold upon any of the normal and expected enterprises of life.

But always she is there in the background, not dominating, never directing, but just being the mother that he would always need. He returned to Europe to study painting, and she went also—not with him, but to be nearby if he should have need of her. In 1860 he left England for Paris for three years of study, and she returned to America for a visit with her few remaining relatives in North Carolina. It was not the purpose of James McNeill Whistler ever to return to America to live.

With their scant means, they would live in London, and meanwhile she would return to America for a last visit to the place of her birth and the arrangement of a few material matters that would require her attention. The Civil War broke while she was among relatives in Cumberland and Bladen counties in North Carolina. The ancestral plantation had passed into other hands. She remained with her relatives through the earlier years of the war. Communication with her Jamie became more and more uncertain. It would not be possible for her to return to Europe, her cousins assured her.

But at length came the letter saying Jamie had returned to London and would establish himself there. It was then that the unthinkable thing was done—she would run the Federal blockade to get back to London where Jamie was, because he needed her. And she went to her paradoxical sort of immortality, careless of the danger she ran, careless of the sort of fame that might have been hers when she was the only woman who braved the hardship and the danger of passage through the ringed fleet of the Federal ships off the mouth of the river beside which she was born.

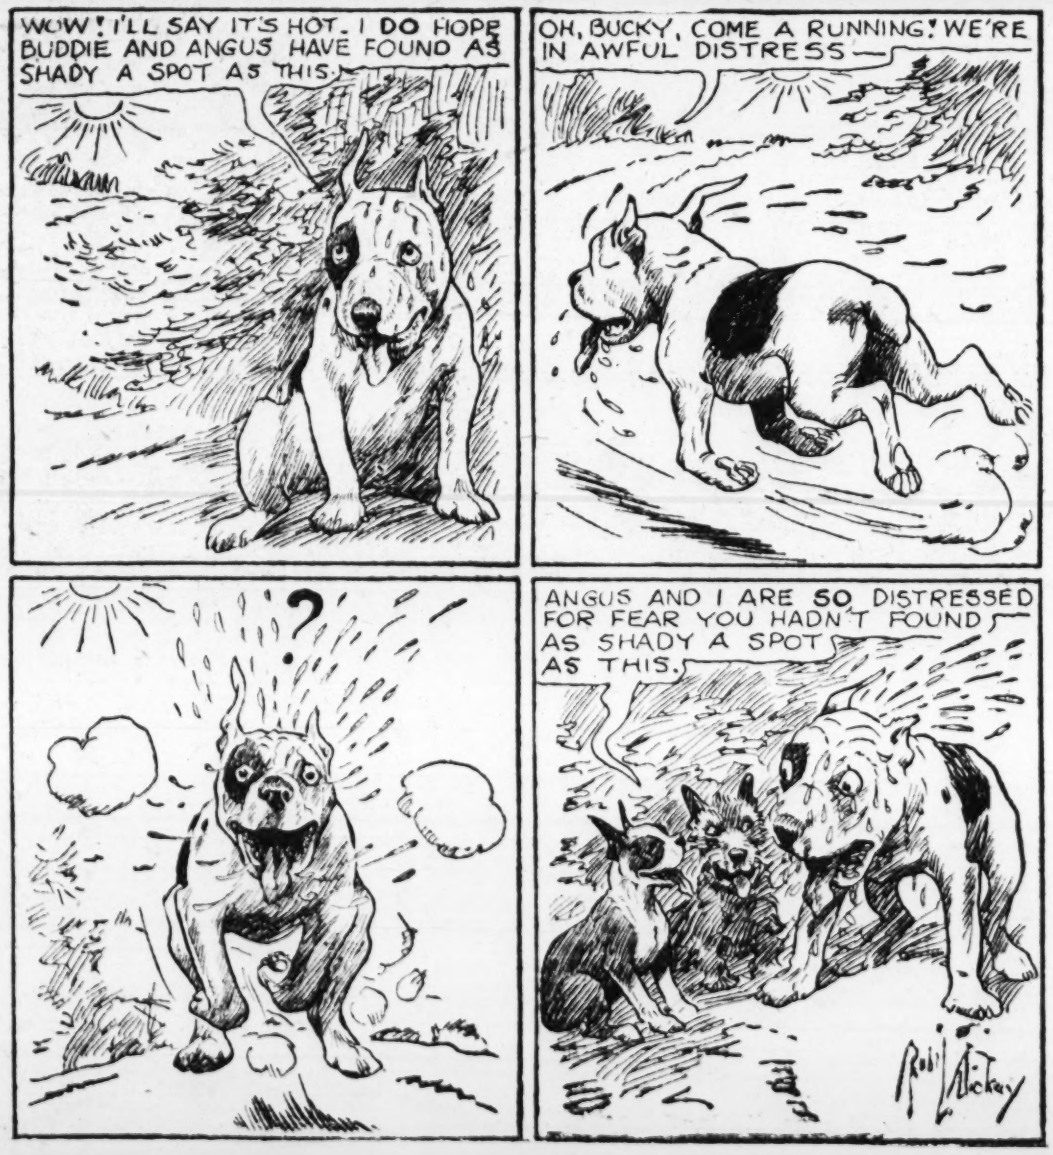

Of the life of Mrs. Whistler in London there is curiously little that survives. It was a thing apart. Once Whistler, when threatened by a blackmailer with exposure of his private life, laughed his celebrated derisive laugh and said: "Ha! I have no private life." But he did have one. The mother was his private life. Despite his incredibly erratic career, there was behind him sound and stable substance without which his living often must have smashed.

Old intimates saw them, the mother and the son. Once, years after the passage through the blockade, William Laurie Hill, the friend of her girlhood—the same Mr. Hill who was aboard the Advance when it won through the Federal fleet—visited them in London. He remembered, in the beginning of the century, that it was such an evening, and the days that followed were such days, as he might have had with them in the ancient mansion in Bladen county.

The house in which she was born in North Carolina still stands, beaten by the winds of near two centuries. To it come no pilgrimages to do honor to the mother. Before it the great elms, set by the slaves of the first of her race who came to America, rot an dare dying, and in the house have lately come to live some remote kinsmen who trekked back across the continent in a covered wagon because in that way their forbears went to California when they heard that gold was there. They remember that a long time ago a great lady was born there. But to the neighbors she is just a picture.

Noah's Story of Deluge Verified

BY MICHAEL DILLON.

AND the rain was upon the earth 40 days and 40 nights.

"In the selfsame day entered Noah, and Shem, and Ham, and Japheth, the sons of Noah, and Noah's wife, and the three wives of his sons with them, into the ark.

"And the waters prevailed, and were increased greatly upon the earth; and the ark went upon the face of the waters."

Thus the beginning of the Deluge that came over Ur and the cities and towns of Babylon, where Abraham later lived, because God was displeased with man.

This is how the story ends:

"And it came to pass in the six hundredth and first year, in the first month, the first day of the month, the waters were dried up from off the earth; and Noah removed the covering of the ark, and looked, and, behold, the face of the ground was dry."

Verify Deluge Story.

Assailed by hostile critics of the Bible as only further proof that the whole of Scripture is as fanciful as the story of Jonah in the whale, this ancient version of the flood that destroyed man, except those who entered the Ark, has been verified by scientists.

Once more have the modern scholars made an astonishing step toward corroborating the historical accuracy of a Bible story.

Like many great truths, this newly-discovered fact has its basis in a very simple act of nature.

If the flood had actually occurred, the scientists reasoned, it could not differ, in any important way, from the floods of modern times. In other words, there would be the overflowing of a river, the vast disturbances of loose soils, the destruction of life and materials, the deaths of multitudes of fish, and a score of other signs that always tell the grim story when the flood waters recede and the earth once more receives the sunlight.

The presence of these very materials in the excavations made at Kish, in Babylon, under the direction of Dr. Stephen Langdon, professor of Assyriology at Oxford, and director of the Oxford-Field museum expedition to Kish, have proved that the city of Kish, where the descendants of Noah lived, was overwhelmed by an inundation not later than 3200 B. C.

Rows of little fish, well-preserved through the ages in the fine river sand that was left upon them when the water receded, have been found. Shells of fresh water mollusca were also found.

Relics of Ancient Peoples.

The decision to search for this proof of Biblical accuracy and the arduous labors that were endured by the English scholars form one of the most amazing chapters in the history of archeology.

Noah and the surviving creatures of the world return after the flood has subsided.

Of course, the obvious question is: How can the date of the deluge be fixed so closely? Could it not have been a thousand years earlier or a thousand years later?

An answer to these questions was obtained by the nature of the materials found above and below the deluge stratum.

The first examination of the surface of the Plain of Kish brought to light the expected relics of the more modern period: The Graeco-Roman and the Hellenistic ages that came in Alexander's time; the Persian ascendency that existed for three centuries before Alexander. There was also, at the bottom of this first excavation, the vestiges of the Neo-Babylonian period of about 600 B. C.

The evidences of these vanished civilizations were cylinder seals, copper objects, tablets, weapons, and pots found in the graves.

In addition to a temple of the time of Nebuchadnezzar, there was, lower down, a conglomerate mass of mound debris, so mingled that it was difficult to divide it into clear chronological sequence.

There was no doubt, however, that these strata represented the Assyrian and the Cassite kingdoms and the Hammurabi dynasty. The dates of these were from 600 B. C. to 2067 B. C.

Hints of the splendors of the Sargon kingdoms, which flourished from 2752 B. C. to 2696 B. C., were found in the excavations that uncovered the ruins of a Sargonic temple.

Of this steady progression backward into time there has been, for many years, no scientific doubt. Writings on tablets and monuments of those periods are freely translated by the scholars and genuine chronological measurements are made by a study of objects found, especially from the decorations.

It was in the next move that the Deluge stratum was revealed. It was eighteen inches thick and consisted of close-packed river sand.

The first appearance of this new type of soil was greeted with much excitement. It differed greatly from the soil that pressed down upon it. When the diggers had removed many tons of earth from the excavation it was easy to see this river soil. It ran like a bright ribbon between the debris of human occupation above and below it.

Before any announcement of the discovery was made, the excavation was sent down still deeper.

In the first stratum under the Deluge stratum was found numerous indications of the Sumerian era and of the Neolithic-Sumerian times. The date of these periods goes back to 5000 B. C.

The Sumerian evidence consisted of typical terra cotta pots in graves, flint and bone objects, beads, Sumerian chariots and their equipment. Also there were archaic seals and tablets.

Not All Earth Flooded.

From this same level came pictographic inscriptions which were precisely the same as primitive Sumerian sculptures from all other sites of that period. Dr. Langdon himself found at Jemdet Nasr, 17 miles northeast of Kish, similar decorations that had been made in early Sumerian times.

Thus there was ample proof that the material below the Deluge stratum was laid 4,000 years before the coming of Christ. Vanished peoples who had been swept from the face of their beautiful land by unknown and terrible armies of the East had left their imprint. And the conquerors, in turn raising their temples and houses, moved on or died in the Babylonian city of Kish.

It is very clear, then, that after the Sumerian kingdom there came a flood. And that after the flood came Sargon.

And the proof is in that 18-inch belt of fine river sand. Just as the Mississippi rises now in flood time and deposits its own silt and mud over the rich farm land of the states through which it flows, so in that ancient time rose the waters of the rivers of Babylon. Unquestionably it was a long period of rain that brought the flood. It destroyed the city of Kish.

Yet it was not extensive. No flood stratum was found at Jemdet Nasr. The obvious inference was made by Dr. Langdon that the great deluge did not extend more than 12 miles from the eastern bank of the Euphrates. How far it went to the west will be determined by subterranean search for further Deluge strata.

What huge torrents must have roared down upon the choked valley of the Euphrates! Churning into its own bed of gravel, the river rose and carried away in the rushing overflow hundreds of tons of gravel. The large and strong fish escaped this turmoil, but the smaller fish, borne along in the sway of the flood, were killed by the thousands. The shellfish were torn from their resting places and carried along.

Perhaps rain fell as long as the Bible states. Many days and nights of torrents must have preceded this rising of the Euphrates. It was, indeed, a deluge.

Upon this Babylonian tragedy there have been stories founded during the later Sumerian (kingdom in power when the Deluge came) and also by the Babylonian, Assyrian, Aramean, and Hebrew peoples. The flood extended over a great part of the valley below Kish—for example at Shurupak, where Xisuthros, Krounas Noah, built his ark and saved his family from the Deluge.

When, at last, the wide black flood began its slow recession and the towers of the drowned cities once more reflected the rays of the long-hidden sun, there began that process which formed the Deluge stratum over the site of the lost city of Kish. Towers and walls had toppled down. Beasts and men had perished. And over all the swollen river laid its shroud of sand. Grain by grain the yellow stuff whirled slowly downward. The little fish were pressed down by the dropping sand.

"Fifteen cubits upward did the waters prevail; and the mountains were covered."

Fifteen cubits is approximately 26 feet. When these thousands of tons of earth-laden water at last receded all the land was covered with the river sediment.

Science and Religion.

The people of the plains, unprotected in their open, unwalled communities, perished. The fortified cities of the Sumerians survived.

On the day that the water once more flowed sluggishly between the banks of the Euphrates, the vast plain of the western bank must have been a gloomy sight. Those persons that survived walked upon a deep bed of gravel that hid the streets and the fields. In time the fields were planted again and the houses were rebuilt. Legends of the Deluge were written down on tablets and the flow of the mighty generations began once more.

Now the spades of the excavators, wielded under the direction of well-trained scientists, have made this further step towards proving that the Bible story of the Flood and Noah are true.

BEAUTY AND MURDER.

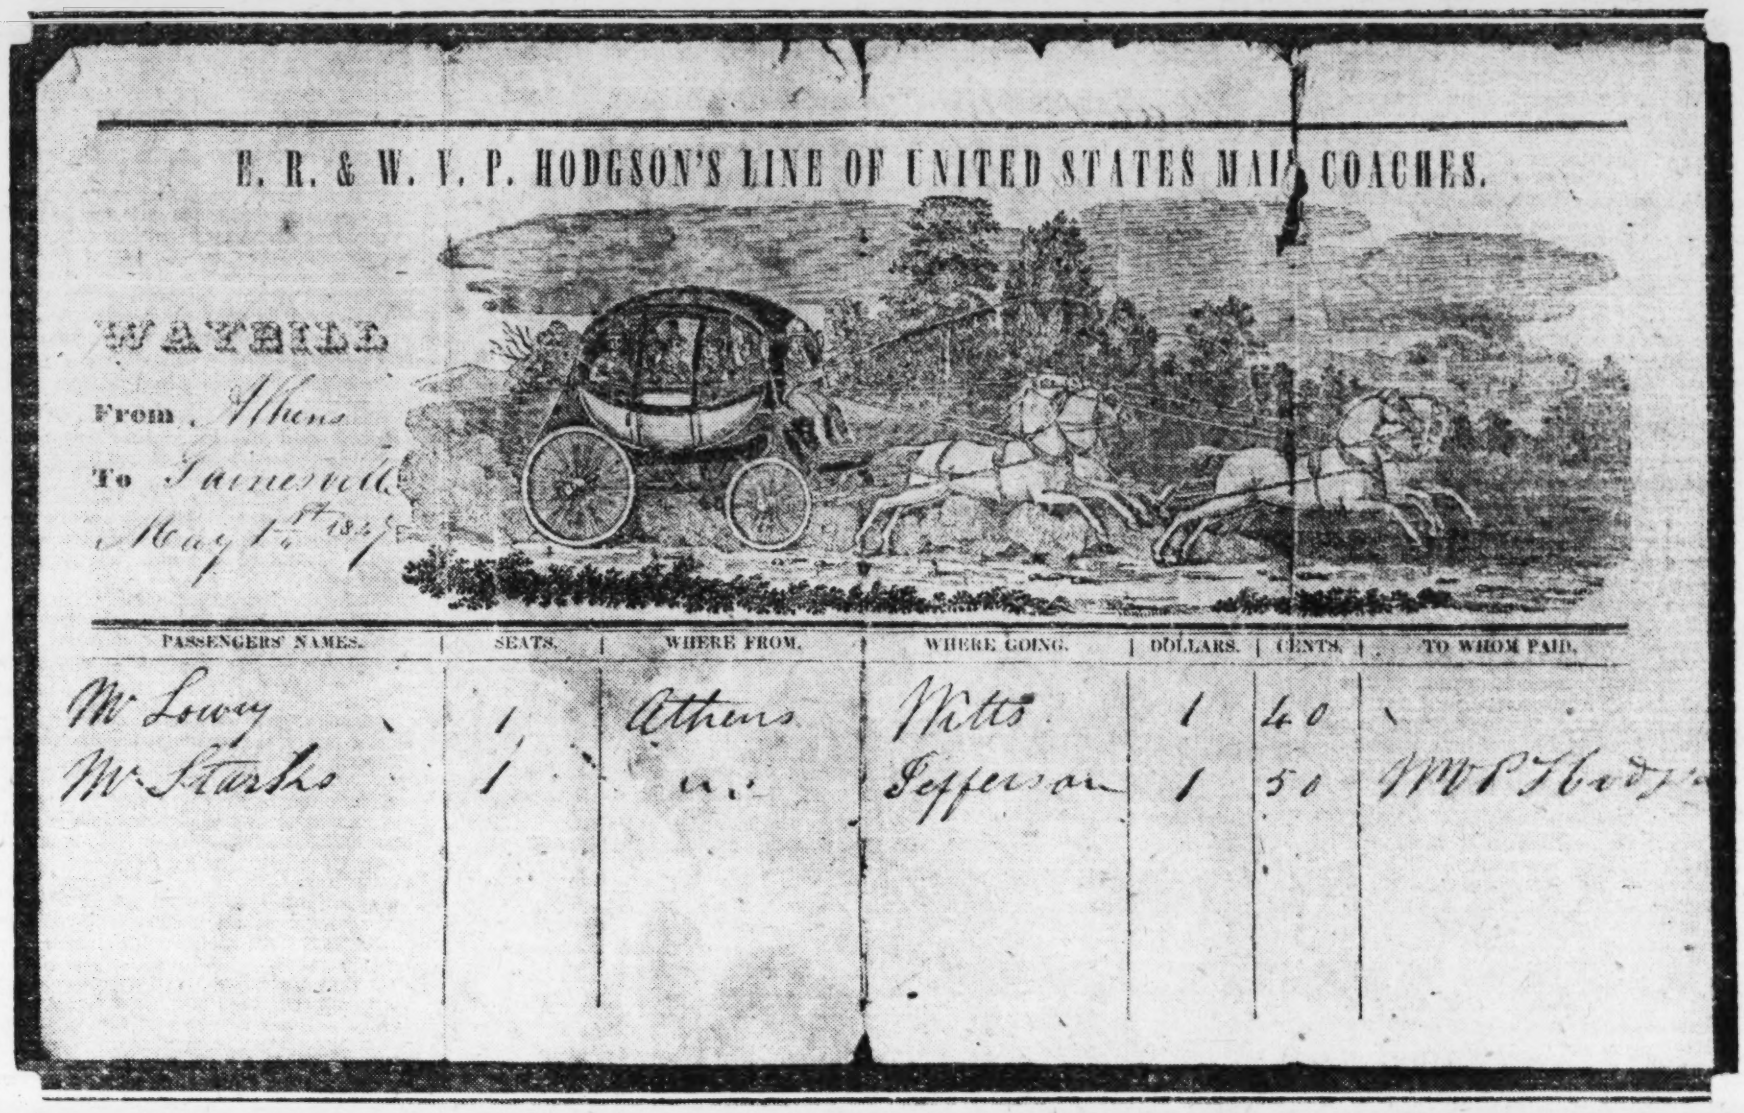

Shakespeare had something to say about beauty tempting thieves sooner than gold, but, so far as recollection serves, he had nothing to say about beauties themselves being tempted to murder. Yet look down in Mexico. "Miss Mexico" of the Galveston beauty contest in 1928 was hardly freed for having killed her husband when the winner of the San Luis Potosi beauty contest was arrested for killing a man. It may be merely a coincidence, but it is something that might as well be remembered by any susceptible young bachelor who may be thinking of a trip to Mexico.

"Hitching One's Wagon to a Star"

Above, way bill carries a picture of the stage coach used by E. R. and W. V. P. Hodgson in their transportation business. It also shows charges made and distances traveled by two passengers.

BY DAN McGILL.

ATHENS, GA.—There must be something after all to the sage's advice about "hitching one's wagon to a star."

The first Edward Hodgson to follow Emerson's counsel did have a wagon he made himself. And it was so good it founded an industry which grew up to turn out carriages that were much sought-after by people who could afford such luxury back in the 40s. Eventually, as was natural, the Hodgson wagon and carriage-making industry developed a stage coach line and made transportation in these parts quicker and more convenient.

The fourth person to bear the name of Edward Hodgson found himself alive, healthy and ambitious in an age when wagons and carriages are passe, and the stage coach has long since lumbered off the stage of time. So there was nothing left for him to do but take up aviation. And without a wagon to make connection with the stars, he persuaded his father, Harry Hodgson, of Athens, former president of the Southern Cotton Oil Association, and trustee of the University of Georgia, to buy him a plane. And now if he had a wagon and wanted to hitch it to a star, how much easier would he find the job than did his great-grandfather who operated a stage coach line between Athens and Gainesville! In his big Wright-Hisso motored plane, "Red Star," Edward Hodgson, IV, can make the trip from Athens to Jefferson in just 18 minutes.

But how Edward came to follow his great-grandfather in the transportation business has an Horatio Alger tinge. Perhaps, after gazing with fascinated eyes upon the framed picture of four prancing horses racing down the road with an old-fashioned stage coach, which hangs by his father's desk, Edward thought it was up to him to enter into the transportation business.

The picture he saw was an old wood cut, reproduced on this page, and bore the alluring title, "E. R. and W. V. P. Hodgson's Line of United States Mail Coaches." It was one of the old tickets marked "way bill" dated May 1, 1847, and showed the names of two passengers—one Mr. Lowry carried from Athens to Witts, Ga., for the sum of $1.40 and one Mr. Starks carried from Athens to Jefferson, Ga., for a charge of $1.50. The coach ran from Athens to Gainesville and the way bill bore the signature, W. V. P. Hodgson.

To the youthful E. R. Hodgson, the prancing white horses must have been as fascinating as "Old Traveler," the famous mount of General Robert E. Lee and they seemed to have more pep than Traveler or any other horses he had ever seen.

"Daddy," said Edward, "was your grandfather in the transportation business?"

"Yes."

"Why aren't you in the same business."

"I followed your grandfather in another line."

"Well, I'll follow my great-grandfather in transportation."

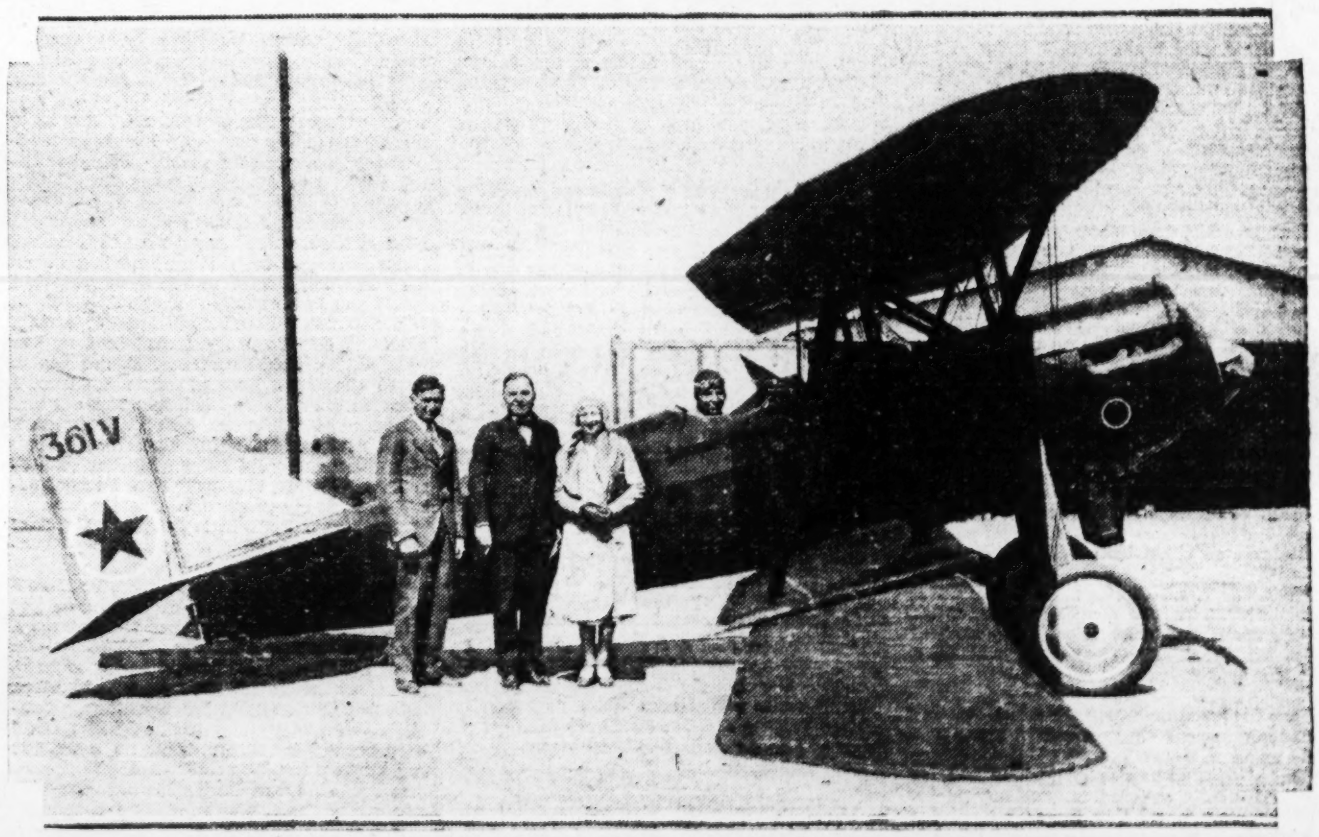

"That's fine but stage coaches are out of date."

"My stage coach will be an airplane and I'll call her the "Red Star." I'll carry passengers from Athens to Gainesville in 30 minutes where it took my great-grandfather a whole day even if the horses did gallop."

"O. K.," said Edward's father, "that sounds like progress to me, and that's what we stand for."

Edward, assured of a stake from his father, employed a youngster of about his own age to design his plane. This lad was Frank Elmore, of Americus, who designed and to a large extent built the "Red Star." He was assisted by such excellent workmen as Paul Keller, of Athens, a Frenchman trained in the Mercedes automobile factory

'Another Brilliant Coup de Theater in the Life of That Bold Adventurer in Africa—Savaran—Who Rescues His Enemy but Throws Away a Throne to Do It.'

I.

MBOTU, the Toad, trader in saffron and ghee, secret financier of ivory smugglers and slavers, of holy wars and filibusters generally, listened and yet was glum. And that was unique, for it was Savaran who talked.

Savaran, squatting on a divan, a slightly ragged eagle of a man, read the Negro Rothschild's unease and broke off short and fierce.

"Why are there qualms in thy belly, O Toad? Do you doubt Savaran's power over the Gran Fess? Do you doubt my having my way with the Kola Ambar?"

"Ambar of the Gran Fess is doubly fickle," said Mbotu. "She is queen as well as woman. She is reputed wayward in her fancies. Three times already she hath cried: 'I divorce thee,' and five other husbands knew legal separation by the sword."

"And those, knowing Savaran, think he might fail her fancy?"

"Nay! Nay!" cried Mbotu anxiously. "All Africa knows that Zavarani is irresistible to women as well as in war."

"Also the world," corrected Savaran with a flash of strong white teeth. "Why, then, does Mbotu hold back when Savaran offers him Gran Fess' ivory and easy gold?"

"In Bemoy," croaked Mbotu, "is a white lion who lives only for the hour when he takes thee in chains to his king."

"A white man!" frowned Savaran. "What sort—Manjago? Manweewee?"

The independent sultanate of Bemoy was administered and policed by Portuguese and French.

"Inglis!" Mbotu spoke as though uttering the word of doom.

"An Englishman!" snaped Savaran. "What does an Englishman in Bemoy?"

"That is thy peril, Zavarani," said Mbotu, suddenly eloquent with urgency. "He is there solely to catch thee. He is a government man, a soldier in his own land, the Malaria coast, with many police under him and rulership over many miles and many men. Yet, all these things he has cast aside that he may put a string about thy neck and lead thee to prison. He does this for a woman."

"A woman! A woman has set him on to Savaran?"

"Yallah! It is more than just a woman," said the Negro. "It is she whom he wills to marry. Every night he takes her picture from his bosom and swears to take thee. His servants have spoken of this."

"He is young!" frowned Savaran, beginning to see.

"So young that only down shines on his cheeks," nodded Mbotu. "Also he is beautiful to look on, having hair of gold and kingly features."

"And you think that Savarin, the breaker of chieftains, must tremble because a love sick boy hopes to use him as a short cut to promotion?"

"We have a proverb," said Mbotu. "It is: 'Sooner fight the elephant with bare hands than, armed with guns, cross the path of the young lion who hunts the first meat for his mate.'"

"Savarin will make you a better," said the lean man fiercely. "'What old lion fears the milk teeth of a cub?'"

"But this youth, Steffi, hath teeth," protested Mbotu. "He hath the training of a soldier; he knows the ways of Africa—and he has money! See, O Zavarani, he is wise. He buys fighting askari from Za Salah of Bemoy, one hundred and twenty of them. Rifles he buys and ammunition, also carriers with skoff for a long trail. And more! He sits daily with Ntila, the Jackal, tempting him dollar by dollar to forget his fears and help in the hunt for thee."

Ntila was the cleverest and wickedest bush tracker in northwest Africa.

Savaran stared reflectively at Mbotu. He asked: "Has he won Ntila?"

"Not yet," admitted the Negro. "But already the dazzle of gold gets between Ntila and his fear. Will you give up this Gran Fess venture?"

"I! Savaran give up a triumph! I will march with this Steffi himself to the Gran Fess."

"March with Steffi himself! But he hunts thee!"

"We will hunt together," grinned Savaran. "Hunt me like coupled hounds on one scene. And that scent will carry us into the Gran Fess land. It will be a hunting worthy of Savaran."

II.

Rex Sefton, one of those gilt fair, viking built, thrusting youngsters, was having his bad moment. Arriving at Bemoy City heady with the optimism of youth, he had abruptly been pancaked flat by one of those collapses of plan youth rarely foresees.

From the moment when he had realized that a subaltern's job in the Malaria coast police was no high road to swift advancement and quick marriage, he had seen that his only hope for both lay in gaining renown by some big and dramatic coup. To take Savaran singlehanded was quite obviously the largest item on the honor schedule. That journeyman king and trouble-maker had again set all Africa a-jig by almost founding another fighting empire, and the desire to suppress him for good and all was universal and earnest. When, therefore, word came that the eagle-faced man was making for Bemoy, the boy did not hesitate.

The sultan of Bemoy was eager to grant any sort of lethal permit that might lead to the extermination of Savaran, already reported on his southern marches. More, he personally introduced the young Englishman to certain pious traders he should have jailed under the backward races enactments of the league of nations for traffic in arms. And Rex Sefton had money to spend with them. A year ago an uncle had left him a small nest egg, too tiny to be worth investing, but, now, just the thing for fitting out a useful kaum (commando) of fighting men and carriers. Certainly, he argued, Fate was dealing him all the aces.

Savaran laughed fiercely down at the pistol in the boy's hands: "There are ten thousand spearmen here, Rex. Do you shoot them all?"

And then, just as his plans were complete, when they only needed the crowning touch of winning Ntila, the tracker, the bottom fell out of everything. His fighters and carrier "boys" scattered in a single night, while Utila was as if he had never been. Something had happened. Za Salah, responsible for the "boys," muttered something aobut a gree-gree man, who, coming out of the void had cast the stones and foretold naught but disaster for any who marched with Steffi. Beyond that Za Salah could say no more save that he did not intend to refund a zinc cent of what Rex Sefton had paid.

Even the sultan was a broken reed. He suddenly developed an unaccountable indifference to Rex Sefton's plans.

Rex Sefton's dreams had flopped a very bad flop indeed. And it was while he was in the midst of this bitter realization that Lee Washington swam into his orbit.

Rex Sefton had noted the man vaguely as a large opaque body occasionally inhabiting the same fly embattled lounge of Bemoy's one white man hotel as himself. Being British his consciousness of brother man got no further. Lee Washington, however, had a method of approach all his own.

"Colonel," he cried, "are you needing an expert in caravans, the organizing and handling of same?"

Rex Sefton gave a gulp at the very suggestion and his icy glare melted into a more human attention. He saw hugeness before him. A huge, full figure of a man; a huge beard; a huge, well cultivated bulbous nose, plus tinted, horn rimmed sun glasses, huge, too. Rex Sefton, trying not to show excitement, drawled: "What's the big idea?"

"You're this young Goliath hunter, aren't ye?" boomed the big man. "The local David who's going slinging for Savaran? I like a lad with spirit enough to tackle tornadoes. That's one of the reasons why I'm ready to hitch in—well, as far as the Gran Fess border, anyhow."

"Gran Fess!" frowned the puzzled boy. "Why the Gran Fess?"

"Well," said the big American, "Savaran's heading that way, ain't he?"

"Is he?" snapped Rex Sefton. "How do you know?"

"I always do. I'm just off the trail, anyhow. I'm Lee Washington of Missouri, mineral hunter. Broke for the moment in all but experience and a master gift of handling natives—the same being now on offer."

"I don't quite follow——" began the boy.

"It'll penetrate," grinned Lee Washington. "This is the way of me. I'm after metal—my career or job. I've been prospecting Bemoy, down south. Found nothing there, but I did get word that there's quartz gold and diamond clay in the Gran Fess country. Awkward that, because I haven't the cash out outfit me as far as the Gran Fess. Then, hitting this bug bitten burg in this dejected and dollarless state, I heard you are organizing an outfit to catch this Savaran fellow. Well, another word I picked up down south was that Savaran was heading for the Gran Fess. You've got to go to the Gran Fess to catch Savaran. I want to go. You're obviously the original babe and suckling; me, what I don't know about Africa ain't useful. Therefore we can be mutually helpful in chasing our respective moonbeams, an'—well, here I am offering to work my passage."

"Are you," Rex Sefton cried thickly, "are you offering to join me in hunting Savaran?"

"Son," said the big man genially, "we'll begin as we go on, lying no lies. I do not hunt Savaran, nor the saber toothed tiger, nor anything so certainly fatal to human life. But I do submit and agree to help, labor, advise, guide, kick sense into black boys and generally prove myself indispensable to your caravan as far as the Gran Fess border—as far as that, no more. Is it a deal?"

"And if we come up with, catch Savaran before the Gran Fess border," he demanded huskily. "What then?"

"No need to discuss the breakdown of the natural law," grinned Lee Washington.

"You don't think I'll take Savaran, then?" snapped the boy, his face setting in a fighting hue.

"You're a likelier looking proposition than I thought," said Lee Washington, studying him, "and handsomer. However, Savaran is undoubtedly Savaran——"

"And I'm going to get him," said the boy grimly.

"It'll be worth watching, anyhow," said the American with his broad show of teeth. "But count me in as a watcher only. Is it a go?"

"Three days ago I'd have been asking you instead of you me. Now——" He poured out the story of the strange collapse of his plans. Lee Washington was sympathetic but not overwhelmed by surprise.

"Too bad," he said, "but, of course, that's Savaran."

"You think he stampeded my men?"

"Son," said the American, "he'd stampede the trained bands of hell."

"But he's in the south, you say."

"Heading north and west to reach the Gran Fess," corrected the big man. "He's probably passing Bemoy now and you bright boys got wind of him and just naturally faded away."

"And my chances of taking him with them," cried Rex Sefton bitterly. "My whole outfit has quit and I can't even get my advance for wages back from that swine Za Salah and others. Nothing but a miracle——"

"Miracles," grinned Lee Washington, "are among my most profitable side lines. Just sit back and watch Lee."

III.

Rex Sefton had six weeks of Lee Washington and miracles, and came to have a vast liking for both.

Lee Washington had a large and astonishing way with him. For instance he walked calmly into the smugly contemptuous presence of Za Salah, wholesaler in pious texts and cut-throat gunmen. He listened mildly while the Arab made it more than plain that Rex Sefton would get back neither a cook boy nor a cent of his advance. Never a word said Lee Washington until Za Salah reached for his keef pipe with a gesture of final dismissal. Then he said with a strange, ferocious softness:

"A hundred and twenty fighters Steffi hired through thee—so! Well, two hundred and forty will be ready by noon tomorrow, O mangy mosque rat. Also two hundred and fifty carriers. They will gather at the Hill of Crows, and they will be punctual. The price of each will be half what thou charged Steffi, and what he has already paid settles thy bill. And they will be good men, Za Salah, all of them, thou wilt speak with me on thy swift way to hell."

Za Salah shuddered back from the wolf grin on the big bearded face, yet was ready to fight, being an Arab with money at stake. The American laughed softly and lifted his tinted spectacles. . . .

"Wa Sidda!" wailed the Arab. "All shall be as the feared among the lions desires. On the stone I swear it."

Lee Washington wasted no more words or time on him. He had other calls to make. He visited Chakula, who was hugging himself at having been overpaid for food he need never supply to Rex Sefton; Nymo, the Rat, who was in the same happy mood over the matter of pack donkeys and saddle mules, and Patamo, gun runner extraordinary to all the best local revolutions. Upon each he had the same reaction, even on Patamo, whose name was terror and who called in three bhang-crazy dagger men to back his robber talents. But the dagger men as well as Patamo and the others all wilted under the ferocious and sardonic glare the lifted spectacles exposed, and when Rex Sefton rode out to the Hill of Crows next day, fully equipped for the trail, which seemed absurd to him, he reined in, gasping at the sight he saw.

"Jove!" he cried to Lee Washington, "You're right. You work miracles. Why, we can march in a day or two."

"We march—now," grinned the American. "You can't hang about where Savaran is concerned."

Miracles continued. The caravan was still in a rough and ruffianly state, for some of the men were considerable devils and liked the world to know it. Rex Sefton, used to commanding men as he was could do little with this criminal brood. Not so Lee Washington. In a week he had molded the worst of these rascals into a mainguard of such fighting quality that, when a rezzon of Arabs made a darting attack on the caravan, they responded so beautifully that he all but nipped the raiders in a swift encircling movement from the flanks. Indeed, only headlong flight saved the wild desert men from extermination.

"Jove, Lee," cried Rex Sefton in admira-

A Passing Parade and a Fire in the Clubhouse Are Not Enough to Make Bridgers Stop Playing

By Shepard G. Barclay

FOR a royal demonstration of bridge enthusiasm the palm must be handed to advertising men—at least until somebody else surpasses the record they set recently. Though it was a sunny spring Saturday afternoon, five tables were in action in the clubhouse of the Advertising Club of New York, involving 20 men all well known in their profession.

Up Park avenue came a big military parade. Band after band blared past, but not a man left his cards to look from his "grandstand seat" in the windows over the massed crowds below.

Next the clang of fire engines was heard. They pulled up on Thirty-fifth street right alongside the clubhouse and soon the players could hear the tramping boots of the firemen lugging hose through the corridors past the very door of the room where the bridge was going on. One fireman stuck his head in the door and shouted that the kitchen to the main dining room just above them was on fire and they had better "Get out quick!"

"Just let us know when the fire reaches this room," responded one of the players, and the game went on. They were still playing when the flames were extinguished and their fireman friend looked in to tell them all was well. But nobody heard him, except possibly Augustus Stilwill and William Hansen, who blamed him for the one hand they played badly all afternoon.

As they departed later one recalled the old story of the late Rube Waddell, who was pitching a big league ball game when the fire engines passed. Dropping his ball and glove in the middle of the diamond, he ran to the fence, scaled it and tore on to see the fire. But then that was only baseball, not bridge.

Ancient Prejudices

The time-honored prejudice against playing cards—dating from the time when they were used chiefly in games of chance rather than games of skill—survives in many weird forms. None of them is more amusing than the policy of a certain world-famous department store in one of our largest cities. Its founder was so opposed to cards—possibly with good reason in his early days—that he laid down the dictum that never should a pack of cards be sold in his store.

He has now passed to the Great Beyond, and the conditions that caused the birth of his anti-card policy likewise have passed with the advent of games of skill, played by most players for the sheer enjoyment of pleasant competition. But as a mark of respect to his memory no playing card has ever been allowed to go on sale in the store. The present management, however, has no qualms about selling other bridge accessories—score pads, card tables, bridge books, tallies, table covers, etc. It does a tremendous business in all of these, and also sells poker chips and roulette wheels. The other day, moreover, one of its advertisements proclaimed the popularity in certain circles of the old game of backgammon, which is played with dice, and, of course, urged customers to buy backgammon boards.

The sentiment which keeps playing cards out of the store is perhaps a beautiful tribute to the old gentleman's memory in some respects, but we don't believe he would want his old policy followed now when conditions are so changed as to make it appear ludicrous.

What Is Card Sense?

Homer Whiteside writes to ask whether a player with card sense won't ordinarily beat the man who "plays by the book." He surely will, sometimes. But the one who knows what he calls "book bridge" and also has card sense is the real card player.

The best thing to do with certain combinations of cards has been figured out and proved by the test of thousands of hands. Often this one best thing is very easy to learn from one who points it out—a person or a book. To expect the "card sense" player to deduce it for himself would be to demand of him that he be a genius who can tell by sheer reckoning something that the experts have required perhaps years to learn. If he be such a genius how much more formidable he would be if his mind were freed of calculating such things, enabling it to wrestle with other problems of the game which are not codified.

Learning what can be taught by a good teacher or a good book is something like equipping a carpenter with a good set of tools; the results then depend on how he uses the tools. But the most brilliant carpenter with a poor set of tools—planes with notches in their blades, dull saws, etc.—cannot turn out the same product as another carpenter of equal expertness with a fine outfit. Thus the "card sense" player will often be defeated by players of less natural ability who are better equipped. They will be in the position of Jack Dempsey, who had a much more powerful punch than Gene Tunney and yet was beaten because Tunney had learned to make better use of his inferior punching powers.

Times Do Change

Remember how you used to bid a year or two ago?
You hoped your hand was strong enough, but never did you know;
Such things as counting up your tricks were foreign to your mind,
You'd simply trust the dummy had the cards you hoped to find.
And, if your luck was running strong, your partner's hand would fit,
So, though your bid was terrible, you'd get away with it.
Those good old days are gone to stay since contract made its bow;
They'd call the undertaker if you tried to do that now.

Contract Systems

Last week's hands:

NORTH
♠ K Q J ♥ A Q 10 ♦ A J 10 ♣ A K J 10
SOUTH (Dealer)
♠ A 4 3 2 ♥ K J ♦ K Q 3 2 ♣ 4 3 2

Straightaway system—South would bid one no trump. North, rating aces at 4, kings 3, queens 2 and jacks 1, has a count of 25. That, plus the 13 shown by the dealer's original bid, makes a total of 38 in the two hands. When that total is held by the side a grand slam is indicated in this system, so North bids seven no trumps, which of course is made easily. For slam purposes tens are not counted. A total of 30 in the two hands is required for a four bid as a slam indicator, 33 for a five bid, 35 for a six bid and 38 for a grand slam.

Vanderbilt system—All four suits must be stopped to justify a no trump bid in this method, hence South can bid nothing but one diamond. North, knowing that South couldn't hold the two quick tricks guaranteed by his bid unless he possessed ace of spades plus either the king-queen of diamonds or the kings of hearts and diamands, and that the diamond bid would not be sound unless both honors were held or else the suit was long, feels sure of a no trump slam, which he indicates with a bid of four no trumps. South shows his spade ace by bidding five spades, North closing the bidding with a call of either six or seven no trumps, the latter being somewhat risky from the standpoint of the definite information possessed.

Absolute demand system—South is just strong enough for a one bid, which in this method requires two and a half quick tricks. Since North's hand shows him there is only one possible way for his partner to have that strength, he knows the exact location of South's quick tricks. Therefore, he knows there is a grand slam in the hand and bids seven no trumps. He will do that regardless of whether the original bid is one no trump or one diamond—which is the bid that would be made by devotees of the "approach" process, who bid a suit whenever a biddable one is held, in preference to no trump.

Partial demand system—Same as the above, with those who show two and a half quick tricks with an original bid. Those who show only two and employ a "count" for no trump bids would bid as in the straightaway method. Those who double their quick trick strength to ascertain no trump values, and show only two quick tricks with an original bid, would open with one no trump. These "doublers" limit their multiplying so that it never adds more than five to the straight quick trick total. Rated according to their quick trick table, the North hand has six and three-quarters quick tricks; this, plus South's shown two, plus the constant of five for promotion, makes 13 plus, so that North bids seven no trump.

How would you bid the following hands of a partnership, if opponents constantly pass? (Answer next week.)

NORTH
♠ Q 10 3 2 ♥ K 4 3 2 ♦ A J ♣ A Q J
SOUTH (Dealer)
♠ A K J ♥ A Q J ♦ K 3 2 ♣ 5 4 3 2

A Law a Week

New deal optional—During the deal, any player who has not looked at any of his cards may demand a new deal under any of these circumstances; (a) if the wrong player deal; (b) if the dealer omit the cut; (c) if the wrong pack is used, or (d) if the pack be imperfect. In a, b or c the new deal is by proper dealer with his own pack; in d, by the same dealer with a perfect pack. If no legal demand for a new deal be made under this law before the end of the deal it stands, and the player on the left deals next with the still pack.

(Next Week—Impossible Bids)

Auction Problems

Answer to Last Week's—How would you bid and play the following hands?

NORTH
♠ 10 4 3
♥ 4 3 2
♦ J 6 5
♣ A K 5

WEST: ♠ 9 6 5 2 ♥ A K Q 6 5 ♦ 10 7 ♣ 10 9
EAST: ♠ 8 7 ♥ J 10 9 8 7 ♦ 9 8 4 ♣ 6 4 3
SOUTH: ♠ A K Q J ♥ None ♦ A K 3 2 ♣ Q J 8 7 2

Even those who prefer showing their longer suit first would, in almost all cases, open with a bid of one spade on South's hand, due to the honors. West would bid two hearts, North two spades. East lacks sufficient strength to help his partner's heart call unless the latter is powerful enough to bid again. After North's raise few players would then show another of South's suits, which would be unfortunate, for there is a grand slam in either diamonds or clubs.

West would lead his king of hearts. South cannot afford to trump it, with only four spades in his hand; if he does West will take the last trump trick, and then four more hearts, holding him to two-odd. The correct play is to discard either clubs or diamonds—it makes no difference which—on three successive heart leads. By doing so he gets all the rest of the tricks—four-odd, or game. As a rule, holding only four trumps, declarer should not ruff unless he also has at least four trumps in dummy, or can make game by cross-ruffing the entire hand, or else his only chance for game is to find the outstanding trumps evenly divided.

The New Problem

South having bid one no-trump and all passed, what would you lead from the following hands? (Answer next week.)

A ♠ A 10 9 3 2 ♥ Q J 10 ♦ 9 8 7 ♣ 10 2
B ♠ A K 10 3 2 ♥ Q J 10 ♦ 9 8 7 ♣ 10 2
C ♠ A Q 10 3 2 ♥ Q J 10 ♦ 9 8 7 ♣ 10 2
D ♠ Q J 10 3 2 ♥ Q J 10 ♦ 9 8 7 ♣ 10 2
E ♠ A J 10 3 2 ♥ Q J 10 ♦ 9 8 7 ♣ 10 2

Red Justice

Soviet Russia Has Tossed Into the Discard Every Code of Justice the World Has Known and Is Setting Up an Entirely New Legal System in Which Guarantees of Individual Liberty and Equality Are Forgotten and Class Principles, Judgments and Justice Hold Sway

By Ben James

RED justice, her blindfold supplanted by a pair of crimson spectacles, scans the pages of Karl Marx for guidance, weighs her scales with a set of counterpoises new to this world, and strikes balances that defy the laws of legal gravity operating in other countries of the earth. For soviet jurisprudence, thundering over the uncharted plains of communism, abandons all models in its work of crystallizing a new social philosophy into law.

The moral rules of Moses, the codes of Justinian, the doctrines of Coke and Blackstone, and the whole body of Czarist civil and criminal laws are relegated to oblivion, branded as archaic and savage regulations that held the workers of the world in bondage. And the shades of ancient lawgivers and bewigged jurists hover aghast above the red-draped benches of soviet tribunals where precedent is a word without power, and guarantees of individual liberty and individual equality before the law are swept away in favor of a legal system avowedly founded upon class principles, class judgments and class justice.

In these raw, new curiae the bulwarks against tyranny set up by the French and American revolutions, defining the inalienable rights of humans, are stamped as charters of a privileged class. "The Rights of Man" has no place in the fundamental statutes of Red Russia. Where this documents designates law as the expression of general will and declares all men born free and equal, the organic law of the soviets decrees that only one group has full legal rights and that "all power must appertain completely and exclusively in the laboring masses." Based upon this idea new crimes are created and old offenses given eccentric significance, while courtrooms project scenes that twist ancient emotions into grotesque shapes and press primitive instincts into shiny, new and unyielding molds.

Daily new and dramatic trials loom on the legal horizon of Soviet Russia. All the bizarre facets of Red Criminal law flash brilliantly throughout the ordeals. Statutes of an anomalous penal code define the offenses, judges with unique and unconventional qualifications preside, and the insidious operations of the notorious G. P. U., the soviet secret police whose jurisdiction covers every phase of counter-revolutionary crimes is bared. All the factors of communist law enforcement stand out in sharp relief.

A current case involving some of the highest officials of a state government is in the process of litigation. Among the defendants are numbered responsible executives in such important organizations as the Commissariat of Agriculture of the Ukraine, the Ukranian State Planning Commission, the Agrarian banks, the Institute of Economy of the Ukraine, the Agronomical school and the Ukranian Lumber Trust. Forty-five of the accused men have pleaded guilty, and for the first time in soviet history no death penalties were imposed for participation in a widespread and threatening conspiracy against the state. The trials of the remainder of the group are to be heard. They were all discovered by the ever-alert G. P. U. as members of a subrosa society which aimed to cirpple the farm policies of the government.

It is difficult to hide any activity in Russia from this vast, intrically organized system of secret police who are the eyes and ears of the Kremlin, possessing great arbitrary power and constituting one of the most important units in the administration of soviet criminal law. The notorious Okhrana, the feared secret police of czardom, that sprawled over all the Russias like a giant, unseen octopus of espionage, is dead. But its relentless, spying soul lives on in the G. P. U. The frame work and methods of the Okhrana became the model for its Red successor, the Machiavellian Tcheka that functioned as a revolutionary police tribunal with terrible power during the first five years of communism. In 1925, the Tcheka, with slightly modified authority, became the G. P. U.

It is one of the many ironies of revolution that the inexpiable police system of Czarism, that for many centuries dispatched the thin, endless line of hopeless men and women over the bleak snows of Siberia to die in raw towns of Arctic Asia, should be employed by the men who were its victims, to hunt out and sentence the class that first used the scheme. But that very thing has occurred. The functions of the G. P. U. are defined by Stalin as "the punitive organ of soviet power, resembling the Comite du Salut Publique of the French Revolution. It represents something like a military political tribunal, constituted to protect the revolution against the assaults of the counter-revolutionary bourgeoisie and its agents."

The two most important fields of soviet criminal law are covered by the G. P. U., as it devotes its energies to the supression of counter-revolution and to economic espionage.

The personnel of this cunning and ever-present organization is the most carefully chosen of any state department. All members of the secret police must be tried and trusted communists fired by a fanatical zeal to crush the enemies of their cause. Many of the agents are unknown to any one but the central executive committee of the communist party and spend their lives among suspected people, posing as one of their number. These police have a reputation for never making an arrest until conclusive evidence of guilt of the suspect is in their possession. Then they strike. The arrest is made. In many cases, the G. P. U. can be both accuser and judge, for it has a court system of its own that handles many types of cases and is invested with the power to pronounce a death sentence. If it does not try the case investigated it is submitted to the state courts.

The police organization which functions in keeping public order and protecting personal relations does not have the power, nor does it use the methods of the political and economic police. Their ways are less vigorous and crafty. The everlasting fear of counter-revolution which haunts the rulers of Russia prevents them from administering their G. P. U. in the mild way in which the state police function. For the common policeman of Russia is indeed a novelty in law enforcement. Many of the park police are women. Whether men or women they are all fluent talkers. In street brawls or fights between irate neighbors, who have for the moment forgotten the precepts of communism to the point where they quarrel over the right to first use of the community kitchen, the policeman arrives with no intention of arresting the participants. He hears the facts from both sides of the contest simultaneously, and is immediately a party to the altercation himself. He expounds the doctrines of communism which, he claims, would have prevented the fight had they been adhered to. He explains why both parties are wrong. He is an educator. For the theory goes that it is better to have people obey the law because they want to rather than because they are forced to do so.

I attended a regatta where policewomen were handling a crowd of thousands. The river bank was lined with the proletariat in a holiday mood. Behind the crowd at the water's edge was a row of newly painted green benches, affording a tempting point of vantage from which to view the races. A few of the spectators in the rear ranks climbed upon the seats, marring the emerald c 'or. The police girls were at once active. They did not abruptly order the offenders off, but began a harangue that involved giving all the reasons why goes citizens should not stand on freshly painted benches.

The proletariat, interested in the races and reluctant to abandon their positions which gave them such an excellent view of the river, argued with the girls. Many men and women in the crowd lost interest in the regatta and joined with the police girls in attempting to convince the anti-social people on the benches that they should get down. The chief arguments employed were that cultured people do not stand on benches, and that by doing so they were making a bad impression on the "bourjui" (whom I represented). The conclusive and winning contention advanced by the police was that it was a waste of labor. For wasting labor has real meaning to a class-conscious worker. One group would be eventually talked out of their positions on the benches and would scramble off the seats. But as soon as they were gone, a new collection would take their places, and the whole ordeal was gone through again. I suggested a more decisive way of keeping the benches clear, but my communist interpreter said that arbitrary methods would not be education and it was far better to educate the people by giving them the reasons for not doing improper things.

But when an arrest is made and the accused brought to the bar of justice he is confronted with a court of procedure, a criminal code, and a system of penology unique in the world today. The court rooms of modern Russia reflect the stark system of jurisprudence that guides their functioning. I have attended sessions of the people's court held in a large room of an old apartment house in Moscow and similar hearings convened in the courts of justice used by the Romanoffs in Leningrad. From these trial chambers all the trappings of the old regime are gone. The judge's bench is a plain table hung with scarlet cloth. A red-draped picture of Lenin adorns the scaling walls, and rough benches and wabbly chairs are scattered around the barren room. The impressive ceremonies that give dignity to courts of law are absent.

The procedure is as simple and unembellished by intricate rules of evidence as the room is devoid of decoration. In the people's court, which is the common court of original jurisdiction for ordinary cases, one judge and two assessors hear the case and constitute both the judge and the jury, making decisions on both law and fact. All three may question witnesses unhampered by strict rules on admissibility of testimony, and the case is decided by a majority vote of the three.

The judge is not chosen for his peculiar legal training, as an education in law is not necessary for the office. He must, however, be a communist who has held public office for at least two years and has been employed at one time as a worker or farmer. The two assessors are drawn in the fashion of jurymen from a selected panel made up of 50 per cent workers, 15 per cent soldiers, and 35 per cent farmers. By confining the operation of the courts to communists and workers the administration of justice is securely placed in the hands of the proletariat and organized on a strictly class basis with no place for professional people, traders or the intelligentsia.

The lawyers of the land may be admitted to practice without legal training, but must pass a communist board which decides their qualifications in the light of their political beliefs. The profession is now being collectivized. On February 1 Moscow abolished the private practice of law and replaced it by a collective unit of workers' lawyers under communist management. The briefs are impartially distributed among the members of the organization, and the private practice of law or advising in legal matters by lawyers not members of the collective is ruled to be a fraudulent practice, punishable by imprisonment.

Above the people's court are the Gubernia courts, which hear appeals from the lower tribunal and have the right to try cases of special importance involving counter-revolutionary trials not conducted in the G. P. U. courts. The court of final appeal is the supreme court of the Republic. There are six of these sitting in the various states, and in this judiciary, appointed by the central council, the same class distinctions prevail. Of the forty-five judges of this high bench all are communists, but only 18 are lawyers.

The penal code administered by these courts names as crimes many acts not regarded as crimes in other lands, and omits or minimizes deeds that the world has for ages branded as criminal. It provides for a maximum penalty of only 10 years for all offenses with the single exception of counter-revolutionary activity, which may be punished by death. These statutes, so strange to western countries, but entirely compatible with soviet ideology, are a direct product of revolutionary chaos.

The first five years of the soviet's life there was no penal code in existence to designate the acts to be uniformly considered criminal. That important division of law was deliberately neglected in order to establish revolutionary forms. During this hectic half decade criminal justice was administered by judges untrained in jurisprudence, whose sole qualification was a thorough understanding of the dogma of communism and a hysterical fervor for the precepts of the Red faith.

There were no statutes nor formal tests by which they determined whether acts an accused man was alleged to have committed were criminal or not. The existing customs of the people were not a sound guide because those usages were bred in czarist days. The fact that an act had been a crime under the empire was not considered, for the Romanoffs were dead and a new world was to be made.

So these jurists of the revolutionary tribunals examined issues and tested them in accordance with the general notions of the aims and ideals of the Red philosophy. If by a sixth sense they felt a certain act militated against the permanency of the struggling soviets, or believed it to be detrimental to the welfare of the group, it was judged a crime and sentence was passed in accordance with the magistrate's notions of the extent to which the offender was a menace to the community. So out of the ruddy glow of the "revolutionary conscience" a category of acts regarded as anti-social came into being. These were crystallized into the penal code made in 1922, put into effect in 1923 and revised in 1927.

The Red penal code now in operation divides all offenses into three chief categories. There are the crimes against health, life and property, which include larceny and murder. A second class of offenses against the economic life of the country embraces many startling new types of crime and the frantic efforts being made today to complete the five-year plan and effect Russia's industrial independence in the next four years is provoking a rigid enforcement of these statutes. The third classification is counter-revolutionary crimes. These are defined as "any action directed toward the overthrow, the breaking or weakening of the power of the workers' and peasants' government." Although this section of laws is directed most forcefully against political activity and economic conspiracies, the liberal interpretation given by the courts often brings many offenses in the first two categories.

A new crime fostered by this all inclusive statute was born only last month in Kharkov when several library officials were arrested and charged with cultural sabotage. Their crime had been the arrangement and distribution of books on the shelves of their library. The police investigating the institution discovered that thousands of tomes exalting the dictatorship of the proletariat, and depicting the doubts and fears and yearnings of humanity as vanishing at the magic touch of an economic cure-all, had been relegated to obscure shelves and stacked in damp cellars. And in prominent display they found cheap novels with bourgeoisie settings, volumes on God and dead faiths and books about people whose souls had not been standardized. The offenders must answer to the courts of communism for their transgression.

The many crimes against the economic security which do not have revolutionary intent, but are punishable because they are detrimental to the group, form an anomalous collection of laws. Labor desertion is a misdemeanor in Red Russia. If important work is to be done and an employee leaves his job without proper excuse, he may be sentenced to compulsory labor for two weeks or imprisonment for not more than six days. The wasteful use of material by a manager or a worker, or the ill-advised direction of labor by a superintendent may be punished by not less than six months' imprisonment.

There is the recent case of an office manager who fell a victim to the stringent laws demanding extreme care in the process of doing soviet business. The manager, in a hurry to leave the office to keep an appointment with his bride, left his work at the regular time, but failed to turn over to his secretary the keys to the vault in which the office records were stored. She was compelled to leave the books unlocked during the night. In the morning it was discovered that the records of hours of labor put in by the factory workers had been stolen and that the payroll could not be made up. For this negligent act the manager was indicted, tried and sentenced to nine days' imprisonment.

Mal-administration of an office through carelessness, lack of ability or application are punished by not less than six months' imprisonment. If the poor management is carried on deliberately for private gain a maximum of five years' imprisonment may be the penalty, and if it is part of a conspiracy with others or is done with the aim of squandering state property and damaging soviet enterprise it may be interpreted as counter-revolutionary and so carry the maximum penalty of death.

In the wide variety of crimes listed under the head of acts against health, life and property of the people are all the offenses ranging from non-support of children to murder. These common crimes are given a distinctive place by the unique communist interpretation of them. For the act itself does not interest the state. The sentence is not imposed in accordance with the crime, but in relation to the social danger of the person involved. No crime of this type carries a penalty of more than ten years' imprisonment. Communists who commit offenses against the peace of the community are dealt with more harshly than non-party members, for their failure to live up to the concepts of the organization presents a greater menace to the state. The party member is a model for the rank and file of the mass. If he fails, the example for others is bad.

Murder, if given no counter-revolutionary significance, is punished by a maximum of ten ears. The gradations of punishment for the offense are based upon distinctions in keeping with the social danger of the murder. Murder motivated by jealousy, private gain or self-interest (all bourgeoisie urges) is the most aggravated form of the crime and carries a minimum sentence of eight years with a maximum of ten years in prison. The brutality or revolting character of the act does not interest the court—they believe the social danger of the criminal can be estimated only through consideration of the motives. The decision in a recent soviet murder trial is in point.

For weeks a young wife laid plans to kill her husband. She saved kopeks to purchase a knife and bought a long blade with a keen edge that assured efficiency in the gruesome work. Her husband, a good-natured loafer and drunkard, neglected the support of his family and spent his rubles for vodka. The wife, driven to desperation by his shiftlessness, but reluctant to divorce the idler, stabbed him to death as he slept and mutilated the body beyond recognition. The facts were all admitted in court, but the judge sentenced her to only three years imprisonment; he did not regard the woman as socially dangerous and her act had not had an anti-social effect upon the community. It had, on the other hand, salutary effects upon the ne'er-do-wells of the village. The sentimentality which kept the woman living with her husband and prevented her from securing a divorce was severely criticised, however, by the presiding judge.

Contrast this case to the affair of Konstantin, Andrii and Smirnov, three boys ranging in age from 20 to 23 years. All were graduates of a workers' high school and members of the Young Communists League, an organization that prepares the youth for party membership. Two of the boys had attended the school of mines and all were employed in soviet factories and government projects.

One night they returned to the school of mines, broke into the office of the treasurer, attacked him, bound and gagged his wife, stole 20,000 rubles from the safe and escaped. When apprehended the evidence against them was clear, but the trial lasted

Johanna Frets and Pines After the Count's Departure. Weeks Pass, and There Is No Word From Him. Then Her Father Goes To See the Ceremonies That Mark the Arrival of the Princess.

THIRD INSTALLMENT.

Gently she stroked his head, as he sat hunched in his chair. "I am sorry, Philip.'

BERDANIER

WHE heavy countenance sneered at him. "Oh, I thank you for the thought!"

"But you consented. Your consent was necessary."

"And still more urgently necessary to marry that baggage Catharine. Adolph happened to be finding favor in her eyes, and I sanctioned what they both desired before the jade could change her mind again, since not even my commands could have constrained the slighted Catharine to await your return or to marry you when it happened. At last perhaps you'll give me reason for the gentle force I've used with you." He lowered his voice to a grumbling note as he added: "I had no wish to see your brother Adolph extending his usurpation of your functions."

Count Anthony shrugged in sheer disgust. There was little love between him and his family, and covetousness ever nauseated him. "Let him usurp what he pleases."

The duke's swarthy face grew stern. He set his arms akimbo. "Here's frenzy! You'll let your younger brother give rein to unnatural ambition, and ride over you to the throne that should be yours?"

"Is that the aim, then? Will nothing less content him?"

"Must I make Adolph known to you?" wondered the duke, and he became sententious. "Like poets, princes are born, not made; born to a sacred trust from on high. Incalculable harm follows upon any disloyalty to that trust. How long do you suppose that Guelders would preserve its independence with Adolph on the throne?"

He spoke in the solemn, impressive manner that is born only of strong convictions. And perhaps no conviction was stronger in Charles of Burgundy—begotten of the adulatory phrases addressed to him from childhood—than that of the divine appointment and divine mission of princes.

Before Count Anthony could answer him, he continued on another note. "And that is not the only reason why I rejoice in your return. I am at the point of distraction, Anthony, and in need, in sorest need, of a trusty friend and more."

* * * *

The duke's tone, as he appealed to Count Anthony's loyalty, was unusually gentle and wistful, and his expression was entirely stripped of its habitual arrogance. Count Anthony, who loved him, was touched by his manner and melted from any lingering indignation. He has been accounted weak by the undiscerning because he was always weak in his resentments and ever ready to discard them. And now, to complete a reconciliation for which he had shown the need to be on his own side, Charles afforded him a mollifying if not quite accurate explanation.

"My fool of a governor of Zealand acted too straitly upon orders I issued at the time of your disappearance. Bear him no ill-will, Anthony. He's a faithful, loyal dog who obeys orders to the letter if without discretion, and apparently he is served by men of the same stamp. I blame not him, but myself, for what has happened to you; and I blame myself sorely. I would not have had you used as you have been used. and yet, by Saint George, I was never more glad to see any living man. Sit you there, my friend, while I recite my woes; and in the end you'll pity me."

He pushed Count Anthony forcibly into a chair, and thereafter for an hour and more, while soldier, prince and prelate cooled their heels in the antechamber, he poured into his cousin's sympathetic ears, the tale of his distractions.

"I was angry with you last month," he began, "when I held in Bruges my first chapter of the Knights of the Golden Fleece. You were absent from your place, a thing I do not lightly overlook in any man. Moreover, I needed you then; needed you as I need you now."

He strode on his short, powerful legs to the window and back, his brows darkened by his thoughts. "Taking full advantage of the privileges conferred upon them by the rules of the order, the brethren very plainly expressed hostile opinions on my general conduct of affairs."

Anthony was startled. He knew the existence of the privilege in that exalted knightly brotherhood, but had never dreamed of its being exercised against the sacred person of the duke himself, the order's natural head, the very fount of honor.

"They censured me with harshness especially to the nobles, alleging that my rigor in punishing faults is out of all proportion to my measures in rewarding virtue and services. They taxed me with parsimony. I hoard the revenues, they say, instead of scattering them in emulation of the princely lavishness of my father."

"Scattering them on themselves, they meant," quoth Anthony. "And you? What did you answer them?"

"What could I answer? I think anger made me dumb. That and the remembrance that who excuses himself accuses himself. Could I condescend to explain myself? I submitted in silence to their reproaches. I needed there an independent advocate to whip them into shame of their own words. That is what you would have done had you been there. That is where you failed me by your absence."

To this Count Anthony said nothing; but regret cast a little shadow over his countenance. The duke, pacing ever to and fro, railed on. They were not presumptuous, he declared beyond the license granted them by Duke Philip when their exalted order was founded; and yet they were presumptuous in that they pronounced upon insufficient knowledge.

"If I hoard my revenues, I do so against the fearful need that will soon be forced upon me, a need for which all my hoarding is inadequate, as will presently appear. Already last April in the state-general summoned for the purpose by the King of France, it was declared that Normandy must be retained by Louis. That was a fair beginning. To show me whither he was drifting, it was not necessary for him to add, as is reported to me, that the treaty of Conflans was wrested from him by undue influence. He began to tear it up when the states-general made that declaration touching Normandy. I tell you, Anthony, there is no faith in that shifty, foxy little knave. No treaty will bind him once he thinks it safe to break it. I have word that he is levying troops and organizing forces. He aims, I suppose, at the cities of the Somme. You see what is coming?"

"War, I suppose," said Count Anthony.

"War," Charles agreed. He stood erect, his jutting chin held high. "I welcome it. Since he wants war, he shall have it. I was made for war, I think, and this time, by Saint George, he shal learn it and remember the lesson. It is in preparation for war that I have been making this progress through the frontier provinces, and be sure I'll prepare thoroughly."

He swung away to the window again. Looking out into the courtyard, across which the rays of the sun were now aslant, he laughed grimly, and pointed.

"There go the constable and de Biche. De Biche, who was once my father's creature and is now the tool of King Louis. Saint-Pol, who, for his own profit, tried to be the friend of both sides and is faithful to neither, although today he holds the word of France. They were lately with me, bearers of lying pacific messages from King Louis, messages calculated to lull my alarm, while he arms to the teeth against me. He wants time."

The duke swung from the window again, and came striding back to the table, his hand on the hilt of his dagger. He laughed grimly, showing his strong teeth.

"So do I. Therefore, I pretend to believe them. To the revenues with whose hoarding I am reproached by the Knights of the Golden Fleece, I shall add levies to be made upon the Netherlands; gold to be transmuted into steel. The foxy Louis shall admire my alchemy In the Rhine provinces, throughout the empire, in the Cantons, in Italy, wherever men are to be hired, I'll hire them, and I'll put such an army in the field that my rascally brother-in-law of France shall pray to patch up the Conflans treaty again so that he may shelter himself behind it. I'll give him time, so that I may have time, myself, for this; for this and my marriage. My marriage! My marriage with the Prince Margaret of York!" He laughed harshly, ruefully.

"Men say," quoth Count Anthony, by way of felicitation, "that she is very fair."

"To the devil with her fairness!" roared the duke, who had wrought himself by now into a passion. He crashed his fist upon the table. "Anthony, if she were humped like a camel and tusked like a boar, I still must marry her, for the sake of the alliance with England. To this has Louis of France reduced me. Through my mother who was half Lancastrian, a quarter of my blood is blood of Lancaster; and I am to mingle this with the blood of York! Yet this, too, must I do to make my dominions safe against King Louis, and to consolidate against him this House of Burgundy, of which I am no more than the life tenant."

This last he spoke in a tone almost of awe, the man of Destiny alluding to the burden of his mission. Then he flung himself down in his great chair before the table, and looked across it at the grave-faced Count Anthony, who remained silent.

"You perceive my need of you, my urgent need of every friend in camp and council. The lances you may bring me out of Guelders shall be paid handsomely from these hoarded revenues. I'll need every man and every pike that you can muster. But more than those I shall need you, Anthony. You have the calm deliberateness I lack, and I can trust you where I can trust no other of these greedy self-seekers, who will stand by me just so long as they perceive no greater profit to be made elsewhere. Your judgment I trust implicitly. Your advice I know to be honest and sprung from love of me. You'll stay by me now, Anthony?"

He leaned forward, and flung an arm across the table, the powerful short-fingered hand supine and open.

The appeal was not one that Count Anthony could resist. Guelders must stand by Burgundy to the end that Burgundy should stand by Guelders in her need. So much policy demanded. And his personal affection for Charles of Burgundy demanded no less. For this had he returned; for this been dragged from his dreams to face realities, he who had sought realities afar and in vain. So he assured himself. But there was a sense of choking in his throat and a mist before his eyes, and in the heart of it the fair, delicate face of Johanna. Then the mist cleared. He fetched a sigh and took the proffered hand.

"Charles, I am yours for your need of me."

* * * *

Count Anthony welcomed the distraction of the activities now thrust upon him, and sought in them an anodyne for his heartache.

Three days after his interview with Charles of Burgundy, he descended upon his father's court at Nimeguen, to the surprise of all and to the dismay of some. His brother Adolph was absent, with the Burgundian court at Brussels, in attendance upon Madame Catharine, who was one of the ladies-in-waiting of the Dowager Duchess Isabella. Anthony was thankful for this circumstance, since he found opposition more than enough from the duke his father.

He submitted patiently to parental upbraidings on the score of his eccentricities and his reckless extravagances during his

What Was Justice In This Case?

The Murder of Mrs. Emma Harrington and How the Law Played Mouse With a Prisoner Before Making Up Its Mind

BY PETER LEVINS.

THE door of an apartment on West 190th street, Manhattan, opened one day in December, 1927, and let out a murderer. The same door, in a manner of speaking, let out of a condemned cell in Sing Sing the man who had been doomed to die for the crime.

As so often happens, several years passed between the date of the crime and the date when Justice finally made up its mind. For a long period the law played with its prisoner as a cat might play with a mouse, subjecting him to such torture as would do credit to the judicial systems of the Dark Ages. We can believe with Warden Lawes, of Sing Sing, that the man is now in a condition of mind which may lead eventually to insanity.

The apartment was that of Mrs. Emma Harrington, 39, wife of Guy Harrington, a stock company actor and manager. The woman was a native of Castle Rock, near Joplin, Mo., and had herself become an actress after her marriage.

She had recently been awarded an interlocutory decree of divorce in Binghamton, N. Y. She and her husband had been separated for two years. Since then she had not been without men friends.

Where there are men friends there are liable to be jealous rivals male and female—which somewhat complicates our Mystery of the Door.

Before her arrival in New York, supposedly on December 20, 1927, Mrs. Harrington had been in Binghamton, where she also had an apartment. On Wesdnesday, December 21, she visited Mrs. John Flynn, formerly superintendent of the 190th street apartment, who was now superintendent of a house at 1825 Riverside drive. Mrs. Harrington told Mrs. Flynn she planned to sell her furniture and sub-let her apartment, after which she would visit her mother in Missouri.

She said that she had advertised her furniture for sale.

That evening she called on Mrs. H. Peskowitz, wife of the landlord, to pay the rent. She also told Mrs. Peskowitz that she was leaving in a day or so to visit her mother.

On the following evening, Thursday the 22d, Mrs. Harrington was seen leaving a taxicab in front of the apartment house.

SCREAMS, STEPS, THEN SILENCE.

The next morning, at about 10:30 o'clock, Mrs. Lillian Holton, who lived in the apartment below, heard the screams of a woman, apparently in the Harrington apartment. Mrs. Bolton, according to her story to the police, went upstairs and rang the bell but got no answer. Later she heard steps on the stairs, then silence. She said she again went up, rang the bell and tried the door.

She said the door was locked.

Six days passed before the next event occurred. On the morning of Thursday, the 29th, Mrs. Margaret Ufer, another tenant, noticed that the door of the Harrington apartment was ajar. She notified the janitor, Mrs. Margaret Gronquist, who went out and told Patrolman John Daley. Daley called the Wadsworth avenue police station and Detective Gaetano Greco went to the place to look into this matter of the open door.

Greco walked up the four flights and entered the Harrington apartment. He saw that everything was in order, nothing apparently disturbed. Then he noticed, just outside the bathroom door, three drops of dried blood.

He pushed the door. Something blocked it. He peered around the edge of the door and beheld the body of a woman, clothed in a nightgown, one foot bare and one foot wearing a slipper. There were great quantities of dried blood under the head. The woman had been dead for several days.

Detective Greco, to his subsequent chagrin, thought that the woman had merely had a hemorrhage of the nose and bled to death. He conceded that it might possibly have been suicide. He so reported to his superior officer.

The medical examiner's office was not informed until 1 p. m. and it was 5 p. m. before Assistant Medical Examiner Raymond Miles arrived. Dr. Miles took a close look at the woman's head, found ten lacerations, most of them concealed by the woman's thick hair, and reported to the police that this person had not died a natural death, but had been murdered. Greco had made an error which was to cause his demotion.

Now the homicide squad went into action in earnest. Mrs. Harrington had apparently been slain by a robber. Her jewel box had been broken into, five valuable rings she was known to have possessed had disappeared, also a $500 caracul coat. And curiously, the mate to the slipper found on her foot had also disappeared.

Mrs. Harrington, the police decided, had slept in her bed, which was found pulled down. She had also had a cup of coffee, for an empty cup rested on the arm of a chair. The police thought that some one had come in answer to the woman's advertisement and had killed and robbed her. The matter of the locked door that was later found ajar did not enter into the case until a long while later.

The case did not attract much attention. The newspapers at the moment were glutted with big stories—Ruth Snyder and Judd Gray were about to be executed, Hickman had just been captured. Colonel Lindbergh was flying over Central America, and Alice was suing Kip Rhinelander.

Guy Harrington, the victim's husband, was appearing in "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em" in Wilkes-Barre, Pa. He told reporters he had nothing to say about the case. He had not seen his wife since the previous April, he said, and added that he had planned to marry Mrs. Grace Lake, of Binghamton as soon as his divorce became final.

However, when first informed about the tragedy, he was heard to mumble something about "that damned taxi driver." He refused to explain what he meant by this.

Another witness, Mrs. Clifford Sleeth, who occupied the apartment across the hall, was reported as saying that she saw Mrs. Harrington at 10:30 p. m. December 23, standing near the mail boxes on the main floor. Mrs. Sleeth said the actress was wearing her fur coat at the time.

FIRE ESCAPE LED TO THE BATHROOM.

Incidentally, on the Wadsworth avenue side of the house was a fire escape that, because of the steep grade of the street, could easily be reached by a person on the sidewalk. The fire escape led to the bathroom window, which was open at the top. There were smears on the inside ledge, such as might have been made by shoes, but no fingerprints on the glass or ledge.

One can see the possibilities—it might have been the man who answered the ad; it might have been a robber who entered via the fire escape; it might not have been a robber at all. The stolen property might have been a false lead.

And how did it happen that the door was locked for several days and open on the day the body was discovered, some six days after the crime?

The police were forced to confess that the mystery had them stopped. And it might easily have ended right there if, on the following January 5, 1928, some of Mrs. Harrington's stolen property had not been found in a room in the Hotel Taft, New Haven, Conn. That discovery set in motion a series of events which has only recently come to its last belated climax.

It developed that a certain man had stopped at the hotel with a young woman and had left without paying his bill, leaving behind some of Mrs. Harrington's jewelry and her fur coat. The man was traced to nearby cities and a taxi driver reported leaving a wallet containing several thousand dollars worth of negotiable bonds that the same man had fled from his cab, and some more jewelry.

Within a few hours of these discoveries the police announced that they were seeking Frederick W. Edel, alias Richard Hall, a native of Germany and an ex-convict, for the Harrington murder.

Edel was well known in certain Connecticut cities. He had engaged in the restaurant business in Meriden, had served a five-year term for robbery in Dannemora, N. Y., had been acquitted of the murder of an associate, John Mastriano, of Meriden, and had been suspected in the murder of another associate, David Dudley, also of Meriden. It was sad morever, that he had known Mrs. Harrington and had lived near her in New York.

According to the police, Edel had stayed at a hotel in Springfield, Mass., for six days, beginning December 23, the day Mrs. Holton heard the screams in the Harrington apartment.

Edel still might have eluded capture had he not set the postal authorities on his trail—an unfortunate thing for most any criminal. He scattered forged money orders across the country, was recognized by a postal clerk in Hopkins, Minn., on March 27, 1928, and was caught after a mile and a half chase.

In his statement to the authorities in Minnesota the wizened little criminal admitted that he had known Mrs. Harrington since 1920, and had seen her very shortly before her death, but he denied that he had murdered her. He admitted that he had the woman's jewelry and fur coat in his possession, but denied that he had ver been in her apartment.

His explanation of how he came into possession of the murdered woman's things is interesting.

He said he had met Mrs. Harrington on December 22, 1927, at 96th street and Broadway, and had dinner with her at the Hotel Pennsylvania, where he was staying. He said that they made a date for the next day, the 23d. He didn't see her, however, but a chauffeur came to his room at the hotel with two hat boxes and told him that Mrs. Harrington's clothes were in them.

"She'll meet you in Springfield," the chauffeur said, according to Edel.

Why she should meet him in Springfield was not explained. At any rate, he went to Springfield, he said, and waited for her there. When she didn't appear, he picked up a couple of girls, gave them some of Mrs. Harrington's jewelry (why he should give away the woman's property was not explained, either) and entertained the young women in Springfield and nearby cities.

JUSTICE TAKES A LONG SNOOZE.

We said early in this story that Edel may go insane. On second thought, maybe he's been insane for years. Certainly his actions and statements in connection with the Harrington case seem most irrational.

He was arraigned on April 9 before Judge William Allen and pleaded not guilty.

Then Justice proceeded to take a long snooze, so far as the Edel case was concerned. It finally bestirred itself into activity the following February, when Edel went on trial before Judge Charles C. Nott in general sessions. The trial opened February 19, nine months and ten days after the arraignment.

The prosecution was handled by Assistant District Attorneys James E. McDonald, John McGowan and Charles Moscowitz.

Most Often a Woman Is to Defend Ancient Superst

BY CHARLES P. HAVEN

CHIEF WILLIAMS, who succeeded William McFee as nurse of the engines on the San Blas, which ties up every so often at Atlantic avenue, was yarning of his experiences up and down the China coast, where he had voyaged some seven years before coming to the Atlantic routes. Williams, like most of the chiefs in the engine rooms of steamers, is a Scot, as is his predecessor, for that matter.

We were churing along past the Virginia Capes. Besides the chief there was the Old Man, Captain George Grant, no matter that he was several years the junior of any of us, he, being captain of the Blas, was still the Old Man. Then there was Chief Barnes. First mates are always "Chiefs" as are the engineers. And another "Chief," the chief steward, whose name was so elusive that we called him "Madagascar," for short.

That trip there were only five passengers for Central American ports. There was an invalid doctor and his nurse, a young woman who was going into a Havana hospital as a nurse, Robert F. Denvir, Jr., and myself.

So, that night found Bob, the Old Man, Chief Williams, "Madagascar" and myself seated on deck while the Blas forged toward the Florida Strait at about 13 knots.

No Whistling on Deck.

Sailors, even the officers of modern steamers, much as they scoff at the idea that they regard omens as important signs of coming good or bad luck, don't do the things that for centuries have been banned by tradition at sea. They don't whistle aboard ship; they don't welcome parsons, especially female parsons, as passengers; they don't disregard the warning of Saint Elmo; they don't scoff at the mention of Vanderdecken, the Flying Dutchman. At least they don't do these things in the hearing of other sailors!

There is one Old Man who has skippered a vessel of the Great White Fleet for 30 years, who flies into a rage if he hears anyone, including a passenger, whistle on deck. Such conduct drives him frantic. And many a young man has been brought up short by his command to "stop that infernal whistling on my ship!"

Women Bring Trouble.

This Old Man knows that whistling aboard ship brings dirty weather, and he needs no Finn's psychic gift to tell him so if he hears some blankety-blank landsman whistling aboard his ship!

This Old Man is, by the way, one of the most delightful characters plying the Atlantic. He is a survival of the old sail days, and has never sloughed off, thanks be, the picturesque vocabulary that was the possession of those ancient mariners. One of the delightful stories that night told by Captain Grant was the Old Man's reply to a dock official as he was warping his big ship into its wharf in the East river.

The dock official was trying to help the Old Man to get his ship into just the right relationship to the dock to allow for ease inunloading both passengers and cargo. His direction, somewhat after the style of some garage attendant who tries to direct you how to back your car into the impossible space he wishes you to put it, finally exhausted the patience of the Old Man.

Much to the consternation of the women passengers, they heard flying over their heads in the direction of the unhappy dock official, "What the blankety-blank do you think this is? A blankety-blank taxicab?"

Well, that over, the topic switched to superstitions. And most of them seemed to revolve about women.

Though the very ships themselves are female of gender, women are none too popular with sailors. Mostly women are bad luck, in their opinion. And many's the mutiny resulted in the old sail days when the Old Man announced to the fo'c's'le that he was going to take his wife along this trip, around the Horn to California.

Usually, the Old Man gave in, and refrained from taking his wife along. When he persisted in his intention, trouble always ensued.

Chief Williams and the Old Man were not sure whether it was the result of the woman's being aboard that the trouble came, or because of the mood into which the old salts in the foc's'le threw themselves by the working of their deeply held superstitions upon their imaginations.

"You know," the Old Man put in as the chief finished one of his rowdy tales of sailoring on the China coast, "sailors are a specially-privileged race of men in the eyes of churches. Sailors are exempt from purgatory, even though they die without benefit of clergy. That's why they don't care to have parsons along on a voyage. Parsons are not necessary agents of their being eased into paradise, as they are to landsmen.

"Did you ever hear of Fiddlers' Green? Well, Fiddlers' Green is an especially prepared place for sailors to go to after they pass inspection in Davy Jones' locker. You know, there was an early Pope, who was an especial patron of sailormen, he having been a sailor himself before he began to tread the way of holiness that led him to the throne of Saint Peter.

"And he decreed that sailors who lost their lives at sea were immune from any sentence to Purgatory, even though they died without benefit of clergy, as most sailors did in those days, and as many sailors do even now.

"Under the decree of the sailors' patron Pope, the souls of all sailors must pass inspection in Davy Jones' locker and, if they are found to have been true to the code of the sea and the traditions of sailormen since the days of Columbus, they are sent directly to Fiddlers' Green.

"Now, you will hear many descriptions of Fiddlers' Green. I mind an old sailorman who sailed with me out of Glasgow before the wartime. He was as hard an old shellback as you'd fine on the Seven Seas. And his description of what he expected in Fiddlers' Green was comparable to the delights a Nirvana-seeker will tell you awaits all who are faithful to Allah."

Of course, the discipline aboard ship is one of the strictest codes that exist among men. The captain is emperor of his domain. He is the dispenser of the high, the middle and the low justice; he is the chief high executioner; his word is far more absolute than that of a governor, or even a president of the United States. No judge on the bench, no police officer, no prince nor general has the absolute power possessed by a captain aboard his ship.

Tradition Over All.

But all this power will be forgotten if a sailor sees a traditional superstition of the sea being violated. The Old Man told us that night that on a previous trip from Tela, Honduras, he had brought back the body of a woman, the wife of an American stationed there, so she could be buried in her native Boston. The local undertaker had brought the body aboard and it had accidentally been placed in a forward-and-aft position.

Somewhat to the surprise of the Old Man, he received a visit in his cabin that afternoon from a foc's'le spokesman who asked: "Please, sir, beggin' your pardon, can't the corpse be placed athwartship, as is proper and seemly, so there won't be hard luck dogging the voyage?"

And, do you know, the Old Man apologized to the foc's'le hand, and saw to it immediately that the corpse was placed athwartship, as they have been since ever the Phoenicians sailed over the rim of the world.

Woman stowaways are the bane of a sailor's life. Only recently one was found aboard the George Washington of the United States Lines and the voyage across the Atlantic was so rough that she was delayed three days.

The Chief, his humorous features under the thatch of unruly red hair that adorned his head, for the moment devoid of the smile that usually played there, advanced the information that he had, himself, seen Vanderdecken, the Flying Dutchman, one night pass across the moon that swung over the Sea of Japan.

"Explain it, if you will, by declaring it was a mirage. Tell me that the sight was the result of a too-long stay in the east where magic seeps into one's mind, where the unreal and un-western touches every activity of one's of one's day. But, as sure as we sit here the Flying Dutchman crossed our bows that moonlit night. I saw her. The Mate, who was standing beside me, saw her. And several others saw her.

"We also saw Vanderdecken, himself, upon the quarter deck, and his cabin boy, doomed forever to sail with the blasphemer. She sailed by, silhouetted against the moon, and into the darkness. There wasn't a sound as she passed through the water. In fact, she seemed just to skim the surface. No creaking was heard from her canvas. And no orders sung out across the still night."

We were all agog, now. I had heard of the Flying Dutchman and her blasphemer-skipper Vanderdecken. But only vaguely did I know the story. So, importuned, Chief Williams told it to us that night as the ship headed south toward the gulf.

The Chief's Tale.

"Vanderdecken was a Dutchman of the old days when Dutchmen carried a broom lashed to their foremost to show the world that 'Dutchmen sweep the seas.' He, like many autocrats, feared neither man nor devil, it was his boast. He even became so swollen with pride as to turn blasphemer, and declare that he no longer feared even God.

"On a trip around the Cape he met with such storms that his sailors became alarmed and asked him to turn and run before the wind and give up his intention. But Vanderdecken was a stubborn man and the pleas of his sailors had no effect upon his purpose. He spent his time drinking, singing and cursing. The winds and seas smashed his ship's spars, tore her rigging and tangled her gear and cordage.,

"After several days of storm the heavens opened and the Supreme Being descended upon the poop of Vanderdecken's ship. The crew fell upon their faces and piously saluted their God. But the drunken Vanderdecken walked up to the Apparition and demanded what right He had upon his quarter-deck.

"The Vision commanded Vanderdecken to turn back and save his sailors and his ship. Vanderdecken's reply was a stream of blasphemy. He ran to a locker and, getting a set of pistols, fired upon his God. Vanderdecken was immediately struck helpless. He stood as a man with a palsy.

"'Then spake the Apparition: 'For your evil nature and for defying Me, you shall henceforth be condemned to sail the seas for ever alone, except for your cabin-boy, who shall attend you and he shall change into a demon, and the food he shall bring you each day shall be bitter and uneatable. And you shall have to stand all watches, day and night, for ever without rest. And your ship will be an evil phantom which shall haunt the seas and bring disaster to all who meet it.'"

Recovering our poise, we became bold again. I pooh-poohed any feeling of terror. Me! was the gist of my bragging. Why, I'm a man of iron! A Vanderdecken, himself, 'er, 'er, somewhat modified of course.

Just to show my bravery, I asked the Old Man if he had ever seen Saint Elmo's Fire.

"Yes, I have," he replied. "Several times."

Now this was double-crossing a fellow. Well enough to have heard others say they had seen it, but there was the Old Man declaring that he, in person, had seen it. Well, he couldn't bluff us.

"Tell us about it," I demanded, brave as you please.

"Well, one night we were making across the Western Ocean in the wartime. We were loaded with ammunition for the allies, out of New York, without lights. Suddenly across our yard-arm there ran a ball of fire. I was standing on deck talking with one of the mates. No sooner did I see the ball of fire, than he turned to me and said: 'Did you see that?' 'I did,' I replied. 'That was Saint Elmo's warning that dirty weather is making.'

"'Corpo Santo,' the ancients called it," continued the Old Man. "Columbus saw 'the Saint's Body,' with seven lighted candles in the round top and there followed a mighty rain and thunder.

"The aid of Saint Elmo was given to sailors after the captain of a Breton vessel rescued a man he saw floating in the sea. The rescued man identified himself as Saint Elmo and declared that always, thereafter, he would warn sailors of the approach of storms. So always, before a storm sailors see the Light of Saint Elmo dancing 'on the yard-arm.'"

"And was there a storm the next day after you saw the Light of Saint Elmo?" I asked the Old Man somewhat sarcastically, for I was a little sore at being spoofed.

"No. It didn't storm," was his amazing reply. "But we were torpedoed before we reached the coast of Ireland and the ship lost with the captain, mate and 40 hands. Three boats we succeeded in launching. Only the one I was in command of reached land. And that land was Saint Helena.

"We reached Saint Helena after 20 days, barely alive. One of the seamen, when the water became so low that I had to apportion it to one sip night and morning, went insane."

"What did you do about that?" I asked almost in a whisper.

"Oh, he drank salt water and jumped overboard before I had to shoot him." I got for answer.

What Was Justice In This Case?

Alexander I. Rorke, former assistant district attorney, headed the defense, assisted by Noah Brounstein and Ira Holley.

McDonald said he would prove that Edel went to the woman's apartment in answer to her advertisement and that on the morning of December 23 he killed her with a combination hammer and jimmy found in his grip.

Question—Was it possible that Edel kept the murder weapon all those weeks after the tragedy, especially after the police announced that they wanted him for the murdre?

The defense held that Edel had never been in the apartment. "No person living has been seen in that apartment," said Rorke. "The police and other officials bungled the investigation and either through indifference, incompetence or laziness, the case was badly handled. The state has a very poor case of circumstantial evidence and we'll prove it."

Women had played a large part in Edel's life—he admitted it himself—and women played the leading roles in his trial.

Mrs. Pauline Williamson, the murdered woman's landlady in Binghamton, told of seeing Mrs. Harrington pack for her trip to New York, and of seeing three $100 bills and a $50 bill.

Little May Flynn, 10, daughter of Mrs. John Flynn, told of Mrs. Harrington's visit, and how she (May) accompanied the exactress when the latter arranged for the advertisement in the paper.

Miss Catherine Lopez, attractive brunette, told of being with Edel and Miss Emily Grayson in various Connecticut cities and identified certain articles she saw in his bag, including the small nickelplated hammer.

Miss Lopez said that while they were in New Haven she became suspicious of "Mr. Hall," as she knew him. She said that while he was asleep she got the key to his suitcase out of his vest and looked into the bag. She saw the hammer, she said, as well as letters, etc., and a wedding ring inscribed, "From Guy to Emma."

Miss Grayson said the man had given her a diamond ring, identified as having belonged to Mrs. Harrington, and said he had offered her the caracul coat. She had taken it at first but then gave it back.

Miss Betty Jarvis, another young woman Edel had entertained, testified she met him on December 23 at the Clinton Hall hotel, Springfield. She said she saw him at 7:30 p. m., December 23. Then she changed her testimony to put the time of meeting at noon of that day. Recalled to the stand later, she said that her original testimony was correct. It was a very important point.

She also testified that she noticed a spot on his vest that resembled blood. She asked him about this and he said that he had been in a fight and sustained a bloody nose.

Dr. Alexander K. Gettler, chief toxicologist at Bellevue hospital, testified that the blotches on the defendant's vest were bloodstains.

Question—Is it possible that Edel continued wearing a vest, stained with a victim's blood, all those weeks after the tragedy?

Other women witnesses, occupants of the apartment house, testified. Harrington took the stand and contributed his bit. Julian C. Labin, proprietor of the Taft hotel in New Haven, identified articles found in Edel's room, and the state rested its case.

When the time came for Attorney Rorke to put in his defense, he announced there would be no defense, that the state had failed to prove a case against his client. He spoke about the door that was locked and later found ajar and added that, "By the testimony of the state's own witnesses, this defendant at the time the door was found open was on his way from Springfield, Mass., to Hartford, Conn."

The jury on March 7 deliberated for 4 hours and 30 minutes and returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree. Edel showed no emotion when the decision was announced.

It was asserted, after the verdict, that if Edel had gone on the stand the prosecution would have shown, through yet another woman witness that he was the man who a month before had attacked and robbed her in her home on West 181st street, when he called in response to an advertisement. The state had held that he had never known Mrs. Harrington until he called in answer to the ad.

Edel was sentenced to die during the week of April 22, but as usual an appeal automatically postponed the execution. When the court of appeals affirmed the verdict, the date of execution was set for December 12. December came and the defense asked Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt for a reprieve on the grounds that new evidence had been uncovered which would prove Edel's innocence.

* * *

EDEL PREPARES HIMSELF FOR DEATH.

But December 12 dawned and there was no word from the governor. Edel went from his cell in the condemned block into the pre-execution chamber. Evening came. He had his "last meal," his head was shaved for the electrode, he prepared himself for death—and at 10:30 p. m., half an hour before the scheduled moment of execution, Governor Roosevelt reprieved the prisoner until the week of December 30.

Nine months and more had passed since this man's conviction, yet not until he was within 30 minutes of death could Justice decide that its work was not yet done.

But this was only the beginning of Edel's torment.

Mention of new evidence interested the New York Evening Telegram and on December 22, two years to the day after Mrs. Harrington was supposed to have been seen alive last, that paper assigned MacGregor Bond, a reporter, to an investigation of the case on behalf of the doomed man.

Bond sought out various persons who had been witnesses in the trial and various others who had not been witnesses. He visited the family of Mrs. Sleeth, who had been dropped from the list of witnesses and who had died since. Mrs. Sleeth had been reported as saying she saw Mrs. Harrington the evening of the 23d, some 12 hours after the screams were heard by Mrs. Holton. Members of the Sleeth family were sure Mrs. Sleeth had said she'd seen Mrs. Harrington the evening of the 23d.

So was the New York Times reporter who had talked with Mrs. Sleeth after the body was found.

This, of course, was an important point for, if Mrs. Harrington was alive on the evening of the 23d, then Edel was innocent of her murder. The police had been able to trace his movements from early in the afternoon of the 23d.

The reporter gathered plenty of evidence of the woman's intimacies with men other than her husband. One of them was William G. Hoffman, an interior decorator of Detroit, and another was William (Mickey) Tully, a chauffeur. This was significant, also, since the state had maintained in the trial that the murdered woman had been a model of chastity.

Bond went to Detroit and learned that Hoffman had recevied a post card from Mrs. Harrington at about the time of the crime. The Detroit police records showed, according to Bond, that Detective Ray Gillette had sworn that the card was postmarked December 26, 1927. Unfortunately Hoffman, since married, had destroyed the card. He said the postmark was blurred and he couldn't say for sure whether it was December 23 or 26.

Defense Attorney Rorke brought this to the attention of the governor, charging that the New York authorities had suppressed the post card evidence.

Late in December Governor Roosevelt granted a second reprieve, this one being for 30 days. A petition for a new trial was filed before Judge Nott, with Prosecutor McDonald joining in the petition. The January 28, postponing the execution until February 17.

* * *

ANOTHER POSTMARK ENTERS THE CASE.

Bond in the meanwhile was busy gathering affidavits and other statements tending to cast doubt on the prisoner's guilt. In Omaha, Neb., he found Gerald W. Resner, who stated that he had a restaurant in New York in 1920, that Edel had worked for him, and that Edel and Mrs. Harrington had been intimate at that time.

Mrs. Harrington's sister, Mrs. Leonard Hand, forwarded from Joplin a letter she had received from the slain woman at about the time of the crime. It was postmarked 2 a. m., December 23, 1927, and bore the number 18. Bond found this number was made by a cancelling machine in the general postoffice, 8th avenue and 33d street, which serves the neighborhood of the Hotel Pennsylvania.

Edel, you will remember, had stated he had dinner with Mrs. Harrington at the hotel the evening of the 22d. The assumption was that Mrs. Harrington mailed the card in the vicinity of the hotel after they'd dined.

Is the reader confused? Well, so was Justice.

The plea for a new trial was argued before Justice Nott on February 10. On February 17 Nott asked the governor to grant yet another stay. Roosevelt complied, setting the execution for the week of March 31. On March 14, Nott denied the motion, holding that the new evidence was hearsay and hence inadmissable in a court of law.

That shifted the whole burden to the governor. He waited until March 29 and then decided to call a halt to this slow torture of the man in the death house. He commuted the sentence to life, stating that the evidence gathered since the trial had created a doubt in his mind. He said that several of the jurors had appeared before him and told him that if the new evidence had been presented at the trial, it would have created a reasonable doubt in their minds.

As soon as his innocence is clearly established, the governor indicated, Edel will be released.

The Truth About Baldness - Falling Hair

There are causes of baldness that cannot be cured.

If the hair roots are dead don't waste your money on any remedy or contraption. Nothing will bring dead roots to life.

But many cases of baldness and falling hair are caused by temporary illness and poor circulation.

The blood feeds the hair roots. An insufficient supply of blood to the scalp means starved roots.

Then falling hair and baldness result.

This condition is easily combated.

Apply Japanese Oil to the bald spot by rubbing in vigorously for 2 minutes a day. Don't use more than a few drops.

Results may come slowly at first, but keep up the treatment and you'll be rewarded.

New hair generally starts in 3 to 4 weeks. After new hair (the fuzz) grows use Japanese Oil twice a week until the hair is two to three inches long.

Japanese Oil is an antiseptic liniment that has successfully relieved aches and pains for 46 years.

Now people are using it to promote hair growth and prevent falling hair by stimulating scalp circulation.

Try it yourself. You've nothing to lose and everything to gain.

All Druggists Sell Japanese Oil.

Writing---

a source of income that many people neglect

MANY people who should be writing never even try it because they just can't picture themselves making "big money." They are so awe-struck by the fabulous stories about millionaire authors that they overlook the fact that $25, $50 and $100 or more can often be earned for material that takes little time to write—stories, articles on home or business management, sport, travels, recipes, etc.—things that can be easily and naturally written, in spare time.

"I sold my first article last week. It was a short one entitled 'Baby's Sun Bath.' There were 750 words that brought me $25.00 and an invitation to send more."—Mrs. Mabel V. Baker, James Block, Room 20, Fort Madison, Iowa.

"Since enrolling with the N. I. A. I have written several articles for health publications that have been accepted. I am now engaged in the preparation of some articles on church music and on business."—Arthur S. Pettit, 3681 So. Burlington Av., Los Angeles, Cal.

Mrs. Drusilla Crankshaw, 28 Irving St., Cambridge, Mass.: "You can imagine how thrilled your over-fifty-year-old cub was when she opened her mail early this week to find a fifty-dollar check for a description of a trip which she took last August."

You, too, can learn to write! How? By WRITING!

The Newspaper Institute of America offers an intimate course in practical writing—a course as free from academic "isms" and "ologies" as a newspaper office—a course as modern as the latest edition of this morning's paper.

Week by week, you receive actual assignments—just as if you were right at work on a great metropolitan daily. Your writing is individually corrected and constructively criticized. A group of men with 182 years of newspaper experience behind them are responsible for this instruction. Under such sympathetic guidance, you will find that (instead of vainly trying to copy someone else's writing tricks) you are rapidly developing your own distinctive, self-flavored style. You are learning to write by writing—acquiring the same experience to which nearly all well-known writers of short-stories, novels, magazine articles, etc., attribute their success.

The time required is less than one year, the cost not more than a month's living expenses at a resident college.

How you start

We don't want any N. I. A. student to waste his time or money. For this reason, we have prepared a unique Writing Aptitude Test. It tells whether you possess the fundamental qualities necessary to successful writing—acute observation, dramatic instinct, creative imagination. It's free; there's no obligation. You'll enjoy this test.

GUEST-TOWELS SHOULD BE SEEN, NOT SOILED—By Sam Hellman—

TALKING of the tariff on axe-handles," remarks the missus, "did I tell you that the Mellishes and Joe Davis are coming down for the week-end?"

"Talking of the walrus-shooting in Baffin bay," I returns, "you have not, but bad news is bad news wherever you hear it."

"I thought," says Kate, "that you liked Joe Davis?"

"I do," I comes back, "but there are not enough Joe Davises in the United States and southeastern Siam to compensate even for a fraction of a Mellish. If I had my choice between an acute attack of sinus trouble and a Mellish, I'd take inflammatory rheumatism. Imagine Ira and his skillet-wrestler infesting this place for three days! How do you expect to amuse those blah-beans?"

"That's where I was clever," observes the wife, sweetly, "in marrying a clown. I'm counting on you to keep all and sundry in gales of laughter and monsoons of mirth from—"

"Yeh?" I cuts in. "Well, you'd better have your hopes re-ground. You'll find 'em choken with carbon and missing on all cylinders. I may be a pretty wit, but I'm certainly not going to waste my talents on the Mellish miasmas."

"Oh, yes you will," she predicts. "Your crudities and gaucheries will land the laughs, no matter what you do or say."

"What's this gaucherie gag?" I inquires.

"It's French," explains Kate, "for a lad who has two left hands and all of whose fingers are thumbs."

"Is that so?" says I, and that defeats her. She has no comeback, so she changes the subject.

"Do you know anything about anagrams?" she asks.

"I didn't even know they were sick," I replies. "What are they and what do I care?"

"They're a game," explains the frau, "that's being played nowadays by all the intelligentsia, authors, and so forth and fifth."

"I see," says I. "What does it take the place of—log-rolling and back-patting?"

"It's quite simple," goes on the missus. "You take a word like dog, for example, and scramble it with an 'o' and what do you get?"

"I don't know," I tells her. "I haven't scrambled any dogs lately. What do you get and what does it get you when you get it?"

"You get 'good'," returns Kate.

"'Good dog,' you mean?" I queries.

"No, no," says she. "Just 'good.' Don't you see—'d-o-g' scrambled up with another 'o' added becomes 'good'?"

"Have it your way," I shrugs. "But I'm agin this scrambling. What Webster has joined together let no man tear asunder. I'm opposed to taking a word that's served long and honorably, introducing a strange letter to it and turning it into something mongrel that's neither fish nor flesh nor good Finan Haddie."

"The trouble with you," sniffs the wife, "is that the game's too deep for you to understand."

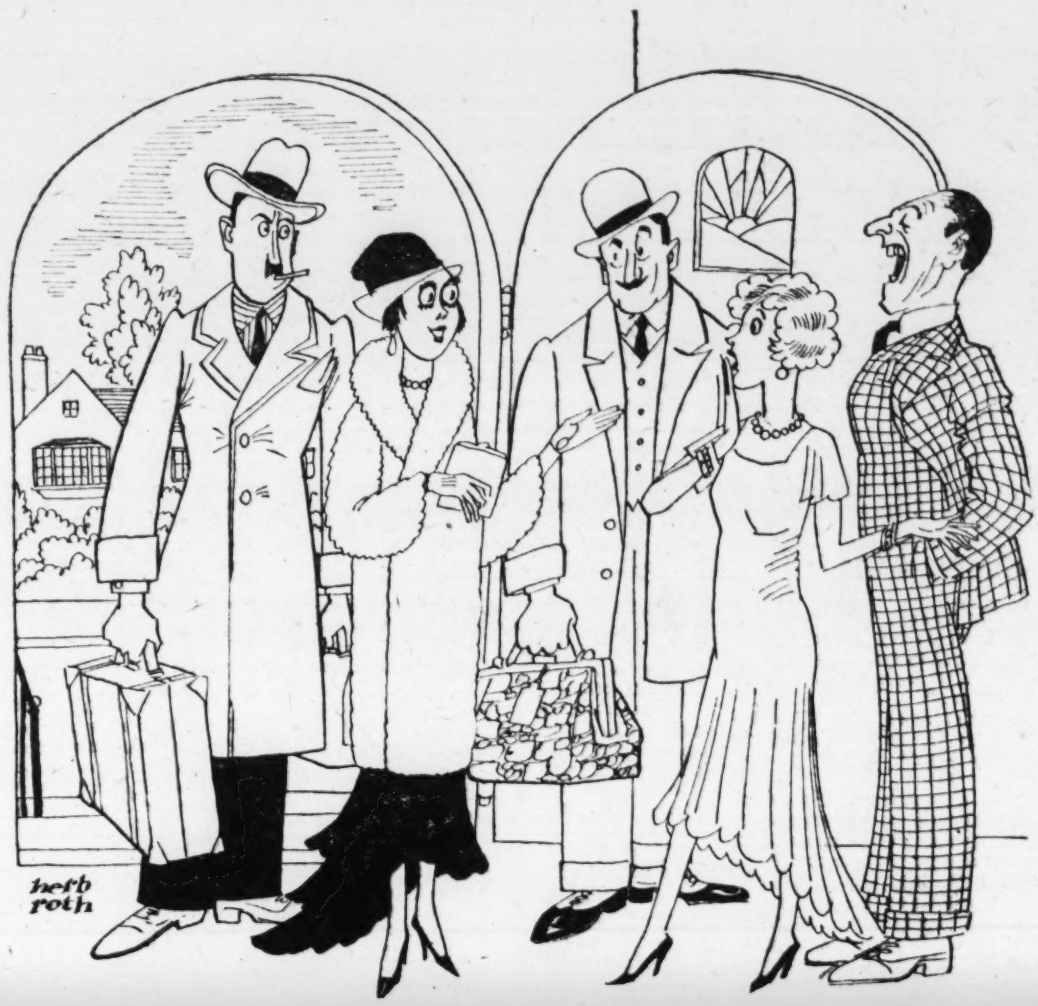

"Don't be a sil on Saturday," I snaps. "Anybody studying to be a moron can scramble words. Here's a quick one for you. Scramble 'leaves' with a 't' and what's the answer?"

"I give up," says Kate, after a bit of skull work.

"'Tea-leaves,' of course," I informs her.

"It's just too bad," sighs the missus. "I thought we'd be able to kill some of the week-end with anagrams, but it looks like we'll just have to play cards and hold hands."

"Just about that time a car rolls up to Second-Mortgage Villa and out steps the Mellishes and Joe Davis. Joe's a buddy of mine, but the Mellishes, to me, are something the angora's dragged in. Minnie Mellish is the stupe of stupes. A couple of battling cats could climb through her head without leaving a scratch.

"You're just in time," I tells her. "We're just about to start a snappy game of anagrams. You're, of course, familiar with anagrams?"

"You're just in time," I tells her. "We're just about to start a snappy game of anagrams. You're, of course, familiar with anagrams?"

"I should say I am," says she. "You ought to see the anagrams I got on my linens."

"It's just too bad," I murmurs to the wife. "I thought we'd be able to kill some of the week-end with anagrams, but it looks like we'll have to play cards and hold hands. How are you at holding hands?"

"Pretty good," returns Minnie. "I made two grand slams in contract yesterday afternoon and—"

"Fine," I interrupts, "but if you'd been holding the kind of hands I have in mind, you'd have been set at least six hundred, doubled and re-doubled with all the honors up in Mabel's room."

"That'll be about all for you," scowls the frau. "We'd better all dress for dinner."

"It's going to be a good one, too," I promises. "The neighbors have brought in all kinds of stuff. I hope you folks like canned trip and warmed over spinach."

"They're my favorite form of bird life," grunts Davis. "Take me back to the library, kid. I'm thirsty for something to read."

I leads Joe to a room in back of the house that we call the library on account of the telephone book being kept there, and brings forth a bottle of sarsaparilla.

"Just leave me here the whole week-end," suggests Davis.

"Don't you care about anagrams?" I inquires.

"Not the ones on Minnie's linens," says he. "Why did you invite me with that flop and her meal ticket?"

"Well," I returns, "the wife asked you as a kind of concession to me. She thinks you're a bum and therefore suitable company for me."

"I'm not a bum," declares Davis.

"I know it," says I, "and I've come near to convincing Kate that you're not but—"

"Aren't you men going to dress?" asks the wife, coming to the library at this juncture.

"I'm sorry," says Davis, "but I've just heard that my Uncle Anthrax has been gored to death by a wild spruce in the Maine woods and I must leave at once."

"A telegram?" inquires Kate.

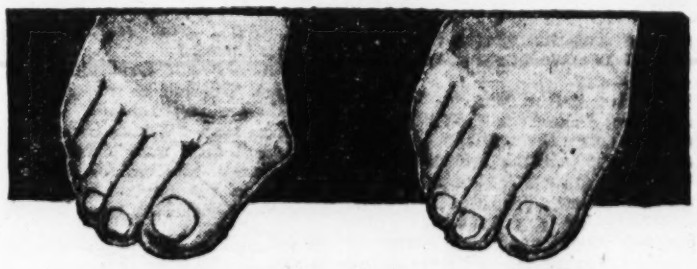

"No," returns Joe, "an anagram."

Beware the Young Lion

tion. "That was damn good work. You ought to have been a soldier. Why--why you'd be a colonel at your age."

"So I've been told," grinned the American. "That was the drawback. I've got a field marshal complex."

"I know," laughed the boy. "I've had—am having some. Whatever you feel you've got in you the service mandarins tie you down to a subaltern's pips and a village policeman's job. And there you stay, your brain and heart drying up from sheer dullness, waiting for the old men above you to die off. Maybe you're right in remaining as you are."

"I guess I am, seeing what I mean to be," said Lee Washington. He shot a shrewd glance at the boy. "But feeling like that, why don't you cut loose and make a name and fortune on your own?"

"I'm a soldier," said the boy stiffly, "however I grouse. There's a—a sort of tradition to uphold, a duty. I've got to go on with it, even though I've got to hurry things if I can, too."

That meant taking Savaran. Rex Sefton because of his youth, his official manner, and because he knew no native language but Swahili would have been hopeless in tracing Savaran. He could never extract a particle of news from the villages they passed or the caravans they met. Lee Washington never failed. The big man was master of Africans and their minds. A few soft words in their own dialect and the most sullen black men became chatty. Always Savaran was heading for the Gran Fess and always Lee Washington was able to pick up his trail.

"You're a ruddy marvel," cried the boy. "I should never have trailed the beggar but for you. I'm beginning to feel that Savaran himself would have to be a bigger wonder than he is to beat you."

"You have discovered our secret," grinned Lee Washington. "I am the one man in the world Savaran fears."

IV.

They made first rate partners. The American was wise, brilliant in his experience and method, and genial good company. Rex Sefton was something more than out of the rut good looking. He was cheerful, keen, hardy and a ready learner. On no less an occasion than their brush with the Arabs he had interposed his big body and ready pistol between Lee Washington and a slashing scimitar.

That was the sort of thing the American could not forget, even though he repaid it by nursing the youngster through a bout of fever, sitting with him through two lightheaded nights. Many things, indeed, made him love the boy and not the least of them was his generosity of spirit. There was no rancor even about his hunting of Savaran. He actually admired the bizarre rascal for the touch of romance he brought to a humdrum age.

"If you feel like that about him, why go gunning for him?" demanded Lee Washington.

"Why go hunting lions?" smiled the boy, "and Savaran is the biggest lion in Africa."

"I suppose so," grunted Lee Washington, "and anyhow the cash on his head is a small fortune."

"Damn the cash," cried the boy. "Thank goodness I can't touch it."

"What's that?" demanded the startled American.

"Government officers are barred under British rule. I'm glad to say. I'm not saying I don't expect things out of it, but they'll be in line with my own service, not Judas money."

"A rank and a station worthy of Crystal Lind," grinned Lee Washington. "Nice girl, Crystal—and pretty."

"Crystal!" Rex Sefton was on his feet, his eyes blazing. "Damn you, Washington, have you been going through my pockets?"

"Didn't have to," said the American genially. "You talked quite a lot when you had fever. Also the pillow of a camp bed is no sort of hiding place for that photo you carry about with you. It must have dropped to the floor a thousand dozen times while I soothed your heated brow."

"Well, we are engaged," said the boy half resentful, half captivated by the strange fierce charm of the man. "She wants to join me out here as soon as possible and I want it even more. But you know how things are. How can a man bring a girl like that out to a pest hole post like mine on pay like mine? And it'll be years before I get a step up. Years of waiting——"

"So you decided to take a short cut up by 'chopping' Savaran?"

"The man who takes Savaran is a made man," said the boy.

"Or a dead one," Lee Washington corrected grimly.

"You've got to take a big risk for a big prize. I'm going to get him—or bust."

"And that," said Lee Washington, "is going to include the whole Gran Fess nation, I suppose."

"The Gran Fess nation," frowned the boy. "What do you mean? They're at peace, and they've never given trouble to whites anyhow."

"To whites—no," said the big man. "But along their frontiers are as fat a packet of rich tribes as ever invited conquest, and the Gran Fee are good fighting stuff. Morever, their queen, the Kola Ambar, has lately been afflicted with such a heady draught of progress—mainly Paris jewels and frocks introduced through the Belgian Congo—that the court cries out for money to meet her bills. As the Gran Fess resent taxes wth the sword, conquest is the exchequer's only hope."

"And Savaran means to lead them in such conquests?" frowned the boy.

"That to begin," said the big man genially, "with more to follow. Ambar, the queen, has signified by eight previous attempts that matrimony has become almost a settled habit with her."

"What! He'll marry a nigger?" cried the boy in disgust.

"Nigger be darned," snapped Lee Washington, strangely touched to anger. "She's pure Arab with a lineage that goes straight back to Solomon's hundred and fifth wife. And she's a beauty, too, as only an Arab queen can be."

"But still a native. And for a white man to marry color," the boy shrugged in contempt. "Still, I ought to settle Savaran's hash before that appears."

"You'll follow him—even among the Gran Fess?"

"I'd follow him into the throne room of Potsdam if he was heading that way," cried the boy fiercely. "I'll get him even if I have to tear him out of the very heart of his own bodyguard."

"And that'll be a sight worth watching," grinned Lee Washington, and no doubt that was why he did not leave Rex Sefton at the Gran Fess border, as he had promised, but remained with him even to the coming of the Gran Fess impis.

V.

The semi-Arab horde came on them two days after they had crossed the Gran Fess border, at dawn and as they broke camp. At the first flood of tall, fierce fuzzy haired warriors from the bush, Rex Sefton was rapping his orders; excellent orders that should have surrounded their camp with a breastwork of saddle packs—only his askari did not heed them. They looked towards Lee Washington instead.

Rex Sefton suspecting nothing, shouted: "Make them jump to it, Lee, A bold front may bluff them."

"How does one bluff ten thousand spears?" asked Lee Washington. "Besides they may not be unfriendly."

There came a rush of tall demons.

Thousands of voices were roaring as one, and it was one word they roared, "Zavarani! Zavarani!"

"Savaran!" gasped the boy. "They're crazy. They think Savaran's with us."

"O, they're not entirely wrong," said the American. He strode forward, right hand high in a superb gesture, and at his gesture the shouting redoubled. . .

And Rex Sefton understood at last and gasped.

Lee Washington's huge beard had gone, his spectacles, his bulbous nose had gone, even his bulk. He stood there in the harsh sun as lean as a fighting panther, his eagle face and bright eyes ablaze at the greeting of armies—his armies!

"Savaran!" gasped Rex Sefton.

Two silk clad warriors led sleek blood mares forward.

"Mount," said Savaran crisply, "and ride by me. We ride to the queen."

"I'll see you damned," cried the boy in sudden fury. "What's more you stay, too. You're a dead man if you move, Savaran."

Savaran laughed fiercely down at the pistol in the boy's hand: "There are ten thousand spearmen here, Rex. Do you shoot them all?"

"We'll put up a fight first," snarled the boy.

"We?" mocked Savaran. "Who stands behind you?"

Rex Sefton swung a wild glance back at the askari his money had hired. They were cheering Savaran as wildly as the Gran Fess warriors.

"You've won them over, you treacherous beast," Rex Sefton cried. "All right, then." He lifted his pistol and fired point blank at the spider spare adventurer's breast.

The pistol clicked feebly four times, no explosions came, and Savaran laughed.

"Good boy, Rex," he said. "I knew you had the pluck of a wild cat. That's why I took no risks." The boy choked and put his hands to his face. "Play up, man," snapped Savaran, "and mount. Can't you see I'm helping you save face? You'll ride before the queen at Savaran's side."

The boy mounted mechanically. A flutter of wild riders closed round them and they rode off between wildly cheering ranks. Savaran, his bright eyes missing nothing, cried triumphantly:

"Fine stuff, Rex. First rate fighting material. With these I'll have an empire in a year."

"Damn you," snarled the boy. "Why did you play this filthy trick on me?"

"Trick, maybe," cried Savaran, "filthy—no! Don't you recognize the daring of a master when you meet it?"

"You made use of my helpless position at Bemoy——"

"Made use!" the eagle face twisted in its dry fierce laugh. "Boy, haven't you grasped the meaning of Savaran yet? It was I who made your position hopeless. I was the gree-gree man who scared your 'boys' into bolting. It was a word from me that made Ntila run. Savaran leaves nothing to chance. I meant you to turn to Lee Washington as your only hope—as, indeed, I was."

"Damn you, you're made me the laughing stock of Africa," cried Rex Sefton. "All because I trusted a liar——"

"Savaran does not lie. I told you plainly I would not join you in hunting Savaran," cried the lean man.

"You told me plainly time and time again that you had word from natives that Savaran was heading for the Gran Fess——"

"Well, wasn't he?" asked the lean man with a flash of white teeth. "I had an appointment with the Gran Fess, and Savaran never fails an appointment no matter what redoubtable young lion stands in his path."

His bright eyes studied the misery strained face of the youngster.

"Stiffen up, Rex," he said. "It was a big gamble in which we both risked big things. You challenged Savaran, and a devilish stiff challenge, too. You barred my way, you set all Bemoy itching for blood money. You smashed my chances of reaching the Gran Fess on my own by frightening the man I depended on into withholding carriers and money. You had me in a corner, Rex, and the only way out of it was to get you to carry me in safety through a wilderness of enemies. It was a stroke after Savaran's own heart, so I dared the gamble."

"And won," groaned the boy. "And what of me? Do you jail me or hang me or what?"

"Not necessarily either," grinned Savaran. "I like you, Rex. Also you are a good soldier. Within a month there will be campaigning here such as your service will never offer you, with promotion and rewards to match."

"I'm a soldier," said the boy fiercely, "but a British soldier, not a dirty filibuster. I'll see you in hell first."

"You'll see me," cried Savaran with his eagle's gesture, "on the throne beside the Kola Ambar."

Before the boy could find the suitable venom for a reply Savaran spurred ahead to where an old gray Arab with an anxious face was waiting to talk with him.

After three hours riding they came to the maze of mud huts that made the capital of the Gran Fess. Into the great palaver place they rode amid a whirl of cheers, and across it to where, incongruous as a wart on a face, one of those tipsy cake and over ornamented villas that French millionaires build on the Riviera stood bright amid the houses of mud.

"The royal palace," said the sardonic voice of the lean king maker at Rex Sefton's side. "The Kola Ambar has a feeling for progress . . . There she is on the terrace."

Rex Sefton looked quickly, said quickly: "Good God! She's lovely."

And indeed, Ambar, queen of the Gran Fess was. She was a slim and electric creature; golden skinned, delicate of feature. And there shone from her splendid eyes that burning ardor that tells of the quick and untrammeled passion of the tropics.

"Not bad for a—Nigger," grinned Savaran.

"Nigger! She's white," cried the boy thickly, "and wonderful."

Savaran looked at him with bright sardonic eyes.

"Certainly, a wonderful Arab princess—but a native all the same," he reminded. "And for a white man to admire her——!"

The boy answered nothing. He stared at the golden queen who stared back at him.

"Wonderful, eyes," frowned the lean adventurer following his own thoughts. "But beware of the women of the east, my son, however wonderful. She's decided she won't be queen of half northwest Africa just now, if you please, but wil take a slap at the Belgians instead, because they give her only a ten gun salute where her dignity demands nineteen."

They dismounted, bowed before the Kola, who cried in French, of which she was rather proud:

"Welcome Zavarani, sword of kings and humbler of the Belgians to be," and gave a slim hand for his wry lips to kiss. And presently she was saying in the direct way of the Arab:

"And thy friend, who is the most beautiful of all men, how is he called and what is he, Zavarani?"

"He is Steffi, an English soldier, O queen of loveliness as well as men. And he is a riddle, too. I am yet to be sure whether I am his prisoner or he mine."

"I will solve thy riddle," said the Kola Arbar, her eyes glowing with a new fire as she stared at Rex Sefton. "He will come to my palace, for he is beautiful. I think he will be the next man I marry."

Savaran's fierce face grew grim. Suddenly he felt again, as he had felt when with Mbotu, that as Napoleon had his Wellington, so this boy might be his destiny.

VI.

Savaran did not like this new Rex Sefton at all. The boy stood dressed in the embroidered silks of a court dandy.

Savaran glared at him; Savaran said with harsh ferocity: "What am I going to do with you, you young jackal? You're spoiling my plans."

"I mean to," said Rex Sefton with a strained coldness. "And what can you do?"

"Today," said Savaran grimly, "I warned the queen that you are a Roumi spy, sent expressly to undermine her throne."

"She told me about that," said the boy with a sort of wretched mockery. "We both laughed over it."

"Yes, I wanted to know if she told you

Your Flower and Vegetable Garden

By W. Elbridge Freeborn

ANNUALS FOR THE OUTDOOR LIVING ROOM.

THERE are numbers of annual flowers that may be planted in the outdoor living room that will add beauty and color to it for the summer. One of the most pleasant and interesting phases of the present vogue for beauty out of doors, is this growing demand for out-of-doors living rooms. There is not a thing more pleasant than to sit in one of these attractive living rooms late in the afternoon of a hot summer day, particularly if it comes after a hot day spent in the city.

Anyone who has planned and planted an outdoor living room will tell you it is one of the most fascinating gardening experiences. It is an interesting problem to start with. Its design stimulates the imagination and with each new plant, seed or bulb that goes to make its carpet, walls or draperies, there comes another new idea, for a different sort of decoration.

From earliest spring, when the crocus reminds us of spring, followed by other spring flowering bulbs and flowering shrubs, throughout the summer with the summer flowering bulbs and the annual flowers on into the fall, when we enjoy the autumn colors throughout the winter when our evergreen walls and berried plants add beauty, this room is interesting and beautiful. Any decorator will say that it is a simple matter to make a room beautiful, but to make it interesting, requires personality. The out-door living room gives us an ideal place to express this personality.

In our home the carpets must be swept and cleaned and occassionally replaced, and the same things are neecssary in our outdoor living room. This is the proper time of the year for the carpet to be patched with the addition of more grass seed and a liberal application of fertilizer. The method that is generally followed in this spring patching of the carpet, is to cut the grass very closely, rake off all of the trash, sticks, rocks and dead grass with a steel rake. This raking should be done very vigorously in order that the top crust of the ground be slightly broken. After this has been done, broadcast the seed over the bare spots, apply a liberal amount of fertilizer over the entire lawn and roll, or firm in some other manner. It is also a good plan to soak the ground thoroughly after this work has been completed. Be sure to let the water sprinkler run for an hour or two at each spot.

The care of the border planting is also important. We mean by border planting, the planting of evergreens that make our walls. The care of these plants is particularly important the first season. The soil in the bed or border should be cultivated, giving it the same treatment that would be given a garden in which one was raising prize flowers or vegetables. After the soil has become packed from rains or watering, cultivation should be done as soon as the ground has dried out enough to be worked easily. The purpose of this is to keep the ground loose about the roots and to preserve the moisture in the soil. Surface cultivation provides a layer of finely pulverized soil through which the natural capilary action of the water in the soil is discouraged. The fine earth acts as a mulch of the simplest form and thereby discourages evaporation.

The sight of the bare ground is somewhat objectionable, but if the beds are kept neatly edged, this apeparance will be good. The good that is done to the plants will more than offset this objection.

ZINNIAS.

Another old-fashioned flower that will add a variety of color to our out-of-door living room is the zinnia. The beauty of the zinnia lies in two characteristics: its ease of growth and its continuity of bloom. It is not unusual for the first blossom to appear within six weeks time after planting the seeds and they will continue to appear until killing frosts appear. The range of colors from which they may be selected is really enormous. These include white, yellow, rose pink, pink, scarlet, red and orange.

The culture of zinnias is very simple. They prefer a rich garden soil and will grow best if they are given an application of some good fertilizer about once every two weeks. They glory in the sun and will really grow best in an open field. This does not mean that full sun is absolutely necessary as they will bloom nicely with only a half day's sun.

For quickest results, the plants may be procured, but there is still ample time to start these plants from seeds. Plant the seeds either in rows or broadcast, after they have reached a height of three or four inches, they should be thinned out, leaving at least a foot between the plants.

Shallow cultivation after each rain, or even more often, will help to hold the moisture for the proper growth of the plant. This cultivation will preserve the moisture and give the roots a chance to grow to advantage. It is a good plan to follow, to fertilize these plants each time that they are cultivated. This fertilizer should be worked into the soil for best results.

Within the past few years much work has been done by the plant breeders toward perfecting the zinnia. They have recently introduced what is commonly called dahlia flowered zinnias. These have come by their name because of their similarity to dahlias. The petals are silghtly curved, the flowers very double and practically all of the ugly center has disappeared. They are also much larger than the regular zinnias. These flowers sometimes reach a size of six inches in diameter. To raise some of these extra large flowers, pinch off the early buds without allowing them to come into bloom. The second crop of buds should be partly removed, leaving only about half of them. Just as they are about to come into blossom, give the plant an application of liquid manure or some nitrate of soda.

Thinking about nitrate of soda reminds us that it is one of the finest forcers known. It should be applied sparingly. About one teaspoonful of the soda for each plant is plenty. It is important that the flowers be watered thoroughly after this has been applied. There is grave danger of burning when this fertilizer is used, but if the proper precautions are taken there is not any fertilizer that will give the immediate results that can be obtained from this product.

These annual flowers may be planted with the shrubbery against the wall of out-of-doors living rooms. If this method of planting is followed a better show will be gained by planting several of the plants in groups. To make this even more effective, solid colors may be planted in each little group of plants. As a general rule, the use of these plants in the separate colors will be much more effective than the use of mixed colors.

Another branch of the zinnia family that is becoming better known and more popular, as it makes new acquaintances, is the very dwarf, pompon zinnia. These little fellows are about the size and similar in other ways to the pompon dahlia, and is a really attractive flower. The plants themselves are dwarf in habit of growth, usually growing to a height of eighteen inches. The flowers are very seldom more than one or two inches in diameter.

Another type that has been recently introduced is the quilled zinnia. These are similar to the cactus dahlias. These plants grow to the usual zinnia height, about three feet. These are commonly seen in a number of different colors, including all of the common zinnia colors. Add some color to your out-door living room for the sake of color and variety in your summer living room.

MARIGOLDS.

There is a family that will add color to our living room throughout the summer and fall. The orange, yellow and brown colors are all included in this famous marigold family. These flowers may be started plants themselves may be procured and from seeds planted out of doors now or the planted directly. Any good garden soil will be satisfactory for these old-fashioned flowers and they will stand almost neglect and still grow well. On the other hand, if a little care is given them, they will prosper and fill the room with color.

MARIGOLDS, AFRICAN, DOUBLE AND SINGLE FRENCH.

The velvety browns and mahoganys of some of the French types have no counterpart in any other annual. The oranges and yellows are the richest tones in these hues that the annuals furnish. The tall, huge crinkled globes of the African marigold furnish the brilliant orange, sparkling yellow and paler lemon, in prodigal profusion all summer long.

The mainstay for edging borders for blossoms throughout the late summer and fall is the dwarf French marigold. These little fellows, with their deep tones and their stripings and mottlings of browns and reds, with their ferny foliage spangled with these double rosettes, always make a gay show and bloom incessantly until killing frosts arrive. A type not so well known is the tall French. This variety reaches a height of about three feet, usually grows well even in poor soil. As a matter of fact, for some strange reason, it seems to bloom even more profusely if the soil is not too rich.

Marigolds will flourish in almost any soil, but they must have plenty of sunlight. In rich soil they pause a while to develop a supply of luxuriant foliage before developing their normal wealth of bloom, but once they have made their leaf and stem growth, they devote their entire energy to bloom. Less rich soil is preferred by some gardeners to induce earlier bloom and less rank growth. The tall Africans, with a border of the Dwarf French marigolds will make a brilliant bed of color from late spring until killing frosts.

mysterious absence. His notes of hand for outrageous sums had poured in upon the treasury to the exasperation of the parsimonious duke, and now he came calmly to demand a matter of 20,000 gold florins to enable him to raise, mount, equip, and maintain a body of 8,000 lances with which to succor the Duke of Burgundy in his need. If this was the only purpose for which he had returned home, it would have been much better for Guelders if he had remained permanently absent. Guelders, his father informed him, reared no fatted calves for prodigals.

Count Anthony did not argue with his sire. He knew the futility of reasoning with prejudice. Instead, he sought the chancellor of the duchy and arranged with him for the convening of the estates. He appeared before them two days later, and pointed out the dangers with which Burgundy was confronted, and the dangers which would confront Guelders if Burgundy were defeated. The maintenance of the independence of Guelders was the first and most sacred duty of her rulers, and this independence could be ensured only by stoutly supporting their one great ally and preserving him in his fullest strength to the end that in turn he might preserve them.

To the disgust of his father, who regarded it as so much waste—but dared not say so, lest his words should be reported to the Duke of Burgundy—the money was voted without demur, to be refunded by a special poll tax.

After that Count Anthony set about reestablishing his household, which he had disbanded at the time of his departure from Brussels. He entrusted the details of raising and equipping the necessary force to the Sire Bertrand de la Roche, a gentleman of his confidence and a soldier of experience, and then with a guard of his own, four esquires and two pages, he left Nimeguen to rejoin the Duke of Burgundy at Bruges, whither he had meanwhile returned.

It was now that he adopted, to the horror of the heralds, a fresh personal device; on a field gules, two tulips, or and argent, in saltire—whence he came shortly thereafter to be known, more or less ironically, as the Knight of the Tulip.

His report of what he had accomplished ensured him a warm reception from the duke. To mark his appreciation, Charles desired of him a service which was in itself an honor; that with the duke's mother, the Duchess Isabella, and his young daughter Mary of Burgundy, with Monsieur de Rumbempre and the Count and Countess of Charny, he should repair to Sluys as the duke's representative to receive and welcome his bride, the Lady Margaret of York, on her arrival there from England. And he sought counsel of Count Anthony in other matters, as had been his custom of old, and particularly in the matter of the fresh taxes to be levied on the Netherlands towards the expenses of the coming war. Count Anthony's advice was sound. Remembering how himself he had prevailed in Nimeguen, he counseled the use of similar arguments in Zealand and Friesland. Let it be shown to the estates there how imperative to the maintenance of their privileges was the maintenance of Burgundian power which had ever respected and defended them, and the rest would follow. But the arguments must be presented by the duke in person. It was the personal appeal that would lead to the ready opening of the burgher coffers.

Persuaded, Charles resolved to act upon his advice, so soon as his marriage and the subsequent festivities should have been accomplished. On the morrow, with an escort of 20 lances, every man in a white surcoat bearing the new tulip device, Count Anthony set out for Sluys as the representative of the Duke of Burgundy.

The Princess Margaret, of York, arrived with the state and splendor becoming the sister of a king; but it was as moonshine to sunlight compared with the state and splendor of the Burgundian reception awaiting her, a reception which was to mark the wealth and power of a duke who in both could outrival any living monarch, and to dazzle the world in general and the watchful King of France in particular.

A fleet of 16 vessels under the command of the Lord Admiral, of England, was employed to bring the princess and her escort to the port of Sluys. She was in the immediate care of her royal brother, Lord Scales, and the Bishop of Salisbury, and attended by a troop of knights and gentlemen representing the flower of English nobility of the Yorkist faction and some fourscore ladies of rank, at whose head stood the Duchess of Norfolk, then reputed the most beautiful woman in England.

To receive her on her landing and conduct her to the Castle of Sluys came a noble company in which Count Anthony of Guelders was supported by such illustrious nobles as John of Luxembourg and John of Nassau, the magnificence of whose equipages made her own look provincial and paltry. At her lodging in the castle she was waited upon by the Dowager Duchess and the Lady Mary, of Burgundy, by the Count and Countess of Charny, and a constantly flowing train of nobles and dignitaries, until, finally, on the evening of the day after her arrival, came the duke himself to pay his homage and formally to exchange vows of betrothal. That night from the windows of the Castle of Sluys she saw in the sky to the south the red glow of the huge pyramidal bonfires, each 40 feet high, which in honor of her coming were lighted in Bruges.

For a week she remained there very nobly entertained, and then a train of painted and gilded barges luxuriously equipped conveyed this fair, calm English princess and her suite to Damme, the great fortified port of Bruges in whose basin floated the argosies of all nations, attracted thither by the great commerce which made Bruges the rival of Venice and Genoa. Hither to Damme at 5 o'clock on the morning of Sunday, the third of July, came the duke for the nuptials which were celebrated by the Bishop of Salisbury and the Papal Legate. After the nuptial mass, he rode back with his private escort to the Cour des Princes at Bruges, there to await the state entry of his bride.

She arrived some two hours later at the Gate of Holy Cross, the object and centre of a pageantry the like of which neither her eyes nor those of any of her English followers had ever witnessed or imagined. She came in a horse-litter covered with cloth of gold, the white horses that bore it caparisoned in cloth of gold from which little silver bells were hung, with roses entwined in their flowing white manes. Herself, she was dressed in cloth of silver, a crown of diamonds flashing on her fair head, above which with her own hands she placed the chaplet of roses that was offered to her by a company of nuns at the Gate of Holy Cross. Thence the procession moved towards the heart of that great city of bridges, the Grande Place and the Palace.

At its head went the representatives of the church, a body of prelates and lesser ecclesiastics, in cope and surplice and stole, with crucifix, reliquaries, and effulgent monstrances. Next came the Collace, the members of the Burgomasters' council, in their official robes and chains of office. Followed the members of the ducal household, first the liveries of black and purple, then the higher functionaires in their scarlet pourpoints and long mantles of black velvet. After these came a band of trumpeters, next a troop of archers in gala liveries; then the heralds, poursuivants, the kings-at-arms in their blazoned tabards; and then the representatives of foreign nations, the 20 ambassadors and their households, and the members of each of the 17 trading companies, amongst whom were, conspicuous for their splendor, the Venetians, the Florentines, and the Easterlings.

Immediately ahead of the bride's litter marched a company of English archers of the bodyguard, while on foot, on either side of the litter, walked the 30 knights of the Golden Fleece in their majestic scarlet robes.

After her rode 13 of her maids-of-honor on richly caparisoned, snow-white palfreys, and after these came a line of gilded chariots emblazoned with the arms of England and Burgundy, bearing the remainder of her ladies, the beautiful Duchess of Norfolk in the first of these; and, finally, to close that vast procession, an army of knights and gentlemen all gorgeously arrayed, the trappings of their horses glittering with gold and gems and fringed with silver bells.

Thus, in a blaze of July sunshine and under a sky that was like a dome of polished steel, the Princess Margaret, of York, now Duchess of Burgundy, rode through the streets of Bruges that were all strewn with flowers and boughs, hung with costliest tapestries from Flemish looms, with silks of Persia and with cloth of gold, and bridged by triumphal arches, from which flights of doves were released as she passed under them.

Progress was slow, not only because of the press of people, but also because of the mysteries, or theatrical representations, with which the bride was entertained on the way, and for each of which a halt was called. They performed for her the story of Adam and Eve, the marriage of Cleopatra and King Alexander, Saint George's defense of a beautiful maiden from a dragon, and the like, to her obvious delight and that of her following.

Meanwhile the bridal procession made its gorgeous, sluggish progress through the city, acclaimed by the thousands who lined the streets, crowded the windows, balconies, and even roofs of the buildings. The bruit of these splendors had attracted folk, not merely from the immediately surrounding country, but some, who could afford the means and leisure for travel, from considerable distances. Among these were Mynheer Claessens and his daughter and Philip Danvelt.

* * * *

Johanna had been dejected and pining ever since the abrupt departure of Anthony Egmont from Flushing. From what Philip had told her and what else she had been able to gather, she chose to conclude that for some reason beyond her knowledge he had been taken a prisoner. It was idle for Philip and her father to point out that the details of his departure did not bear this out. He had ridden sword on thigh with the lances and the officer who had waited upon him at the Zeelanderhof, not as a captive, but as a man escorted. At first, she had accepted this, and had been glad to accept it. But as days passed and grew to weeks without any word from him, she returned to her earlier conviction that he was a prisoner. It was impossible for her to believe that he would neglect to communicate with her if he were free to do so.

Her listlessness in those days became a matter of grave concern to her father. To Danvelt, who was a very frequent visitor now, her condition was less obvious. An intensely self-centred man, he was little observant of others, and interested in them only in so far as they ministered to his own needs. If he observed any change at all in Johanna, he would account it a change for the better, for it accorded with his notions of propriety that women should be self-effacing. He had noted in the past a certain presumption in Johanna, which he accounted the one flaw in her character: there was a disposition on her part to express views upon the serious concerns of life, which he regarded as entirely beyond a woman's province.

Her increased demureness, into which he interpreted the outward signs of her sorrow and anxiety, rendered her more desirable in his eyes, and led him in those days to woo her with an insistence which would take no refusal seriously, regarding these refusals as the rather tiresome expressions of an excessive modesty which could bring itself to surrender only after endless onslaughts.

He complained of it to Master Claessens during the last days of June. He represented that the heavy responsibilities devolving upon him by his father's death left him little time for these almost daily excursions into Flushing, and that there was no reason in the world why his nuptials with Johanna should continue to be postponed.

"No reason at all," Claessens stolidly agreed with him, "save Johanna's inclinations. It is not a matter in which a maid may with propriety be hurried."

"Hurried!" echoed Danvelt, and snorted his disgust.

"Be patient, Philip." Claessens knew well the trouble in his daughter's mind. He put his faith in time to efface the memory of the handsome, courtly Egmont who, in an evil hour, had darkened his threshold. Whatever the causes that had so abruptly removed him, Claessens was secretly thankful that he had gone. As things stood, the harm done was quite sufficient. "Johanna is in need of distraction. Life here is dull for a maid."

"The occupations of a wife will afford her precisely the distraction that she needs," said Danvelt, pompous as an oracle.

"Maybe," said Claessens, without conviction. "Meanwhile there is to be a brave show in Bruges for the duke's nuptials. Johanna has never been to Bruges, and I have always promised to take her to see the chapel of the Holy Blood. This might be the occasion for it."

Danvelt demurred. The town would be full of strangers and the inns overcrowded, their charges outrageously increased. Since he had come into his wealth, Danvelt, who had been prodigal enough before, was grown thrifty to the point of parsimony. Johanna, when the matter was proposed to her, agreed with an interest so indifferent that her father felt a pang of disappointment. But in the end they went, and on the morning of the Princess Margaret's wedding they issued betimes from their lodging at the Orb and Sceptre, and took up a position near the Stadhuis, whence to view the procession.

The dazzling, incredible display aroused Johanna from her brooding. The color was whipped into her cheeks and a certain old-time sparkle to her eye, so that her father fondly observing these signs felicitated himself upon the step he had taken. But his felicitations were premature.

The body of English archers, stalwart and gay in their feathered hats and their red brigandines quilted and studded, their long bows slung beside them, had just swept by, and now the horse-litter of the smiling young duchess was coming abreast of them.

Eagerly Johanna craned her neck to obtain a better view of that sweet lady, who sat there enthroned, crowned so appropriately with roses above the sparkling diadem on her brow. And then she was conscious of a tugging at her arm. It was Philip, in a state of boorish excitement.

"Look! Look! Yonder! The first of those!"

He was pointing to the stately line of scarlet-mantled knights of the Golden Fleece, who walked beside the litter, pointing to the very head of it, to one who in that most honorable company held the most honorable place. Following the indications of his out-flung hand, she beheld, to her inexpressible amazement, Anthony Egmont, her Anthony.

Red Justice

six days and the decision of the judge was long and thorough. He said that the boys' crime was particularly dangerous to the state because they were members of the Young Communists, were educated and considered model youths and had failed in their duty. He regarded the offense so severe in this light that he declared it to be counter-revolutionary in its nature and sentenced the young men to death. This incident is interesting by way of pointing out the wide latitude given the judge in defining the offense, for had he declared it larceny he could have imposed only a sentence of two years at a maximum.

In crimes against property the laws are colored by two communist aims: the desire to eliminate the sacredness of private property and to protect the state's holdings. The penalty for theft is measured not by the value of the goods stolen, but in accordance with the circumstances under which they were appropriated. Theft from a private individual, irrespective of the amount involved, carries a maximum penalty of not more than six months. But theft from the government is punished by not less than a sentence of one year in jail. In fraud a similar relation of the penalties appears. Fraud perpetrated on an individual draws only one half the penalty that the same fraud against the government would involve.

The soviets also have a liquor law. The manufacture and sale of all liquor is in the hands of the government. It is unlawful to make or store liquor with the view to selling it or to trade in liquor as a means of livelihood. Conviction of this offense involves a minimum penalty of not less than three years' imprisonment, confiscation of all property and loss of political rights. But the soviets' regard for the laboring man causes them to modify the sentence if the liquor law violator were unemployed at the time he made the sales or was ignorant of the law.

The affinity between liquor laws and an approachable judiciary manifests itself in the new soviet world. The story of Fedossja, a proprietress of a Red speakeasy, her anxious husband and an affable judge is a common incident of the Volstead era, but in Russia the tale has a melancholy Slavic ending.

Fedossja, a woman living in Twer, was accused of selling vodka in violation of soviet liquor statues. Her husband, Iwanov, made a frantic effort to have the case against his wife dropped and arranged through a mutual friend to meet Nicholai Renkin, a judge of a people's court. He entertained the jurist, regaling him with vodka and perijiks. The judge, in an expansive mood, assured the worried husband that the case against his wife was trivial and would come to nothing, although the canny magistrate explained that he would not sit at the trial. The jurist's words of hope cheered Fedossja and Iwanov, and the magistrate, taking advantage of their high spirits, borrowed ten rubles from the husband.

Later, as the day of the trial approached, the judge was again entertained by the frightened pair. More assurances were forthcoming and another loan, this time of 30 rubles ,negotiated. Fedossia, lulled into a secure mood, went to trial without fear. The verdict was a shock. She was sentenced to three years' imprisonment, confiscation of all property and disfranchisement. Her husband charged up to the bench and declared there was an error as another judge had advised him that his wife would be decreed innocent.

The state investigated the activities of Renkin and brought him to trial for the corrupt use of his high office. At the conclusion of his trial the court declared a dishonest judiciary the greatest of social dangers, stated the actions of Judge Renkin unbecoming to a people's servant and sentenced the jurist to five years in prison.

Russia's theories of punishment and operation of penal institutions deny the use of punishment for purposes of pennance or revenge. In no case can it involve physical suffering or degradation of human dignity. The system had for its aims the prevention of further crime and the adaptation of the criminal to the social conditions of a laboring community. This they attempt to effect by subjecting convicted men to corrective labor.

The primary goal of the present penal policy is to replace prisons with educational institutions and deprive them of their mechanical character. Illiterate prisoners are taught to read. Prison labor is put on an equal footing with labor outside the walls. An eight-hour day is in force and a weekly period of 40 hours' unbroken rest is assured all inmates. Prison labor is paid a substantial wage, usually the full trade union rate for the work done. A portion of the earnings of the prisoner during his term is saved for him and given to him when he is discharged. Some of the money is allowed him for the purchase of tobacco and extra food and the remainder is sent to his dependents. If the prisoner has no trade he is taught one and his sentence is reduced in proportion to the swiftness with which he masters his new work. There is no uniform prison garb and all prisoners can smoke when they wish.

Vacations are a feature of the soviet jails. A prisoner not in solitary confinement and in the upper and middle categories so far as behavior is concerned is given a leave of absence of from seven to 14 days a year. Imprisoned peasants are granted three months' summer leave to put in their crops and to harvest.

Soviet justice has discarded all precedent made by other social orders and has only a slight interest in the precedent she herself established yesterday. For all her rules are temporary, so her leaders explain, and are only makeshifts until the day true communism dawns. But many see in the present codes a formalization of the existing order and its crystallization into a quasi-communistic society.

state council secrets," said Savaran. "It has got that far between you then?"

"The queen," said the boy very red, but deliberately, "is madly in love with me, and love is going to beat you after all, Savaran."

"You think so?" said the spare man savagely.

"I know it," said the boy evenly. "She is in love with me, she listens to me. She'll—she'll do anything to win me. Hasn't she already held up your military schemes while she listens to my suggestions for peace and progress?"

"Listens—just that. A mere passing fancy. . . . With you out of the way—" Savaran considered the boy shrewdly—"I think I'll pack you off to the frontier tonight, Rex Sefton."

The boy's set face lit up with a gleam of triumph . . . had he been playing for that? It went blank under the searching eyes, and he said doggedly.

"You know that's impossible, Savaran. She'd know. We'd—I'd be retaken before I was half way to the frontier. She won't let me slip now."

"Maybe," frowned the lean man. "Come in with me, boy. Declare publicly that you desire to win military glory in my campaign. She won't be able to stop you, it's what Arab women expect of their men. And when we're in the field I'll manage a way of escape——"

"I've already told you I'll see you damned before I even pretend to join your filibustering game," cried the boy.

"You young fool!" snarled Savaran. "You know what your end will be. You know her way with reluctant lovers and incompatible husbands—or haven't you seen the royal graveyard?"

Rex Sefton winced but he said evenly: "Before that happens I shall have smashed you, Savaran."

"And am I to be executed in state or merely booted across the frontier?" jeered the eagle faced man.

"Handed over to the British police as a common felon," said the boy, "according to my first plan."

"I always did like you, Rex; a spirit after Savaran's own heart. And you think you can persuade the lovely Ambar to do this?"

"I am going to persuade her," said the boy.

And pay the price?"

"What price?" asked the boy wincing.

"Are you trying to bluff yourself as well as me?" mocked the gypsy adventurer. "But we're neither of us such fools, Rex. The lovely Ambar is infatuated with you—to my annoyance I know it. But she is an Arab as well as a lovesick woman. She will not give something for nothing. If she is to give up the glories of conquest she'll want her price, Rex Sefton—marriage."

"And you think I won't pay that?" said the boy thickly.

"I think you are a white sahib with strong views on marrying—native," said Savaran with fierce amusement as the boy shivered. "Also there is Crystal Lind."

"Damn you for a swine!" shouted the boy, his cold defense breaking down. "You use even that as a weapon!"

"That and anything else that serves Savaran's ends—for such is the conqueror type," said the spare man largely. "I have always counted Crystal Lind my sheet anchor in the business of you and Ambar."

"I guessed that, too," Rex Sefton said so coolly that Savaran shot an anxious glance at him. "Amusing in its way, to see how even Savaran can make a mess of things."

As how?" snarled Savaran, touched on the raw.

"It is you yourself who has made Crystal powerless."

"Explain!" rapped Savaran.

"You have placed me in a hopeless position," said the boy in a flat, dead voice. "Crystal is far away—the queen is here. I am a man, Savaran, and Ambar is lovely. I am down and out, Savaran, through you, and Ambar offers me wealth, power, position and opportunity for revenge. Can the mere memory of a girl I once knew stand against that?"

"Where does all this lead?" Savaran barked.

"I leave that to you," shrugged the boy. "Savaran himself had better straighten up the mess Savaran has created—if he can."

The eagle eyes flamed at the challenge.

"And that's not so hard," he said speculatively. "You can quietly and discreetly—die."

"I think not," said the boy. "You like me. And I don't have to remind Savaran that I once saved his life from an Arab sword."

"You young fox," cried Savaran, "you hold that over me?"

"Certainly," the boy whipped back. "One uses that and any other weapon that serves one's end. I have learned that much at least from the master of the art."

"Rex," Savaran cried, "you have written a line that will figure in history—you have beaten Savaran!"

He scowled in his genially ferocious way.

"And created the very satan of a problem into the bargain," he went on. "If I get you away I must face the fury of a woman in love—that means smash. While if I don't, you surrender to the love of the Kola Ambar—and that also means smash. . . ."

His swift, fierce face was keen with thought for a spell, then he said with his savage whimsicality:

"No other way . . . Savaran must go on his march again. Pack quietly, Rex, we ride for Bemoy tonight."

"But you said I would be stopped," cried the boy, hardly able to supress his elation.

"You—yes! But now Savaran will ride with you, and Savaran can ride through even the armies he himself has trained to close the border. Have no fear, son, Savaran will deliver you safe back to Crystal Lind."

"But it means you leaving all—this," cried the boy in sudden awe.

"What is a kingdom more or less to Savaran," cried the lean man, unable to resist a gesture. "Besides, this is something in my own metier . . . Savaran rescues the man who would put him in prison and throws away a throne to do it."

But he added a rider to that five mornings later as they stood in the Bemoy village at which he had hired carriers to take Rex Sefton to safety—and Crystal Lind.

"Mbotu was right," he said. "It is dangerous to cross the path of a young lion hunting its first meat for its mate. Even Savaran must beware of lovers."

in France, and M. C. Armel, a well-known Athens aviator, who built his own plane and flew to New York to show that Athens planes were as good as the best. The welding was largely done by Lester Pilcher, of Americus.

When it came time to select his pilot, Edward chose that famous Georgia flier, Jimmie Culpepper, who claims the distinction of flying the oldest and youngest passengers ever flown in Georgia. The oldest was an old negro of Hogansville, who claims the ripe age of 115 years. Jimmie's mechanic submitted the statement that the old negro's grandmother was present and wept when she saw him go up because she thought he was too young to fly. The youngest passenger was Jimmie's nephew one-year-old.

Jimmie is only 25 years old but stands six feet two inches in his socks.

So, Edward R. Hodgson, IV, was ready to take up the family tradition where it had been left off when the stage coaches faded away. And he had plenty of help from a quarter which, back in the 40s would have been least expected to lend such aid.

It is not of record whether any feminine member of the fafimly of the first Edward Hodgson helped launch the stage coach line which bore that name. But whether or not such a thing happened, the fact is that when Edward Hodgson, IV began his career as head of an avfation passenger service, a 20th century member of the family was present at the Athens aviation field. And while she didn't dream of doing such a thing when she went out to the field, when she saw the giant plane, in which was seated the confident Mr. Culpepper with 1,500 hours in the air to his credit, Mrs. Morgan McNeel, Jr., of Marietta, formerly Miss Hazel Hodgson, of Athens, became so enthusiastic over aviation that she slid into the passenger seat, and felt the sensation that comes when the plane is lifted into space—without realizing the historic significance of her act: that here she was carrying on the tradition established by her paternal great-grand parent back in the 40s.

Down below her were her two sons, Morgan, aged 4, and Harry, age two and one-half years, whom she is confident will some day become aviators—owners possibly of a great airline—but no prouder perhaps of their means of swift transportation than was their ancestor who operated a stage coach line in Athens back yonder when to dream of flying in the air was a sign of weakness in the head.

Athens has more aviation enthusiasts than any city of its size in the state, perhaps. Two flying schools have been opened here under the supervision of M. C. Armel and Ben T. Epps, the latter Georgia's pioneer amateur aviator and father of the youngest aviator in the country, Ben Epps, Jr., aged 13. Mr. Epps built his first plane many years ago and was an aviator when the industry was in the "nut" stage. He has lived to see the day when his home town has become aviation-wild.

SECKATARY HAWKINS

One Good Turn For Stephen

Down on the old river bank we boys were holding our regular meeting in our little old clubhouse. It was afternoon. We didn't have a chance to hold our meeting in the morning, as we usually do on Saturdays, because I had to go to the courthouse where the boys of the Lucky Thirteen gang had been given back to their mothers and fathers. Jeckerson, the Watertown detective, dropped in to see us.

"Boys," he said, "I just came from the red and green mansion. It's a gloomy old place now, deserted and still. Perhaps you would care to go up there, though. Stephen asked me to tell you that he would like to see you. He said for me to tell all of you to come."

"Fine, Jeckerson," I said; "we will go right away."

"But I want you boys to hold another meeting sometime today," said Jeckerson, with a grin. "You see, I'm to meet old Judge Granbery this afternoon, and we are to get the reward for solving the mystery of the red and green mansion. I told him I'd meet him here in this clubhouse, so we can divide the reward. I expect each one of you boys will get a pretty nice sum of money."

* * * *

We locked up the clubhouse and made our way to the old red and green mansion. No longer did it seem dark and foreboding to me. No, sir! I had gone through the last adventure with Jeckerson, and I had seen all of its secret stairways and doors and tunnels, its great sub-cellar connected with the low stone house—I had robbed that old, terrifying place of all its secrets, and had helped Jeckerson capture the mad professor who had stolen all those boys in the Lucky Thirteen, in order that he would have a boys' choir, which, with the help of Stephen's grandfather, who had invented the purple light that made one invisible, the mad man planned to put upon the stage what he madly termed a choir invisible. The boys he had lured from their homes were now all on their way back to their own homes with their parents. All but one—poor little Stephen, whom we grew to call Stephen the Strange, because so often we had seen him come and go in that invisible light that his grandfather had invented. All but he had gone back to their homes—but now, here lay Stephen, all but exhausted, no one to care for but the old crone who had taken care of the mad professor's household—an old, wrinkled witch who went by the name of Mother Matin.

It was she who answered the bell, as we stood boldly in front of the great door. She seemed to expect us, and to understand that we did not wish to talk. Not a word spoke she, but nodded and beckoned us in, her toothless jaws drawn in a shrunken grin.

"We came to see Stephen," I said. "He sent for us."

"Yes, yes, dear little boys," she cackled in a high pitched voice, and at the same time her eyes filled with tears, although that shrunken grin remained on her face. "I used to have 13 dear little boys, now I have only one—it is Stephen, the gentle one. Come, I will take you to him."

We followed quickly as she led us through that old mansion—how thick the dust lay over everything! Huge, shapeless things stood here and there around the sides of the rooms—crated furniture and things that were ready to go—yes, I remembered now, Jeckerson had told me, that night when we had gone to capture the mad professor, that if we did not succeed that night we would never succeed. For the professor was ready to depart quickly. Everything that I saw now proved that Jeckerson had been right.

* * * *

Stephen lay on a snowy white bed. He was not alone. Good old Doc Waters was sitting at the side of his pillow. Stephen raised a pale face as we entered, and looked at us with a pair of eyes that seemed to sparkle as two coals of fire. Whatever weakness of body he was suffering, surely his soul was unaffected. For the eyes are the windows of the soul.

"Hawkins!" he exclaimed, but his voice was weak. "I knew you'd come—I told Mr. Jeckerson you'd come—if I asked you to."

He lifted one thin hand from out the coverlets. I stepped up and took it between both my own. How cold it was! His hand was like ice.

"You know me, Stephen," I said, as I smiled and looked down at him. "Well, all the boys in my club are just the same. We'd come to see you as often as you'd let us."

Doc Waters stepped up close to the bed and bent down, his hands upon his knees, speaking in low, slow voice:

"Of course you would, Hawkins, but remember, now, we can't let you stay long this time. We are trying to put Stephen on his feet again, and we want him well and strong in a few days. Too much of your gabbing—"

"Oh, let him talk, doctor!" exclaimed Stephen, rising up on one elbow; "I always liked to hear Hawkins talk—"

"Ho-ho!" laughed Doc Waters, cheerfully, at the same time taking Stephen's arm and making him lie down upon his pillow again. "Well, Stephen, you just lie down, and I can promise you that we shall hear a plenty. Hawkins never seems to run out of talk. At least I've never been around when he has, and I've traveled a long mile or two with him in my time. There, there now. You just keep to your pillow and you may hear Hawkins talk all you want."

"That's right, Stephen," I said, with a grin; "Doc Waters knows me pretty well. I never thought I talked too much, but then, you know, a fellow can't tell such things himself. It's the way it sounds to others. And if others say you talk too much, well, it's so."

"I never said you talked too much!" said Doc, stoutly, as he looked at me, both his hands held out before me. "At least—"

"We came to see Stephen," I said, "he sent for us."

"Good old Doc!" I said, with a laugh, and I gave him a shove, as I moved again closer to Stephen's pillow. "You see, Stephen, Doc is the best friend we boys ever had on this old river bank. He gave us our clubhouse and everything that's in it. He's our patron saint—"

"He's been good to me, too," said Stephen, with a faint smile. "Look! See how much stronger I am—"

"Don't you dare to rise up on your elbow again, Stephen!" put in Doc, quickly.

"Ah, well, I won't then!" said Stephen, wearily. "But I'm so glad you boys came—you see, I've been hungry for a sight of some boys—a whole lot of boys—so I'm glad you boys came. I'm used to 'em, you see. Kind o' makes a fellow feel happy to have lots of boys around him, doesn't it?"

"Yes," I said, nodding; "that's why we boys have our fair and square club. Kind o' makes us feel lots more important in this old world—seems like there's more to live for when you got a lot of boys around."

"That's what I used to say to the fellows," said Stephen, nodding; "my Lucky Thirteen—you know. 'Twas Jonas who gave us that name, God bless him. Poor old Jonas. Too bad for most people, and too good for some. I always thought that the good he did to the few made up for the bad he did to the many. Maybe I'm wrong—but gee! I'd like to see Jonas again."

"He tried to sell you out once, Stephen," I said, softly. "You won't forget that, will you? The time he promised Mopey's mob he'd turn you over into their hands for a sum of money?"

"Perhaps," said Stephen, weakly, as he turned his face away from me, and smiled wanly up at the ceiling. "Perhaps I shall, some day—but, Hawkins, it isn't necessary to forget, all that is necessary is to forgive and remember—forgive the bad things a fellow does to you, and remember the good things he has done for you in the past—can't you see that?"

A lump had risen in my throat, and I coughed.

"Yes, Stephen," I said, "I do see that now. But only since I've met you—funny, isn't it, how I never thought of it before I met you? But Jonas is gone, now. His father has taken him back home. And all the others in your Lucky Thirteen, Stephen—they are all happy now."

Stephen nodded toward the ceiling, keeping his eyes averted from me.

"Yes, all gone," he said, sadly. "All but Stephen—poor old me! Well, I prayed for them. I wished them their freedom. I prayed that God would unite them again with their parents—even if it cost me my own happiness—I wanted the rest of the Lucky Thirteen to be happy. Seems like—seems like—seems like God took me up on it, Hawkins. They're all happy now—but me—I've lost out, somehow!"

"But we have our friends, Stephen," I said; "our common friends. God sends us friends. And every boy in this club—look at them now here to stand by you—"

* * * *

He turned his head. We all crowded around his bed. His sparkling eyes, like two livid coals, scanned the faces, while a smile hovered about his face. Poor old Bill Darby, our old baseball captain was in the background. But Stephen's eyes singled him out and settled upon him.

"Bill," he called, weakly, "come here." And Bill came bashfully to the bedside. "You remember, Bill? You were the first one I knew, in your club."

"I sh allnever forget you, Stephen," murmured Bill.

"That night you were sick," said Stephen, softly, "and I came into your garden, behind your house—what beautiful flowers your mother has there. I came in my Grandpa's purple light. I saw your mother at the window—she was looking at the light in her garden—she could not see me in the purple. And I knew there was a sick boy in the house—so I knocked on the door, and she let me in, and I stood by your bed all that night—and next morning when I came back to the mansion, the master whipped me for it, with his blacksnake whip—for staying out till dawn—"

"I've been waiting all these days to thank you," broke in Bill Darby. 'You saved my life, my mother says. She says that purple light has wonderful healing powers—"

"Nonsense," said Stephen, smiling up at Bill; and then he turned his gaze away again, and stared at a spot on the wall. "It was prayer, Bill—don't you know that if you pray hard enough for anything, you will get it?"

"Come, come!" Doc Waters cut in, sharply. "I thing the time is about up, boys. You may come back again to see Stephen tomorrow—Sunday He'll be glad to—"

"Just a moment, Doctor," said Stephen, lifting a hand. "Don't talk harshly to these boys—I'll let them go soon—but don't chase 'em away—listen, Hawkins! You boys won't forget me, will you."

He stared at me with those blazing eyes, and I had to marvel at him. I knew, weak as he was, that his spirit was keeping him strong.

"No," I said, stoutly, "we will see you every day, Stephen—"

"I knew you would," he said, and sank back wearily upon his pillow, his eyes closed. "You wouldn't leave a poor old friend—when that friend hasn't a single soul in the world—not a place to lay my head and call my own—no one to care, you see, for me—no one—in all—this—world—"

His voice trailed off, and that suddenly he had fallen into a sleep, exhausted.

"You see," said Doc Waters, holding out his hands, "that's the way he does. Uses up every ounce of strength he has—and then, back into the trance. Poor kid! You'll have to get out, now, boys. We are trying to get Stephen well again—"

"And after that, what?" I asked. 'When he is well again, what is to become of him, Doc?"

Doc shrugged his shoulders.

"Poor fellow, who knows? He hasn't a kin in the world. Nobody but the poor old housekeeper here, and she is no relation to him. Just a kind old woman. But she has no money. I don't know what's to become of him, Hawkins—but my first duty is to see that he becomes a well boy."

* * * *

We made our way slowly back to the clubhouse. We didn't do much talking. We felt pretty blue about everything. We didn't like the idea of poor little Stephen being all alone in the world, after every one of his gang had found happy homes again, and loving parents to care for them. Here lay Stephen, not a soul to call his kin, not a one to care for him. It isn't any wonder that we went silently back into our little old clubhouse, down on the river bank, and quickly held another meeting. Fair and square was the motto of our clubhouse. And every boy was thinking of that as he took his seat around the long pine table, and our captain, Dick Ferris, called the meeting to order. Fair and square were they all thinking when they shouted for the privilege of making a motion. And fair and square they proved themselves, when, after Bill Darby got the privilege, each and every member of the club voted "aye."

The meeting was interrupted by the appearance of Judge Granberry and Detective Jeckerson. We heard the roar of Jeckerson's automobile as it tore down the river path and halted near the evergreen bushes. We watched the Judge and Jeckerson get out quickly and come up the stone-flagged path to our clubhouse door.

"Boys," said Judge Granberry, proudly, and there was a happy smile on his face, "once more I come to tell you I am proud of my junior police. This whole town is proud of you, Hawkins—"

"Talk to all of 'em, Judge," I broke in, suddenly, "I'm only the seckatary,' you know—"

"Yes, I know," said Judge Granberry, smiling. "I know they all had a hand in the solving of the mystery of the purple light, but you, Hawkins, as the chief of my junior police—I am addressing now, because I have here something of very great importance—I'm speaking of the reward, or rather the half of the reward that you boys earned, by helping Jeckerson solve the mystery. And I am very proud to announce to you that, after adding together what the owners of the mansion offered, and what Jeckerson obtained from the various cities as rewards for finding the lost boys, you have coming to you three thousand five hundred dollars, and here it is!"

* * * *

He laid down on the table the same chamois bag that had contained the money for which Mopey had hoped to get control of Stephen. Our captain started to reach out for it, but I put my hand upon the bag, and said.

"Hold on! Where is Jeckerson's share?"

Jeckerson turned and walked quickly out of the door. But the judge smiled, as he watched him go.

Then, turning to us, he said:

"Boys, Jeckerson is a bit touchy about such things—he doesn't care to have it known, when he does a good turn—and so he's walked out on us. But I feel that we owe Jeckerson a whole lot. He was the one who kept after this business. He spent his own money, going from city to city, to find clues that would lead him to the parents of these lost boys, and he has turned every one of them back to their parents—all except Stephen the Strange. And now he has taken a kindly interest in Stephen—I suspect he feels sorry for him—anyway, he has turned every bit of his reward over to me, to be used in getting Stephen into a good boarding school, and to educate him, until he is a man, so that he will be ready to face this old, rough world on an equal footing with the boys who come from good homes, and have mothers and fathers to guide them."

I nodded my head. And tossing the money bag over to our captain, I said:

"Dick, you tell him."

And our captain rose and looked at the judge without a word. Then every boy around that table rose, and faced the judge. And when our captain saw they were all standing, he said:

"Judge, just before you came in, we boys took a vote on a motion. Bill Darby made the motion, and it was this: That we turn over our reward or whatever we got for helping Jeckerson—that we turn it over to you, Judge, and you are to use it to see that Stephen gets the benefit of it."

He walked slowly over and laid the chamois bag with its jingling contents in the judge's hand. Judge Granberry was too surprised to speak for a moment—he held the bag and stared around at us for a few moments—but Dick rapped the table smartly with his wooden hammer, and sang out:

"This meeting is adjourned. It's time for us kids to be getting home!"

Which we did.

Our Weekly Meeting

"My Home Town" is the title of our contest for this week. We love our home town, we are proud of it, and want to tell others just what a fine place it is. It's worth writing about, too, not because of the fact that it's simply a town of houses, and stores, and movies and all that—but because of the people who live there and have helped to make the town. There may be another town that looks a little like ours, or perhaps has some of the very same street names, but there is no town in the world that is just like our own. There are always interesting little things to be told about our neighbors, or the candy store on the corner. Perhaps there is a new bridge to be opened in the near future, or a newly completed road to be dedicated. Maybe they have built a new schoolhouse in your town, and next fall you'll go to the new school, and sit in new desks, and write on new blackboards. There should be any number of things for you to write about for the contest this week! So get busy and show us just how interested you are in your home town, and what a proud citizen you will make, because, as you grow older, your interest in the things going on in your town will grow and grow, and you may prove to be one of its most valuable citizens some day.

Now we will call our meeting to order and introduce some new members. And every member who is introduced will receive an autographed book of our earlier adventures down on the river bank. Now, please remember, the letters that are printed with some words of introduction preceding them are the winners. Letters printed without any introduction do not win books.

We have always heard it said that our club was the biggest and most active boys' and girls' club in the world! Well, it is without a doubt. We have members in every state in the Union as well as Canada and many foreign countries. How would you like to have a pen pal in Ireland? Yes, we mean the really-for-truly Land of the Shamrocks. Well, we are going to introduce to you now a new member in Dublin. Here he is:

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

I was much surprised when I received the club badge and certificate, and I want to thank you. My Cousin Harry sends up papers every week, and I enjoy your section most of all. All the boys in school wish they were in your club. I would very much like to go to America, and hope to, some day. In the meantime I will keep the club rules and wear the badge.

Yours, fair and square,
LOUIS ROBINSON.
8 College St., Dublin, Ireland.

THIS DAY'S PASSWORD

"The Big Show" was the answer to our last week's password for the Circus Day contest.

Still you say we make them too easy. Well, this week then we will give one that you'll have to use your wits on by yourself.

The teacher in the class said to her pupils: "What day is it?" And there was one little fellow who was always too shy to give an answer to a question in front of the other pupils. His name was Tom. And Tom perhaps knew what day it was, but he was too shy to speak. So the teacher said: "Wait, I'll write it for you." And she wrote on a card and gave it to him and said: "Read, shy Tom."

Tom looked at it and saw this some thing on the card:

READSHYTOM

And he thought of the day, and he looked up and said—the password. He had changed the letters around and had—well, you figure it out for yourself. They've got to come hard for you for a while.

And now we introduce another new member down in Cuba, who thanks all members who wrote to her brother, when his letter appeared some time ago:

Dear Seck:

So many boys and girls who read my brother's letter on the Seckatary Hawkins page have written from Virginia that he has so much mail it will take him some time to send each a card. That is why I am going to write a little to tell them that lives of their Virginians have been written in Cuban history. Most of those who wrote are about my age. I am 14; brother is not yet 12, so you will see why I have come to his rescue.

Sometimes we get Seck Hawkins by radio. This week the static was bad. We get the foreign papers in Havana on Wednesday; that leaves almost no time to try in the contest, but we both try for every contest we know about. We are fond of writing stories, as well as reading them.

Sincerely yours,
F. ISABEL T. ESEBANEZ,
Calle E-16-18,
Almendares, Marianao, Cuba.

Here we introduce an Illinois member who would like to have some of the girls in the club to write to her:

Dear Hawkins:

I am a member of your club and I like it very much. May I please have one of your books? I have tried many times to win one, but I have not been successful. Please tell some of the girl members to write to me. I love to write letters. I go to Horace Mann School in Rock Island, and would like to write to some one who lives way off.

Well, I guess I have been on the air long enough, and had better sign off. But I remain,

Yours, fair and square,
GERALDINE BARTELL.
Rock Island, Ill.

Here we introduce a new member from the Blue Grass State, and we think all of our readers will like the little jingle:

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

I joined your club and I like it very much.
I must tell you in this jingle
How my nerves do twitch and tingle
As I listen to the stories you relate.
My eyes grow big and round
As I thrill to every sound
At our weekly clubhouse meeting and debate.

Yours, fair and square,
WINNIE WIGLESWORTH.
405 Bridge St., Cynthiana, Ky.

We introduce to you next a Georgia boy who lives in a town that's a riddle—I mean the name of the town sounds like a riddle:

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

Here I come all ready and right
To try to win with all my might.
I like your club colors, blue and white,
The prettiest colors within my sight,
I like your motto, fair and square,
And that we all must do our share.
And what we do, we must do with care,
So we must all be fair and square.

Yours, fair and square,
RICHARD FRANKLIN AGNEW.
Enigma, Ga.

Let's introduce next a new member from Michigan, who will probably be cheered up by receiving a postcard from some members, as he is sick and has to stay indoors:

NOTE TO ALL CLUB MEMBERS

If your letter is printed in the "Seckatary's Mail Box," it means that it has received only honorable mention. But if it is picked out for special mention like the above letters, and the Seckatary introduces it with a few words of comment, THEN YOU WILL GET A BOOK.

HOW TO JOIN THE CLUB.

Every boy and girl who reads Seckatary Hawkins is invited to become a member of his famous club. It is a very big club and already has members in every state in the union, as well as Canada, and many foreign countries.

Fill out the membership blank at the bottom of this page. Write plainly. If you want a club badge be sure to enclose a two-cent stamp with your membership blank, and it will be mailed to you within a few days. No matter where you live, you can be a member of the Seckatary Hawkins Club. No matter how old you are—just fill out the membership blank and join.

Dear Seck:

I would like to become a member of your club. I am a boy 13 years old. I am sick and have to stay in the house. I listen to the club meeting every Saturday over WLW. I am very much interested in the adventures down on the river bank. I hope this letter will win a book, but if it does not, I will try again.

Yours, fair and square,
CHRIS. HOUGHTALING.
16657 Prairie Ave., Detroit, Mich

Now comes a new member from the Hoosier State who says mother and daddy read our page, too:

Dear Seck:

I should like to be a member of your club. I read the page every Sunday and so does my father and mother. I like the motto fair and square. I like the colors, blue and white. I am 10 years old and I am in the sixth grade. I should like to win a book, but if I don't I will try again and again until I do, for a quitter never wins and a winner never quits.

Yours, fair and square,
MARCELLA TIEMAN.
4121 Buell Drive, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

And now we adjourn for another week, and I hope all members will try for a prize in our contest this week. Send in your letters and contest work early. And don't forget to listen in and attend our meeting over radio from Station WLW Saturday evening, 5 o'clock, eastern time.

Bye, till next week.

Yours, fair and square,

Seckatary Hawkins

Dear Seck:

I am still trying to win one of your books. I have never been that lucky before, but maybe I will be if I keep on trying. Remember the old saying, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again." Do you think it is worth while? I do.

About a week ago a negro boy came down the road with two small kittens. He stopped at a small stream and threw them in the water. Then he went away and left them to drown.

My sister called me and told me about it. I went to the stream and got them out of the water and gave one to a small friend of mine, the other I kept myself.

I gave it some milk and left it in a room by itself. When I returned to put it to bed it was behind a box.

The following morning I taught it some tricks, such as playing with straws, standing up for milk and playing hide and seek. I am still teaching it new tricks.

I have named it Loomis for Shadow Loomis. I want everyone to write to me and I will answer all letters I receive.

Yours fair and square,
MINNIE SWOFFORD.
24 Campbellton St., Douglasville, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I have never received one of your Seckatary Hawkins books, but I would like to very much. I just came to Atlanta recently to live and I joined your club as soon as possible. I follow you every Sunday in the paper while you are working on this mystery. It is very exciting and I only wish I could be with you. I came from Pennsylvania and use your motto as mine. I am a Girl Scout and find it very useful in my work.

Yours fair and square,
ANN MILLER (12).
5 Ansley Drive, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Hawkins and Club:

I am a Georgia member of your club and I am proud of it. I keep your motto in mind and I am always "fair and square."

I read your page every Sunday and enjoy it very much. I sure am glad the mystery of the "Red and Green Mansion" and the "Pure Light" is solved.

Any time you write I will answer your letter. Fair and square,
GUSSIE HIGGS GRINER.
Nashville, Ga.

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

I knew nothing for Mother's Day, but I can write you anyway. I've never won a book, but I hope this one has better luck.

I like to read, and book I need. I haven't got many, but if you'll give me one or two right now I'll have a plenty. I'm always for you, from toes to hair.

Yours free, fair and square,
ROBT. SHORT STEVENS.
Box 66, Buena Vista, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I have written you many times, but never tried it in a rhyme. I have been a member of your club a very long time.

And I am for it very strong.
I read your letters, stories, too.
And believe them all to be true.
I like your motto, "Fair and Square."
I try my best to do my share.
I lost my club pin, white and blue,
I am always very blue, but true.
I want a book very much,
So please when you get my letter don't touch.
It and put it in the waste basket.
For it would make me feel like I was in a casket.
So please, dear Seck, remember my look.
And send me down a book.

Yours fair and square,
DELIA MAXWELL (11).
Route 3, Cairo, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I suppose you think that I'm a quitter, because I haven't written very often. But I'm not. I have one pen pal, and I would like to have more. One of my friends received a book and she says that it is simply fine.

Fair and square,
ELIZABETH WATTS (14).
Coltewah, Tenn.

Dear Seck:

I am a girl of 12 years old, blue eyes and blonde hair. My birthday is on March 14. Have I a twin? If so please write me.

I had a little rabbit and turned it loose. Its name was Jimmy. I could turn it loose in the house and it would go and hide from me. Yours fair and square.

LUCILE HUGHES.
Route 7, Cumming, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I love to read your papers. I have just finished with your paper and it sure is good.

I love your motto, "Fair and Square." I love your color, blue and white.

I will describe myself. I am a real blonde, 13, five feet four inches high. My birthday is April 4.

Seck, please tell someone to write to me and I will be sure and answer it.

Good-by till next time.

GRACE CAMPBELL.
Route 2, Fairburn, Ga.

Dear Seck:

Hello, Seck, how's tricks? I suppose you thought I would never write, but really I haven't had time. Well, school's over. Are you glad? I'm what you would call sadly glad. Well, I'm promoted to the seventh grade this time.

Your friend,
CHAS. ALLEN, JR.
Mt. Gilead, N. C.

Mother.

There is someone upon this earth,
With whom a rose cannot compare.
This someone is kind and sweet,
And also very rare.

I love this sweet someone,
Like I never loved another.
This someone cares, loves and forgives
Yes, this someone is my mother.

You'll never find a better companion,
A better sweet and loving friend
Than a mother who always has
A helping hand to lend.

You should laugh, sing and play,
And keep your mother from being sad
You should love, honor and obey,
And try not to be bad.

Our mothers are our shepherds,
And we their little sheep.
We should thank God for them
When we lie down to sleep.

Years and years will pass,
And we'll be grown some day,
But even then we should try
Her love and kindness to repay.

Yours truly,
HELENE KANTOR (12).
246 Atlanta Ave., Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Seck:

Here comes a Georgia Cracker knocking for admission to your club for a few minutes. I am a farm boy and help my papa all I can. There are many things that I am learning to do and I try to do them better every day.

We have some mighty good times down here in Georgia. In the spring and summer there are many all-day gatherings, singing, picnics and other things, and oh, my! What a good dinner you can always get. You just ought to be here with us, Seck, and you would have to let out your belt every time you ate dinner.

Yours fair and square,
J. W. LEE.
Route 8, Carrollton, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I am a little boy 6 years old. I go to school and to the field, too. My sister reads about you to me, Seck. I can't print much, you know, for I am in the primer now.

Yours fair and square,
JOHN DAVID BYARS.
Route 4, Adairsville, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I read of your adventures in the daily and Sunday papers, and I enjoy them very much. I am 12 years of age and am in the sixth grade. I have red hair, brown eyes and am about 5 feet tall. I like your motto, "Fair and Square," and I try to live up to it. I also like your club colors. Your best friend is the pass word this week and I certainly do agree with you. Tell all your members to write to me. I will answer all letters I receive.

Yours fair and square,
DOROTHY SCOGGINS.
847 Bradley Ave., Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I am a little boy 10 years old. I go to the Tifton school. I am in the fifth grade. I joined your club last week. I sure was glad to join. I read your letters every Sunday and enjoy them. Sunday week is Mother's Day. Last year I wore a red rose, but this year I will have to wear a white rose, for my mother died in November. I think Mother's Day is the best day of all. Thanks to Miss Ann Jarvis, who originated Mother's Day in 1908.

HAROLD J. EVANS.
Box 25, Tifton, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I have been a member of your club for several years. I have enjoyed it so very much that I am hardly able to express the pleasure I have gotten from reading about your club, although I haven't met with the good fortune of winning your motto, "Fair and Square," and also your colors, blue and white. I just think you have a fine club or we have, rather. You see I think I should call it our club because I belong to it. Yours fair and square,

HAZEL MILAM.
Route 3, Roopville, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I read your adventures on the old river bank every day and enjoy them very much. I am 12 years of age and in the seventh grade. Say, Seck, couldn't some of you slip over and give me a little room? I have never won a book, but I hope to some time. I have several nice pen pals and I would like to have more. Please, someone write to me. I will answer every letter. I remain yours

Fair and square,
HARRIET ANTHONY.
Bishop, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I joined your club in March, and am glad to be a member. One thing that I am certainly proud of is that I was born in the month of December, for that's the month Jesus Christ was born.

Your motto, "Fair and Square," surely is a good one. I feel as if everyone in the club thinks the same thing.

Yours fair and square,
FRANKLIN BLANTON.
Route 4, Talbotton, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I guess you think I have forsaken you, but I have been busy with my correspondence.

Seck, I have made eight pen pals and hope to make more. I have only been a member a few months.

I get a surprise of my life Saturday night. I turned on the radio and the first thing I got was you. Was I glad! I should say I was.

I forgot to tell you, one of my pen pals was my twin. I am glad to know I have a twin.

Well, Seck, I will ring off, always remaining

Fair and square,
MARY McSHANE.

Pros and Cons of the Mode

Discussion Is Still Rife, but the New Styles Are an Accomplished Fact

LAST fall we witnessed an astonishing event. Women's styles stepped out of the fashion magazines and became news, front-page news.

Fashion since the war had been more or less static. For a long time clothes had been designed and worn with practical thoughts in mind. Dressmakers had been presenting new clothes each year, it is true, yet all of them were much the same in general line and style.

Many of the shop windows displayed dresses which were of a disconcerting sameness. The general effect of the window display was the same in the exclusive specialty shop, the department store, and the tiny hole-in-the-wall small shop. The most expensive French models, the originals of which sold for somewhere in the hundreds, found themselves very creditably copied in low price stores for $10.98. The copies were not perfect, of course. Cut was somewhat scant and materials somewhat shoddy, but the effect was much the same.

Clothes were cut on such simple lines that fitting was unnecessary. Smartness was the one requirement and the one requisite for smartness was the boyish figure. Any one built on boyish lines could step into a store and come out with the new clothes on her back. Alteration departments for the most part were idle and buying a wardrobe was a matter that could be sandwiched into any spare moment. One could almost buy a trousseau in a luncheon hour.

And then last fall, the revolt. Whether the battle started with the dressmakers or with the wearers of the gowns is a much discussed question. Certainly a great number of women were ready and eager for a change from the dull sameness of the mode.

Perhaps even more astonishing than the revolt was the fact that it had been so long postponed, that men with the initiative and artistic ability of the Parisian couturieres had been so long content to follow the path of least resistance and to produce clothes which any woman with a sewing machine could throw together in a day. Astonishing, too, that so many women for so long were content to measure up to an abstract ideal of smartness, forgetting entirely that clothes can be pretty and becoming as well as smart.

Be the reason what it may, the revolt was an accomplished fact, and a world which had been forgetting fashions for many years was suddenly fashion conscious.

For a while we were utterly bewildered by the noise and clamor. The new styles were being discussed everywhere. They were extolled. They were derided. Serious thinkers wrote about them in serious vein. Ponderous magazines published articles about them. They were the inspiration for comic strips and philosophical essays. At conference table and tea table alike the talk was sure to arrive sooner or later at fashion.

We heard so much about them that according to our natures, we were either dismayed or amused that the matter of woman's attire could occupy so much thought in a world which had a great many more important things to attend to. What were people thinking of, we wondered, to give so much time and energy to fighting about styles—for one fought for or against the new mode with vehemence and bias—when there was so much of real importance to be done in a world trying hard, in Mr Britling's manner, to "see it through"?

One day we heard a "serious thinker" bemoaning the fact that women would now be forced into a mould after years of enjoyment of independence of thought and action. He told us that now class distinctions would be with us again, that the working woman and her butterfly sister would be marked as with a branding iron. That henceforth he who ran might read. And one gathered from the tone of his remarks that the text would not be such as to make the reader happy.

Two costumes from Molyneux. The evening dress is of parchment colored lace. The black coat and the dress of black and gray-blue mousseline form an ensemble

Another, equally far removed in ordinary times from the study of style, burst into print with an article extolling the new-found beauty and grace of the feminine sex—he saw the whole feminine world returning to the modes and manners of his sainted grandmothers and his romantic soul rejoiced.

Doctors, lecturers and writers, artists, economists, philosophers and psychologists—every one indeed except the babies in arms, found something to say and was given space and time to say it. We were going back to the days of cast-iron corsets, they told us. We were ruining our health and influencing, for the worse of course; the lives and health of our unborn children. We would be healthier because we wouldn't try so hard to be thin. We were deliberately sacrificing the freedom for which other more altruistic and far-sighted women had fought and died. We were losing all we had thought to gain with the vote and the right to work harder than men for less pay.

Even those who most heartily extolled the change in the mode told us that we were returning to the days of the horsehair sofa, the chaperon and the other discomforts and inconveniences of the Mauve Decade. The only difference in their comments was that they uttered them in gratified tones. If they praised us now it was because they had never cared for the "new woman." They had shuddered at the feminine executive. They had cringed whenever asked to light a cigarette for wife or sister. Our champion was the man who still in his Victorian soul thought that any woman worthy of the name should be able to get a man to support her and should have no loftier aim in view.

This observer was prone to forget that, due to the laws of supply and demand, the coralling of a perfect husband is a bit difficult. That due to economic conditions one finds difficulty in finding a good meal ticket, even if that is all one demands in a husband. That the man one wants to marry is often not the most successful financially.

His point of view seemed to be that since he was making a heaven on earth for one little woman, all others should aspire to the same goal. He ignored the fact that even with the best intentions in the world he could only, having decent respect for laws and conventions, be the oak for but one vine to cling to. But his words, however illogical and misguided, were as honey to those of us who liked the new styles, who saw in them a chance for something different in a world which had become stale in our eyes.

Now that the tumult and the shouting has somewhat died down, all of us, the champions and the deriders alike, can take account of stock and apply a little philosophy and common sense to the question of the new clothes. We find that, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding, life itself is not changed, only its exterior appearance. The smartly attired woman today is pretty as well as smart. That is to say she has chosen her clothes to accentuate her good points, not only to fit into an arbitrary mould.

Perhaps we have changed our manners a bit to conform to the styles of a bygone era. We find that a more graceful carriage is essential to display the new gowns to advantage, and more or less unconsciously we have adapted our walk to the longer skirts. But we haven't found it necessary or advisable, or even possible to change our mode of life. If we work we cannot wear the more formal of the afternoon costumes when we drop in somewhere to tea on our way home. But, then, neither do most of the other guests, butterflies though they may be. That costume is left to the hostess who does not need to stir beyond her front door. She may wear skirts almost to her ankles and dripping draperies, but most of her friends arrive in costumes of street length, just a bit nearer the ground than the clothes of last season. Hem lines are even and their costumes, while richer and infinitely more feminine than those of 1928 vintage, are entirely suitable for wear while walking as well as riding.

In the evening the feminine sex presents a united front. We have found that long skirts are becoming. That the long, slender line, broken when necessary in the subtle ways which Paris suggests, is flattering. We have rediscovered feminine charm and we have found in the rediscovery, a most important point, say what you will, that men in their hours of ease like women to be feminine. Here we will admit without argument the exceptions which prove the rule.

We have found the charm of change and contrast. It is possible and desirable to change one's personality somewhat with one's occupation. The woman who attends an important business conference at 11 in the morning and "puts over" a brilliant idea, scintillates in a very different manner at 11 in the evening, what with the softening glamor of moonlight or shaded candles. Such a change of personality is as restful to the woman as it is intriguing to her partner. After a period of femininity she finds that she can attack her duties in a hard world more zestfully on the morrow.

There is a subtle contradiction in the new mode. One wears clothes which distinctly recall the Mauve Decade and one lights a cigarette and somehow there is no anachronism. Only an added flavor, a heightening of interest and excitement, a subtle something as delicious and as heady as old vintage wine.

Your skin can be as Fresh and Young as Spring itself

Let your complexion reflect all the youthfulness of Spring! Here is a new beauty treatment that makes even sallow, dingy skin lovely, coarse pores fine, and stops oily skin. It eliminates acid impurities, cleanses thoroughly, and is mildly astringent.

THE newest discovery in beauty culture is that cremed magnesia beautifies the skin instantly, in the same easy way that milk of magnesia purifies the stomach. This is because skin impurities are acid. Doctors treat acid inside the body with milk of magnesia. And now, dermatologists are getting amazing results in banishing complexion faults with cremed magnesia. All you do is anoint your skin with it, massage and rinse with water. It's as simple as washing your face.

It reduces enlarged pores to the finest, smoothest texture. Being astringent, it drives away the tell-tale signs of age. It rejuvenates the skin so quickly that any woman can look lovely tonight, years younger.

It removes make-up and extracts impurities deep-set in the pores better than soap or cold cream. It changes dull, sallow skin to radiant clearness and fades out freckles better than a bushel of lemons.

Until recently, cremed magnesia was used only by New York doctors' wives and nurses. But now the large druggists everywhere find it hard to keep enough on hand to supply the demand.

To get genuine cremed magnesia, ask for Denton's Facial Magnesia. The regular price is sixty cents and one dollar. If your favorite drug store or toilet goods counter cannot supply you, we will fill your order direct, parcel post prepaid. Just pin a dollar bill to the coupon and mail it today. Remember, every bottle is sold on a money-back guarantee.

To Protect Dry Skin

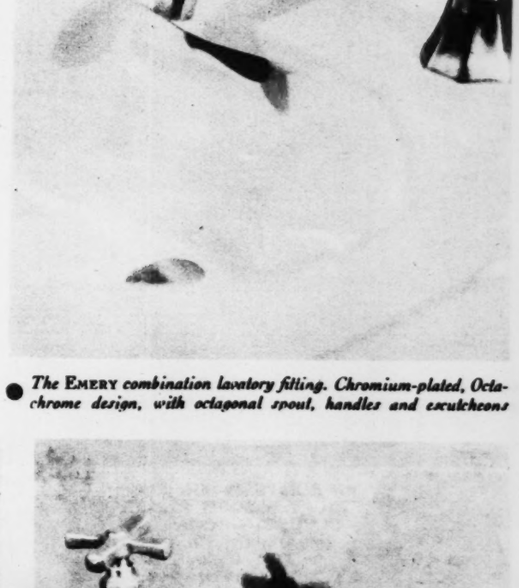

Women who have fine skins often find ordinary soaps too harsh. The skin becomes dry, especially after washing the face. As every woman knows, dry skins easily wrinkle and quickly show signs of age.

To safeguard the complexion against this dangerous dryness, use Denton's Dry Skin Creme. It is mild and soothing to the most delicate skin.

THE FINISHING TOUCH TO BATHROOM BEAUTY AND COMFORT . . .

THE FAUCETS AND FITTINGS

● The EMERY combination lavatory fitting. Chromium-plated, Octachrome design, with octagonal spout, handles and escutcheons

NOBODY CAN live long without water. And nobody can live well without an adequate plumbing system . . . clear pipes, efficient faucets and drains, satisfactory baths and lavatories and sinks and all the rest. Every detail of your home "water works" is a vital detail.

Before you build, how many hours—how many days will you give to the selection of plumbing fixtures and fittings? This is not merely a problem of decoration where line and form and finish do make a difference, not merely a detail of comfort and convenience—but a critical point of service and safety through the years.

For this reason, Kohler craftsmen make enduring pieces, good at every step from first to last. For the vitreous china, a sculptor works many weeks on a single plaster model! Kohler enamel is an armor of lasting luster as hard and smooth as polished glass. The colors are pure, pleasing, uniform. The white is the clear, immaculate white of fine linen. And Kohler metal fittings —faucets, handles, drains,—are a perfect match for the large pieces in beauty, service and safety.

Be sure about your metal fittings!

The plumbing system in the average home is never long idle. Its faucets and drains must work perfectly—for comfort, for cleanliness and for health. Therefore, all Kohler fittings are unusually heavy and sturdy. They have fewer parts. Their operation is simple, positive and quiet. The pieces are made of the finest brass, beautifully finished and heavily plated with chromium, nickel or gold. They are engineered for efficiency—and made for the life of the house.

●All-Kohler plumbing avoids trouble

The home that has less than the best plumbing invites trouble . . . at the very points where weakness may be a danger! Loose parts, open joints, leaky faucets, sluggish drains . . . you can't have these things in your house.

And you can insure yourself against them. All-Kohler installations in bathroom, kitchen and laundry make the most perfect plumbing system a home can have.

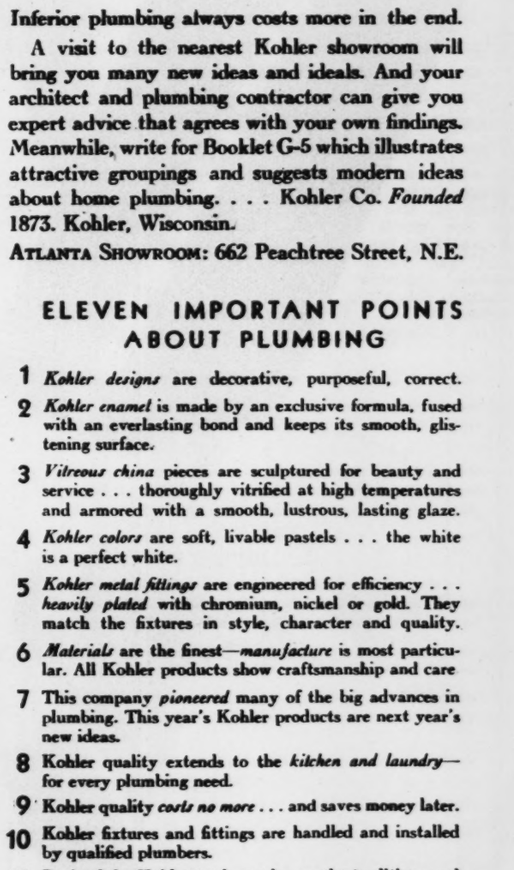

Kohler metal fittings have the name Kohler stamped in each piece—a sign of a wise and practical investment in quality—where quality adds comfort, protects health and pays for itself many times over, in permanent freedom from worry

●All-Kohler plumbing is an actual economy

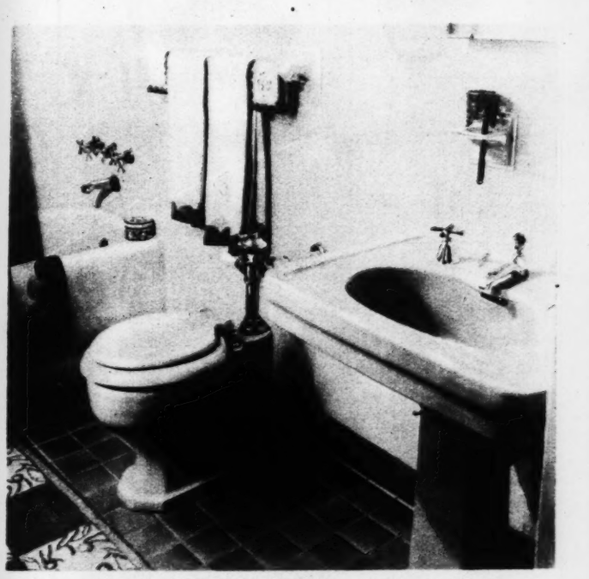

In this, as in other important features of the new home, you will find that character and quality are mainly matters of good taste and good sense. Kohler products are a practical investment for the cottage as well as the mansion. Years of satisfaction depend on your thoroughness now. Inferior plumbing always costs more in the end.

A visit to the nearest Kohler showroom will bring you many new ideas and ideals. And your architect and plumbing contractor can give you expert advice that agrees with your own findings. Meanwhile, write for Booklet G-5 which illustrates attractive groupings and suggests modern ideas about home plumbing. . . . Kohler Co. Founded 1873. Kohler, Wisconsin.

ELEVEN IMPORTANT POINTS ABOUT PLUMBING

1 Kohler designs are decorative, purposeful, correct.

2 Kohler enamel is made by an exclusive formula, fused with an everlasting bond and keeps its smooth, glistening surface.

3 Vitreous china pieces are sculptured for beauty and service . . . thoroughly vitrified at high temperatures and armored with a smooth, lustrous, lasting glaze.

5 Kohler metal fittings are engineered for efficiency . . . heavily plated with chromium, nickel or gold. They match the fixtures in style, character and quality.

6 Materials are the finest—manufacture is most particular. All Kohler products show craftsmanship and care

7 This company pioneered many of the big advances in plumbing. This year's Kohler products are next year's new ideas.

8 Kohler quality extends to the kitchen and laundry—for every plumbing need.

9 Kohler quality costs no more . . . and saves money later.

That Builds* Friendship

●●● Quite naturally H. Mendel & Co. feels considerably gratified at the progress it has made during the past 30 years . . . the building of the business to its present prestige in the wholesale dry goods and ready-to-wear field . . . but above all it cherishes the real friendships that have been established during that time . . . The fact that those who traded with them in 1900 are customers today is a source of genuine satisfaction. ●●●

●●● The success that H. Mendel & Co. has attained is simple to explain. Their every effort has been to render a service so flexible that every contingency could be met. They have set no fast rule that would work a hardship on the trade. They have attempted to be the merchant's friend in hard times as well as good times. ●●●

●●● This company has played no small part in making Atlanta the recognized buying mart for dry goods, notions and ready-to-wear in this section. In fact, putting Atlanta on an equal basis with any city in the country. Southern merchants have learned that they can depend upon Mendel's for quality, style, price and service and that no order is too large and none too small. Merchandise handled by H. THE FOLLY OF FAT

PROVED FOR 22 YEARS—AND TO MANY

CONSIDER the fact that countless people, for many years, have been fighting fat in the modern way. No abnormal exercise or diet to bring harm.

Note the results you see everywhere. Slender figures now prevail. Excess fat is the exception. New youth and beauty, new health and vigor, have come to multitudes in the easy, pleasant, right way.

One great reason is a discovery that science made some years ago. It was found that most fat people had an underactive gland. That gland largely controls nutrition, and its weakness leads to fat.

Modern physicians, since that discovery, have applied a new treatment to obesity. They have fed the lacking substance.

Marmola prescription tablets, prepared by a famous laboratory, contain the factors they employ. So this effective and right method is at everyone's command.

Marmola has been used for 22 years—millions of boxes of it. Users have told others the results until Marmola now stands alone. A book in each box gives the formula and explains the reasons for results. So users know what they are taking and why the good effects appear.

Is it not folly to stay fat when so many have found an easy way to slender, normal figures? And the right way. Go try the method they employed. Watch the results from a box or two of Marmola, then decide for yourself what it means. A right condition means much to you. Go start today.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 a box. Any druggist who is out will gladly order for you.
